DETAILS OF THE PARADE

FURTHER ARRANGEMENTS MADE FOR THE DAYLIGHT BICYCLE CARNIVAL.

The Parade Committee Settles on the Line of March and How the Parade Shall be Divided—Meeting Last Night.

One of the most perplexing questions in connection with Plainfield's great event, the Daylight Bicycle Carnival, which is to be held in this city next Saturday afternoon, was the arranging of the line of march of the bicycle parade so as to cover the city and borough as thoroughly as possible. That and the grouping of the paraders into divisions, besides other important business, was looked after at a meeting of the parade committee held last evening in the Board of Trade rooms.

The great crowd of cyclists that is sure to be present necessitated the dividing of the parade into numerous divisions. The divisions will be by no means small, however, and it was decided that each marshal should have two aides to assist him in keeping the line in order.

The headquarters of Grand Marshal F. L. C. Martin and the press and information bureau will be at the Revere House, corner of Park avenue and West Eighth street. In front of the hotel on Park avenue the head of the procession will form with the different divisions forming on the other streets and falling into line in their order as the rest of the column passes them.

The line of march will be as follows: From the corner of Park avenue and West Eighth street, to Crescent avenue, to Watchung avenue, to East Fifth street, to Richmond street, to LaGrande avenue, to Franklin place, (reviewing stand) to Putnam avenue, to Hillside avenue, to Watchung avenue, to East Seventh street, to West Seventh street, to Plainfield avenue, to West Fifth street, to Park avenue, to North avenue, to Watchung avenue, to East Front street, to West Front street, to Grove street, to Craig place, to Somerset street, to Jackson avenue, to Westervelt avenue, to Fairview avenue, to Linden avenue, to Grove street, to Rockview avenue, to Washington avenue, to West Front street, to Grant avenue, to West Seventh street, to Plainfield avenue, to West Eighth street, to Madison avenue, to West Fifth street, to Park avenue, to East Ninth street, and countermarch on Park avenue to East Sixth street, to Watchung avenue, to Crescent avenue, and disband in the square in front of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

The formation of the divisions with the marshals in command will be as follows:

First Divisions—Ladies and escorts, commanded by Marshal Lewis G. Timpson, will form on Park avenue between Seventh and Eighth streets facing Eighth street.

Second Division—Military cycling clubs, commanded by Marshal C. P. Staubach, captain of the Eighth Regiment Cyclers, N. G. S. N. Y., will form on West Eighth street, facing on Park avenue.

Third Division—Uniformed clubs of New Jersey, with the Crescent Wheelmen having the right of line, commanded by Marshal Charles C. Lister, captain of the Crescent Wheelmen, will form on Park avenue between Eighth and Ninth streets, facing Eighth street.

Fourth Division—Other uniformed clubs, tandems and tricycles, commanded by Marshal Charles B. Morse, will form on Third place, facing on Crescent avenue.

Fifth Division—Uniformed clubs, with the Y. M. C. A. Cyclers having the right of line, commanded Marshal Thomas A. Cuming, captain of the Y. M. C. A. Cyclers, will form on Second place, facing Cresent avenue.

Sixth Division—Junior division, with the Crescent Wheelmen, Juniors, having the right of line, commanded by Marshal F. R. Stevens, will form on First place facing Crescent avenue.

Seventh Division—Plainfield unattached wheelmen, commanded by Marshal N. R. Titsworth, will form on Watchung avenue between Seventh and Ninth streets, facing Seventh street.

Eighth Division—Visiting unattached wheelmen, commanded by Marshal M. F. Elderton, will form on Watchung avenue, between Seventh and Ninth streets, facing Seventh street.

Ninth Division—Business floats, commanded by Marshal J. Hervey Doane, will form on LaGrande avenue facing Crescent avenue.

Tenth Division—Colored cyclists, with the Victor Wheelmen having the right of line, commanded by Captain Israel Jones, will form on East Seventh street facing Crescent avenue.

WILD COAST DOWN THE MOUNTAIN.

A Young Lady Lost Control of Her Bicycle and Was Badly Hurt.

The young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Voorhees Laing, of East Front street, narrowly escaped being instantly killed on Saturday afternoon last. Early in the afternoon she rode her wheel to the mountains and had ridden some distance along Johnston's drive. On the return she passed the Mountain Park Inn on her wheel and started down the road toward Somerset street. When she first struck the decline she had good control of her wheel, but as she went on the speed increased rapidly and she was fast losing control of the bicycle. When less than half-way down the mountain the wheel got the best of her and she was riding at a high rate of speed. She retained her equilibrium until a turn in the road was met. At this time Miss Laing was thrown with great force from the wheel. For a few minutes she was dazed.

Miss Laing was picked up by a passer-by and taken to the end of the drive where she was put in a trolley car and sent home. Dr. Jenkins was called and learned that Miss Laing had sustained severe injury. Her head was badly cut and about her body there were bruises and several smaller cuts. She has been confined to the house ever since and probably will be for some time. That she was not killed is a miracle.

COMPETED WITH THE CHURCH.

Private Individuals Sold Goods for Their Own Profit at a Church Picnic.

Judge Austin, of Mount Bethel, is to try, on Saturday next, a case which brings in Sunday-schools, teachers and others. The facts, as stated, are these: On August 12th, there was a union picnic of the Sunday-schools from the vicinity of Mount Bethel. Some outside parties from North Plainfield, so the Judge says—William Demler, George Mobus and H. Speer, went to the place and erected a stand for the sale of soda water, cream and cake. The proprietors were warned that they had no right to sell there but the stand continued business just the same with its full quota of clerks.

Now an action on contract has been started and Justice Austin and a jury will decide upon the merits of the case on Saturday of this week. This is, perhaps the first case of the kind ever brought into the New Jersey courts, and the result is anxiously looked forward to.

A Former Plainfielder in Trouble.

Andrew W. Seguine, 28 years old, of 212 Montgomery street, Jersey City, was taken from Newark to Jersey City yesterday to answer a charge of passing a forged check. He says he is a horse dealer. The warrant charges that Segune passed a worthless check for $18 on the Merchants' National Bank, of New York, on James Maxon, a liveryman, of Communipaw avenue and Park street, Jersey City. Chief Murphy says Seguine is wanted in New York and other cities on the same charge. Seguine was taken before Justice Potts yesterday morning. Seguine formerly resided in this city.

Republican Headquarters Arranged.

The Republican Executive Committee met last evening and completed arrangements for the banner raising which takes place Thursday evening. J. F. MacDonald stated that J. Augustus Brunson had donated the use of several rooms in the old Y. M. C. A. building and they would be occupied by the executive committee during the campaign. The Republican headquarters will from today be open continuously until after election. The Plainfield Cornet Band will furnish music at the banner raising on Thursday evening.

A Little One's Death.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rowley, of the borough, have the sympathy of a large circle of friends and acquaintances in the loss of their only child, a six-months-old daughter, who died at 4:20 o'clock yesterday afternoon, after a brief illness from convulsions. The little one had been taken to Victor, N. Y., in the hope of benefiting its health, but the child rapidly grew worse, and it was decided to bring it home.

Received a Lecture and Let Go.

Peter Benford, son of Maggie Benford, of Paradise Alley, who was arrested Saturday charged with stealing buttons from J. T. Vail's office on North avenue, was arraigned before Justice Newcorn yesterday. After the Judge had given the boy a good reprimand, he discharged him with a warning, that the next time he would receive the full penalty.

Banner Raising Thursday Night.

The McKinley and Hobart banner will be raised on Thurday evening, by the Republican asscciation of this city. Good speakers have been secured and the event promise of being a notable one.

WALLOPED WITH A CLUB.

A DRUNKEN GERMAN INHUMANLY BEATS A DEFENSELESS EQUINE.

Had Some Fancied Grieveance Against the Animal and Before the Law Interfered he had Unmercifully Abused it.

On complaint of Chief Marshal Wilson, Charles Keller was arranged before Borough Magistrate Crosley, at 8:30 o'clock last evening in the borough court room, charged with violating the second and eighth sections of the borough peace and moral ordinance, by being drunk and disorderly at Chatham and Warren streets, yesterday afternoon. He was adjudged guilty of the charge and Judge Crosley imposed a fine of $10 or ten days. The prisoner, a German, had not the money to pay his fine, so he was locked up for the night, his employer, M. S. Buckley, of Putnam and Kensington avenues, promised to pay his fine this morning, provided Keller would promise not to bother him in the future.

Immediately upon completion of this case, William N. Pangborn, State agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, swore out another complaint, charging Keller with inhuman treatment to a horse. He had been sent to the blacksmith shop with Mr. Buckley's four-year old colt during the forenoon but instead of going on his errand had driven about town and got on a cargo of intoxicants. State Agent Pangborn was on Manning avenue when some boys came running up and notified him that a man was beating his horse most unmercifully on Warren street near Chatham. Hastening to the spot he found Chief Wilson and Marshal Hanson in charge of both the rig and man. The horse had been most brutally clubbed and abused, and nearly all the harness, including bridle, had been torn off and thrown promiscuously about on the ground. The animal was injured to such an extent that it was stabled at Richard A. Boyce's and a veterinary surgeon summoned.

INDORSED BRYAN AND SEWALL.

Union County Democratic Committee Organized.

The Union county Democratic committee held a meeting Friday evening and organized for the campaign. The committee voted to indorse Bryan and Sewall, and decided to issue a call for primaries for Friday evening, September 4th.

The organization was effected by the election of these officers: John L. Crowell of Rahway, chairman; T. C. Lathrop of Elizabeth, secretary, and Ira J. Hall of Elizabeth, treasurer.

Didn't Even Know His Name.

Chief Marshal Wilson arrested an old man on the upper part of Somerset street late last night, who was so intoxicated that he could not tell his own name. The man had to be brought to the lockup in a trolley car. This morning the man's condition was not improved and it was impossible to have a hearing. The man will probably be sent to Somerville to recuperate.

Danger for Pedestrians.

The Daily Press is urged to again to speak of the wretched and dangerous condition of the walk on Somerset street near Summit avenue. Yesterday a child nearly sustained a serious injury while passing at that point. The matter has been considered in the Borough Council, but, as yet, nothing has been done. If the matter is not attended to, the borough may have a lawsuit on their hands.

Central Officials Here.

The Central railroad directors came to Plainfield yesterday in the Star and thoroughly inspected the old freight house. Plans for moving it were discussed and the building will probably be moved before long. There is some talk of placing it the other side of Grant avenue, but not where it will be objectionable to the residents.

Cut Her Face Badly.

A colored woman named Kate, who is employed at the home of Wm. Van-Deventer, of East Fifth street, as servant, slipped and fell down the cellar stairs last evening. Her face was badly cut. Dr. Jenkins attended her. She was able to be out again this morning.

An Additional Mail Carrier.

Substitute Letter-carrier Charles Glaentzer went on duty this morning as a regular carrier. He and Carrier Ed. Hann will have charge of the business portion of the city and thus a larger territory will be covered, and all the business men will receive the 5:30 evening mail.

Felt Mills Start Up.

The Essex Felting Mills in Clark Township, near Rahway, has resumed operations after a shutdown of several days.

WAS IT PREMEDITATION?

CLAWSON SAID TO HAVE THREATENED HODGETT'S LIFE BEFORE.

The Murdered Man Once Horsewhipped Clawson's Brother and There Was Bitter Enmity—Funeral Observed Yesterday.

Bedminster township has not recovered from the stir occasioned by the murder of Harry Hodgett Saturday morning. There is rumor current among the farmers of that district which, if proven, will make the case go hard with Elmer Clawson, who at present stands accused of the murder. On good authority, it is stated by the neighbors that Elmer Clawson told his father, the night before the tragedy, that he intended to shoot Hodgett's in the morning. His father told him not to do it as it would not do any good and he would have to swing for it.

Further details of the cause of the quarrel between Hodgett and Clawson have been made public.

It seems that Clawson's older brother, Charles, was also employed by Hodgett on his farm at one time, but Charles did not have the best reputation and is said to have stolen some money from his employer. Hodgett, it is said, was very angry at the time and horsewhipped him severely for it. From that time the Clawsons' had shown considerable enimity toward Mr. Hodgett.

The Somerset county authorities have now place Charles Clawson under arrest as a suspicious character.

The funeral of Harry Hodgett was held from his late residence near Pluckamin, yesterday afternoon, and was very largely attended. Mr. Hodgett had always been well thought of in the community, and his friends were numerous. A great number were also attracted to the services out of curiosity.

Mr. Hodgett leaves a wife and three children in almost destitute circumstances, for his small savings from the farm had been used to bring his family from Ehgland about a month ago.

FUNERAL OF MISS ANDERSON.

Last Sad Rites Enacted at St. Joseph's Church This Morning.

The last sad rites following the death of Miss Marion Louise Anderson, the sixteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Anderson, who entered into rest on Saturday, August 29th, after a lingering illness from consumption, took place from St. Joseph's church this morning at 10 o'clock.

The church, which had been beautifully decorated with flowers, trailing vines, etc., gave evidence of the high esteem in which the young woman was held by her many friends.

Solemn high mass was said by Father Pere Septier, of the Order of Mercy, of Brooklyn, assisted by Rev. Father Miller, pastor of St. Joseph's church, and a visiting priest. The body reposed in a beautiful white casket, covered with flowers. Sweet and appropriate music was rendered by Organist A Lansing, of St. Columbus church, New York, and Mrs. McComb, of New York, was the soprano, assisted by the church choir. The pall bearers were Edouard S. Loizeaux, Will S. Loizeaux, William De LaRocue Anderson, Robert W. K. Anderson, Thomas H. Taylor, Jr., and Irving Wayne Clark. The body was taken to Greenwood for interment.

SANITARY COMPANY ORGANIZED.

Capitalists Who Are Anxious to Erect a Garbage Disposal Plant.

The promoters of a sanitary system for the disposal of garbage met last evening and organized the Plainfield Sanitary Company. The following persons were chosen a board of directors: J. W. Murray, H. G. Runkle, J. T. Fritts, L. Wm. Serrell, D. C. Ivins, Andrew Lutkins and James Clark. The following officers were elected: President, John W. Murray; vice-president, J. T. Fritts; secretary and treasurer, L. Wm. Serrell. J. T. Fritts, D. C. Ivins and L. Wm. Serrell compose the executive committee, with J. W. Murray as ex-officio.

Another Hen Roost Robbed.

James Kane, of West Third street, has been corraling a brood of fine young game fowls and they were just "getting ripe" for winter business. But on Saturday night someone, as yet unknown, looted his hennery and carried off an even dozen of his choicest birds. James thinks he would be able to identify his fowls if he could get a glimpse of them. There seems to be a propensity at present hereabouts for robbing hen roosts, and the much-admired game breed is suffering from the unexpected onslaught.

W. H. Williams, of Madison avenue, spent Sunday with his wife at Monro, N. Y., where she is visiting her mother.

OF THE PASSING SHOW.

Vaudeville Performers Who Found This City Too Slow

GILLIGAN AND SIMPSON,
Sketch Artists and Comedians,
Permanent address, CLIPPER OFFICE, N. Y.

Such was the card that two young men presented to an acquaintance in this city in a burst of confidence. They were evidently on the ragged edge of the world, and found that the life of the sketch artist and comedian is not a smooth one. There must have been something radically wrong with their methods for they didn't make a howling success at it or else such characters are not in demand. At any rate their venture was not, for some reason, a grand success and they jumped at the first thing that gave any signs of changing the hollow expression on their pocket books. The offer came from the Citizens' Mutual Insurance Company, of Atlantic City, and the Thespians were to act as agents.

About a month ago this same Citizens Mutual Insurance Company established a branch office in this city and rooms were secured over F. W. Dunn's grocery store at the corner of Park and North avenues. Mr. Phelan, of Atlantic City, was placed in charge and Gilligan and Simpson were sent out as his agents. Now the establishment of the Plainfield branch and the connection of Gilligan and Simpson with the company happened at about the same time, so Plainfield was their first field for operations. Although the saying that "all the world's a stage" may be very true, the would-be comedians didn't care for that kind.

Mr. Phelan met them about a week previous to their coming here and, as is the habit with some young men, they swore eternal fidelity to the cause. The work was hard and not of the style to please their artistic tastes. Perhaps you have seen those young men of theatrical appearance with hair that would have made a fortune for them on a football field, one nearly six feet in height and the other a trifle short. They usually wore golf caps. They didn't like the job and, disgusted with the work, they revealed their true identity to a few sympathizing listners.

Like other young men, their love had dwindled down to a very small amount until yesterday afternoon they disappeared. They reported, as usual, at noon, but they went, silently and without warning.

They left a note, it was pathetic in its shortness. It told Manager Phelan that they were sick and tired of Plainfield. It is supposed that Plainfield was too slow for their enlightened minds, and that they had gone home to Philadelphia. Besides the note, they left an unpaid board bill at McVey's hotel and restaurant. Their accounts with the company have thus far been alright, but it is said that they borrowed some money, which has not yet been paid.

Mr. Phelan has written to Gilligan's father, who holds a responsible position in Wanamaker's Philadelphia store, telling the story. There is one sorrowful fact in connection with them and that is they never exhibited their talent here.

SMALLEY MULCTED FOR $30.

Must Pay for Damages Caused by Running Into Mr. McClintock.

The case of McClintock against Smalley for $50 damages was tried before Justice Newcorn and a six-men jury yesterday afternoon in the city court room. It will be remembered that recently Mr. McClintock, while riding his wheel one evening had a collision with Jed Smalley, who was driving. The wheel was damaged and Mr. McClintock claimed $50 from Mr. Smalley. The latter refused to settle, claiming that the accident was not his fault. The plaintiff then secured Lawyer W. A. Coddington and brought suit for $50 in Justice Newcorn's court. Mr Smalley was represented by Lawyer Hetfield, who made no defense at the trial. The jury was only out a short time when they returned with a verdict of $30 and costs for the plaintiff. The defendant immediately appealed the case and the end is not yet. The following persons composed the jury: H. W. Marshall, H. H. Hoffman, D. S. Dunavan, C. M. Fine, G. H. Rockfellow and W. R. Mattox.

Honeyman Tourists Home.

The Honeyman European touring party arrived in New York last night at 7:30 o'clock. The Plainfield members arrived home at 10:30. They were, besides A. V. D. Honeyman, M. F. Estil, Raymond A. and Harry A. Raymond.

Volunteers Are Coming.

The New York Exempt Volunteer Firemen's Association has received the invitation of the Plainfield firemen and accepted it. The note of accept ance has been received.

WRITES A BITTER REPLY

L. W. SERRELL CRITICISES EVERYBODY IN GENERAL.

Intimates That He is the Victim of an Alliance That Wants to Put Him in an Embarrassing Position Before the Public

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I have only just seen the article in your paper of Tuesday relative to my sewer. I had supposed the remarks of some friends applied to a harmless notice in the "News." As your statements are incorrect, if not libelous in many particulars, and evidently seek also to bring the Plainfield Board of Health into disrepute, the public is entitled to the facts.

You say the "inspectors find a new sewer." The sewer was put down in 1875 and altered in 1885; and the connections have not been changed since the houses referred to were built, and the sewer cannot have been a means of pollution or it would not have taken eleven years and a lot of red liquid to find out where it emptied, which is within twenty feet of a public highway.

If these active Health Inspectors had acted like men and come to me instead of trespassing on my premises and troubling a tenant in their efforts to "find the offenders," as you allege, I would have shown them all about the sewer and its connections, and I emphatically deny that there is any pollution of Green Brook by said sewer.

There has been no neglect of duty on the part of the Plainfield Board of Health. They have known all about my sewer and have examined it while seeking means for abating the horrible nuisance that has existed for several years, of the vile dump for all kinds of refuse matter in the Harberger meadow directly opposite my place, and it is believed that the efforts on my part to suppress this public nuisance have led to the outcry against my sewer.

It is not always remembered that when I purchased my place in 1865 the drainage of about half a mile square ran across the same and the sewer was put in to carry the water underground instead of upon the surface. The surface water from Front street and also from the railway depression at Plainfield avenue, runs off through my sewer. The city is thus benefited by what has cost me nearly two thousand dollars, and the city has never been asked for one cent of compensation. Besides this I have cleaned out Green brook between Grant avenue and Giraud avenue at my own expense on several occasions.

From other sources I learn that officials of the borough have publicly contended that water closets were connected to my sewer, which is absolutely untrue. There is nothing going into such sewer that is more objectionable than the washings from the public streets during a rain, and even for these I have provided four dirt catchers to lessen the solid materials carried into Green brook.

So far as the spasmodic efforts of the North Plainfield Board of Health are concerned, they have had cheap notoriety by fault finding in the public papers, and the entire borough, so far as I can find, has not spent as much in cleaning or improving Green brook as I have spent myself.

From the foregoing the public can judge whether or not the remarks in your paper have been instigated by a desire to benefit the public or by some less worthy motive. Yours truly,

Lemuel W. Serrell.

CAPTURED A GLOBE TROTTER.

He Was Well Equipped and Had Sandwiches to Burn.

A professional tramp, with a complete outfit, was arrested on Watchung avenue this morning by Roundsman Frederickson, when the latter was covering the outskirts of the town on his wheel. The tramp was apparently equipped with everything except cash, for he evidently had not been in a free silver region. He had provisions to "burn," a familiar saying of the boys, and Chief Grant declared that his stock of sandwiches would last an ordinary family a week.

"Dusty Rhodes" or "Weary Waggles," which ever he was, did not object to the encounter, and trotted down to the lockup in a very humble manner. He will await the return of the City Judge in the cell, and if that city official should not turn up today when he will be brought before His Honor, the Mayor.

Conduits for Telephone Wires.

The long-talked-of telephone conduits in New Jersey have been commenced and Orange is leading the way in an inauguration of a system in this section that will be watched with interest. Each cable to be laid underground consists of 209 wires, inclosed in a wooden tube. The probable cost is estimated at $100,000.

At the middle of the bridge the party will be met by a platoon of Brooklyn mounted police and the New York squad will be dismissed. At the bridge plaza the viceroy and his escort will be met by Mayor Wurster and his cabinet, and thence will proceed to the navy yard, where the ceremony will be of the simplest nature. From the navy yard the party will proceed to Prospect park, and after a drive through the park will go to the Union League club house, where the reception will be held. In addition to the members of the club, the city and county officials and various gentlemen have been invited to participate in the reception.

EUROPEAN ROYALTY.

The Marquise de Mores has received offers from American explorers to go in search of her husband's body, but has declined them.

All of Queen Victoria's daughters were taught to swim when very young. The daughters of the prince of Wales could swim before they could read.

Queen Victoria is said to be "very partial" to kippered herring and to ascribe her good health to them. She has not eaten curry for a long time.

A costly bridal trousseau was that of Princess Henriette of Belgium, who was recently wedded to the Due de Vendome. It filled 170 trunks, and weighed 11 tons.

Milan's monument to King Victor Emmanuel was unveiled on June 24, the 37th anniversary of the battle of San Martino, where, for the only time, King Victor commanded alone in person.

The duchess of Cleveland, mother of Lord Rosebery, who recently celebrated her 77th birthday, is an ardent and constant traveler. She has only lately returned to London from the Cape of Good Hope and the Transvaal.

King Humbert, in the name of himself and of Queen Margherita, and of the princes of the royal family has given to the government for the families of the dead and wounded soldiers in Africa the sum of 4,000,000 francs. This sum is to be distributed without distinction between the Italian and native soldiers who fought side by side against the Abyssinians.

Mlle. Couedon, the young woman who professed to be the mouthpiece of the Angel Gabriel, has recovered before a Paris jury 110 francs damages from a newspaper which not only held her up to ridicule, but impeached her morality. She had claimed 25,000 francs, but the tribunal was of opinion apparently that nothing could be said that would injure her to so large an extent as that.

BRIGHT THOUGHTS.

"The doctor has forbidden me to drink any more champagne." "Probably until after you have paid his bill."—Fliegende Blaetter.

Explained.—Mrs. Benham—"I don't see how you can look me in the face!" Benham—"A man can get used to anything."—Truth.

Breaking It to Him Gently.—"Is Miss Cabolts in?" inquired the caller. "That depinds on you. Are yez Misther Jones?" said Bridget. "Yes." "She's gon' out."—Harper's Bazar.

"Kitty, don't you think men are awfully smart to understand politics as they do?" "Why men aren't smart at all. I never saw one yet who knew what 'cut bias' meant."—Chicago Record.

A Child of Fortune.—He—"I came within an ace of running over a lady this morning when I was on my wheel." "That was lucky." "Wasn't it? It was only the other day that I had it freshly enameled."—Life.

RIFLE MATCHES AT SEA GIRT.

Many Crack Shots of the Country Already Present and Others Are Expected.

Sea Girt, N. J., Sept. 1.—Many of the crack rifle shots of the country are here to compete in the matches held under the direction of the New Jersey State Rifle association. Scores more are expected to-day, including militiamen from Maine and some from New York. The range is as perfect as human skill can make, and is considered by those here from the various states to be the best in the country, not excepting the famous range at Savannah, which Georgians think cannot be surpassed. The District of Columbia has sixty men on the grounds, including a team from the engineer corps, Companies A and B of the Second regiment, First and Second regiments and the Brigade and Troop A. Pennsylvania sent twenty men and New Jersey sent over a hundred. They were picked from the various regiments and are likely to be heard from before the end of the week. Captain Williamson of Georgia brought north with him last week seventeen of the best sharpshooters in the state. They are conspicuous on the grounds by their steel gray uniforms with red trimmings.

A Place for the Boys.

What can a boy do, and where can a boy stay,
If he is always told to get out of the way?
He cannot sit here, and he must not stand there,
The cushions that cover the fine rocking chair
Were put there, of course, to be seen and admired.
A boy has no business to ever be tired.
The beautiful roses and flowers that bloom
On the floor of the darkened and delicate room
Are not made to walk on—at least, not by boys;
The house is no place, anyway, for their noise.

A place for the boys, dear mother, I pray,
As cares settle down round our short earthly way,
Don't let us forget, by our kind, loving deeds,
To show we remember their pleasures and needs;
Though our souls may be vexed with problems of life,
And worn wtih besetments and toiling and strife,
Our hearts will keep younger—your tired heart and mine—
If we give them a place in their innermost shrine;
And to life's latest hours t'will be one of our joys
That we keep a small corner—a place for the boys.
—Boston Evening Transcript.

Thinking of You.

I sat by my window till late last night,
And looked o'er the roofs and spires;
While the sky glowed red from the city's light
As a thousand funeral pyres.
I heard not the sound of the echoing street,
Nor the sigh of the breezes that blew:
My mind went back to the past, my sweet,
And I sat there thinking of you.

I went o'er the changes my life has known
Since you came in my life that day;
And I asked myself how I lived on alone,
Nor faltered and fell by the way.
I longed for your eyes I had loved and kissed
In the dear old days that we knew;
And I longed for your hands through the darkness and mist—
As I sat there thinking of you.

Our love with the years was blissfully twined—
Till death drew nigh from the silent land;
Then the sun shone long as an eye that is blind;
The world was cold as a murdered hand.
But a moment my love triumphed over it all,
And out 'neath the stars and the dew
You came in the spirit and answered my call,
As I sat here thinking of you.
—Will T. Hale, in St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Reassured.

They told us that "new women" had deposed the summer girls:
That learning had supplanted gentle grace;
That we'd miss the merry laughter; that the lightly waving curls
No more would make a halo 'round each face.
That Romeos and Benedicks would go quite out of style
Since femininity applied for fame;
Yet June time blithely greets us, and the orange blossoms smile,
And the wedding bells are ringing just the same.

No longer do we contemplate her wisdom with dismay,
And hear her polysyllables and sigh;
Our gloomy apprehensions are as lightly rolled away
As the clouds that hung across an April sky.
For we know that e'en ambition, with its greed and with its guile,
Life's tender moods can never wholly claim,
Since June time blithely greets us and the orange blossoms smile,
And the wedding bells are ringing just the same.
—Washington Star.

My Hope.

Seest thou yon lonely, silent tomb,
Where flowers bloom and children play?
I see, but ah, I have my hope
Not there, but far, far, far away!

Seest thou yon cloud of azure hue
On heaven's fair bosom sport and play?
I see, but ah, I have my hope
Not there, but far, far, far away!

Seest thou yon dome of silent sky,
Where sparkle stars of silver ray?
I see, but ah, I have my hope
Not there, but far, far, far away!

Nor mossy tomb, nor cloud, nor star
My soul from Higher Love can stay,
For while God lives I have my hope
Not here, but far, far, far away!
—From the Venezuelan.

The Better Part.

Worldly gear is yours,
Its pleasures I resign;
Heavenly joy's my share,
With Mary's hands in mine.

Threadbare is my coat—
Its empty pockets flout me;
Still do I rejoice,
With Mary's arms about me.

The man by men forgot
Their notice never misses;
He finds a sweet reward
In bonny Mary's kisses.

You from all your gold
Grim Death shall shortly sever;
Mary's love is mine
Forever and forever!
—Frank Putnam, in Chicago Times-Herald.

The River.

Down through the fields, by the poplars and birches,
Into the towns past the houses and churches,
On through the night while the curfew is tolling,
The river goes bubbling and foaming and rolling
Under the bridges and over the stones,
Winding through swampland that nobody owns,
Spraying, and splashing, and murmuring free—
Onward it speeds from the hills to the sea!
—Harper's Round Table.

The Optimist.

I'm as happy as a lark in May.
What is it makes me so?
I've asked my love to be my wife,
And she has answered "No."

Then why should I be jubilant?
Methinks I hear you say.
Still I'm as happy as a lark
That sings its song in May.

For, when a maiden says she won't,
You know she means she will.
Therefore, though I have been refused,
She is my darling still.

THE TURKISH RIOTS

Alleged Armenian Anarchists Accused by the Government.

OUTCOME OF A PRE-ARRANGED PLOT

Turkish Officials Declare That the Outbreak Was Not Confined to the Ottoman Bank — Women Blown to Pieces and Men Beheaded.

Washington, Sept. 1.—The Turkish legation has received from the sublime porte the following telegram: "The central committee of Armenian revolutionists of Constantinople organized on a vast scale a programme of disorder and criminal acts. Separate groups of the revolutionists began their misdeeds at the same hour, but at different points of the capital. Besides revolvers and daggers they used bombs of dynamite. About fifty of these men, entering separately into the Imperial Ottoman bank, began by killing the guards and policeman, throwing their heads in the street. Availing themselves of the general confusion that resulted they shut the doors of the bank and fired and threw bombs from the windows on the passers-by. Four Turkish ladies were cut to pieces by one explosion and two French clerks of the bank wounded and would have been killed if Turkish soldiers had not come to their rescue. At the same moment the ham of Djelal Bey, situated at Stamboul, was taken possession of by other revolutionists, who threw a rain of bombs on those who happened to be in the streets near by. At Haskeni the military was attacked and one officer and many soldiers were killed. At the Psowatia quarter another band of Armenian anarchists took possession of the public school and began there, too, to throw bombs in all directions, killing many innocent victims. In many parts of the capital, and even in the Armenian church of Perd, a great number of dynamite bombs were discovered. The Armenians, faithful to the imperial throne, are indignant, and their patriarch excommunicated in the name of Jesus Christ all the criminals who put in jeopardy the life of innocent men and women. The patriarch begged the sublime porte to communicate to the press his decision against the revolutionists in order to stigmatize before the civilized world their crimes and horrors. A special commission has been instituted to judge the revolutionists caught in arms as well as all Musselmans who have been arrested under the charge of retaliation. The commission is composed of eight Christians and Musselmans under the presidency of Djelal Bey, member of the high court of Turkey."

The Cruiser Cincinnati To Proceed in October to the Asiatic Station.

Washington, Sept. 1.—The cruiser Cincinnati has been ordered to Turkey. This does not affect the cruise of the Bancroft, that vessel being destined exclusively for duty as guardship to the American legation at Constantinople, while the Cincinnati and other vessels of the squadron are to remain in Turkish waters outside the Dardanelles unless circumstances arise to call for reinforcements and a display of naval force. It is explained at the navy department that the orders to the Cincinnati have been in contemplation for some time and there is no particular significance in their publication at the present juncture. It is also said that it is the intention of the department to bring the Marblehead home as soon as she can be spared from the Mediterranean, as the time of a great many men on the station has expired, and it is hoped to gather them all on the Marblehead for the homeward cruise. So it is argued really no increase in the force in Turkish waters is designed unless, eventually, affairs appear to warrant it. According to the present understanding the Cincinnati will continue with Admiral Bunce's squadron several weeks yet and will time her movements to reach Smyrna in October, about the time the Bancroft arrives at the entrance of the Bosphorus. Commander Belknap has informed the navy department that he has assumed command of the Bancroft and will leave Annapolis to-day for New York. Lieut. W. Truxton has been detached from the New York and ordered to the Bancroft as navigating officer. Ensign C. T. Vogelsand has been detached from the war college and also ordered to the Bancroft. The Bancroft is due to reach the Brooklyn navy yard to-morrow morning.

At Their Mountain Cottage.

Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 1.—Young Harry P. Whitney and his bride arrived at Lenox last evening and were driven immediately to their mountain cottage in their carriage. Their new house will be completed soon, meantime they will be made comfortable in the cottage and Adirondack tents. How long they will remain is not known, nor do they care to say. They came by special car.

Government Finances.

Washington, Sept. 1.—From official treasury figures the receipts of the government during August, in round numbers were $25,500,000 and the expenditures $36,000,000, making the deficit for the month $10,500,000. For the fiscal year the receipts have been $54,591,000 and the expenditures $78,091,000, making the deficit for the year to date $23,498,000.

Gold Reserve Slightly Increased.

Washington, Sept. 1.—The treasury gold reserve at the opening of business to-day stood at $104,525,653, a slight increase, the result of deposits of recently imported foreign gold.

TONS OF DOCUMENTS

Wholesale Distribution of Political Literature at Washington.

THE WORK RUNNING AT FULL SPEED

8,000,000 Documents Already Sent Out by the Republican Committee and the Democrats Are Distributing 150,000 a Day.

Washington, Sept. 1.—With the presidential election nine weeks off the several political committees here are running at full speed supplying literature. So far the republican committe has sent out 8,000,000 documents and will continue to send them out at the rate of 500,000 per day. The democratic committee is now well supplied with documents. It has already sent out 3,000,000 copies of documents and its daily output will be 150,000 per day from to-day. The silver committee, Secretary Difenderfer said, will, within the next ten days, send out 2,000,000 documents. The populists have sent out 3,000,000 documents, and are now sending out 100,000 per day. From the democratic, populist and silver headquarters, the documents are sent to individuals and clubs direct, while most of the literature supplied by the republican committee is sent to the state central committees and by them distributed to clubs and individuals.

BRYAN AT CLEVELAND.

Incidents in the Democratic Nominee's Journey Westward.

Cleveland, Sept. 1.—The journey made by candidate Bryan from Ripley, N. Y., to Cleveland was marked principally by the demonstration at Ashtabula, O., where nearly 3,000 people gathered about his car and displayed much enthusiasm. Previous to reaching Ashtabula the candidate was cheered at North East, Pa., where a number of people also shook his hand. The handshaking process was repeated in the station at Erie, Pa., where the train stopped ten minutes. At Conneaut, the first stop was made in Major McKinley's state. Mr. and Mrs. Bryan were greeted by Daniel McConville, chairman of the democratic executive committee of Ohio; L. E. Holden of the Cleveland Plaindealer, a member of the Cleveland reception committee, his son and daughter, and H. L. Chapman of Jackson, who will be appointed a member of the state democratic executive committee. There was considerable enthusiasm at Conneaut and calls for a speech, but Mr. Bryan did not gratify the desire.

BANK ROBBED AT RIPLEY.

The Clerks Were Watching the Bryan Parade and Thieves Secured $963.

Erie, Pa., Sept. 1.—The gang of peak thieves and pickpockets who have been following William J. Bryan in his campaign tour and working the crowds that go to hear him speak, made a haul yesterday afternoon in Ripley, where Mr. Bryan made a speech on leaving for Cleveland. While the Bryan procession was passing E. A. Stringer's Ripley branch of the First National bank of Westfield the clerks went out to look at the candidate. When they returned all the ready cash, amounting to $963, was missing.

INDIANAPOLIS CONVENTION.

Expected That 42 States Will Be Represented and Nearly 900 Delegates Present.

Indianapolis, Sept. 1.—The convention of the national democratic party, as the party is now called, which is to open here to-morrow noon, promises to be pretty largely attended. Those in charge say that forty-two states will be represented and that nearly nine hundred delegates are expected to be present. Last night's trains did not bring in many delegates, and they are still scarce in the convention city. The influx is expected to-night and to-morrow morning. Perry Belmont of New York was among the latest arrivals. The sentiment among those already here seems to favor Bragg or Vilas for the head of the ticket and Buckner for vice-president.

Bond Issue Declared Illegal.

Pittsburg, Sept. 1.—An issue of municipal bonds to the amount of $1,400,000 made recently by the city of Allegheny is now pronounced illegal because of the fact the call for the election to authorize the bond issue was published in the Pittsburg newspapers, instead of in the newspapers of the district where the bonds were issued, as the law requires. If this is correct all the bonds issued by the city of Allegheny since 1874 are involved. The situation is a most serious one.

New York Sound Money Democrats.

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 1.—The convention of the national democrats of New York yesterday afternoon chose delegates for the sound money convention at Indianapolis and adopted a platform repudiating the Chicago ticket and platform. The convention adjourned to meet in Brooklyn on Sept. 24 to nominate a state ticket. Daniel G. Griffin of Watertown was temporary chairman and Charles S. Fairchild permanent chairman.

Italian Squadron for South America.

Rome, Sept. 1.—King Humbert has signed a decree ordering the formation of an Italian Atlantic squardon for the protection of Italy's interests in South America.

The Pope Indisposed.

Paris, Sept. 1.—A dispatch to the Figaro from the vatican says that the pope is suffering from a heavy cold. The vatican physician says that there is no danger.

THE DAILY PRESS

A. L. FORCE, Editor and Proprietor.

Published Daily, except Sunday, at 3:30 p. m., 105 North avenue. Telephone Call 61.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., SEPT. 1, 1896.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

Furnished by Weather Observer Neagle.)

Fair Tonight and Wednesday; Stationary Temperature.

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 77 Degrees.

For the first time in several years there will be a contest in the Democratic primaries in this city next Friday.

The New York Herald is pushing Henry Watterson, the noted Kentucky editor, as a candidate for the gold standard people at Indianapolis.

Elizabeth is anxious to have its name emblazoned on a war ship now being built at the Nixon shipyards in that city. The Mosquito City is not bashful.

Uncle Sam is a liberal old fellow. Public Printer Benedict says that he has had to purchase 40,000,000 envelopes since the campaign opened to supply franked documents.

Joseph W. Ballantine, chairman of the Somerset Democratic County Committee, says that he intends to resign the position at the county convention soon to be held. He is a gold standard man.

Mrs. Charlotte Smith, president of the Woman's Rescue League of the United States, has arrived in New York from Washington with a big job on her hands. She intends to convert the feminine bicyclist that to persist in wheeling is spinning to ruin. She is on the unpopular side.

Everybody will be anxious to witness the big bicycle parade next Saturday afternoon, and that all the employes of The Press may view it in its splendor and glory, this paper will be issued at noon on that day. Correspondents and advertisers should govern themselves accordingly.

Those Democrats in Trenton who are steadfast to the Chicago platform and candidates are an aggressive lot, as will be observed by the statement that they have adopted a resolution providing that the gold standard Democrats must take an oath to support Bryan and Sewall befose being permitted to elect delegates to the State convention.

In another column today The Press gives space to a long and needlessly bitter communication from Lemuel W. Serrell anent the finding of a sewer running from his property, and, the Borough officials claim, polluting Green brook. In this letter Mr. Serrell does not, as reason would dictate in bringing the matter into print over his signature, attempt to establish his right to maintain the sewer, but instead he heaps abuse on everybody in general. So far as his reference to The Press is concerned, we can only say that The Press has no interest in the matter either one way or the other beyond the publication of the news. If in doing this we have erred, we intend to "continue in the error of our way."

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation, can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

A POISONED LIVER.

DON'T KEEP POISON IN YOUR BODY LONGER THAN YOU HAVE TO.

If your stomach poisons your liver the consequences may be serious.

What poisons arise in your stomach come from undigested food which has decomposed there. They are absorbed by your blood and go to your liver, where they paralyze its functions and make you billious.

Finally they go into the blood again and are carried all over the body, disordering your different organs, and perhaps making you dangerously sick.

This is the origin of many diseases which are not always known for what they are.

The poisons of undigested food can only be got rid of by the use of a purifying, strengthening, digestive tonic, like the Shaker Digestive Cordial.

A few doses of this wonderful cordial will soon clear away all undigested, fermenting, poisonous substances, restore your appetite, aid you to digest your food, purify your liver and blood of all dangerous poisons, and restores you to perfect health.

It will cure billiousness, indigestion, nausea, headache, dizziness, mental depression, weakness, fever, flatulence, constipation, loss of appetite, bad taste in mouth, stomach-ache anaemia, rheumatism, etc., where other medicines will barely give relife.

At druggists. Ten cents for a trial bottle.

An aunt of mine, who resides at Dexter, Iowa, was about to visit me a few years since, and before leaving home wrote me, asking if they were sold here, stating if they were not she would bring a quantity with her, as she did not like to be without them." The medicines referred to are Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds and croup; Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, pains in the side and chest, and Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for bowel complaints. These medicines have been in constant use in Iowa for almost a quarter of a century. The people have learned that they are articles of great worth and merit, and unequaled by any other. DETAILS OF THE PARADE in the square formed at the junction of Franklin place, La Grande and Putnam avenues.

Now that the line of march has been selected, the preparations for decorating will go on immediately. It is therefore expected that every house along the route of the parade will decorate to some extent and every residents in the city should give his house a gala appearance as the visitors will pass through all the streets whether the parade does or not. The business places will also be well decorated for the occasion. The crowd will begin to come early in the morning and it will be late in the evening before they leave.

The reports from the out of town clubs are particularly pleasing, as well as from the local clubs, for all of the latter are going to turn out in full force. The well-known Clio Wheelmen, of Jersey City, who took a number of prizes at the bicycle parade on Hudson county boulevard, last Saturday, have promised to be present and will try to win as many as possible at Plainfield's great event.

The coasting contest, which is to take place in the morning, was discussed and N. R. Titsworth was appointed referee to have general charge of the affair. Any information regarding it may be had from Mr. Titsworth at H. E. Rider's sporting goods store on North avenue.

It was remarked at the meeting that the only thing needed to make the success of the carnival complete, was the presence of Li Hung Chang. But as that great Chinese statesman is receiving similar invitations by the dozen and will be at Washington Saturday, it is not likely that Plainfield and her guests will have to entertain him and his suite.

—Eugene A. Laine, the Park avenue tonsorial artist, was so unfortunate Tuesday afternoon as to be thrown from his bicycle at Dunellen and the palm of one of his hands was lacerated, that he is unable to work at his business. The accident was caused by his wheel getting fast in the switch of the street railroad.

Theories of cure may be discussed at length by physicians, but the sufferers want quick relief; and One Minute Cough Cure will give it to them. A safe cure for children. It is "the only harmless remedy that produces immediate results." For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

From all accounts Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a Godsend to the afflicted. There is no advertisement about this; we feel just like saying it. The DEMOCRAT, Carrollton, Ky. For sale by T. R. Armstrong, Druggist.

GOSSIP OF DAME FASHION

Hints of Modes for the Coming Autumn.

Gowns Will Be Braided—Hunting Gowns for the Woods—Lace to Be Greatly Worn—A Few Hints About Hats.

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

Not many years ago a huntress was a thing unheard of. A picture of the hunt showed never a feminine, and no one would dream of associating a maid with that womanly (?) sport. But the up-to-date maid has gone in for all sports, and hunting is not to be excluded. Each year sees a greater number of modern Dianas flock to the Adirondacks, and now a maid who is bound for that section of the country would consider herself badly equipped if she did not have a shooting rig.

Her gown is made of waterproof homespun, of some shade of green, that the game may be deceived by its resemblance to the foliage. She also wears stout brown leggings, which save the limbs from brambles.

Among the pretty costumes which were laid by a New York belle in a trunk, bound for the Adirondacks, was a hunting costume of mixed green and brown material. The knickerbockers were very full, and were made of brown cloth.

AUTUMN HUNTING SUITS.

The short skirt was scant, being almost plain in front. The jacket would have been a bona fide man's sack coat, but for the leg-o'-mutton sleeves. With it were laid a double-peaked outing cap of the same material, a sweater, a pair of heavy gauntlet gloves, and stout brown leather leggings. The maid will wear square-heeled shoes

Another costume was a skirt of plain, dark-green material, and a jacket, which reached half way to the knees, of striped material. A vest of scarlet cloth and a starched shirt beneath gave a mannish effect.

Of course, the maid must wear a pouch strapped across her shoulders, and must carry her gun in the proper fashion. These are little essentials which prevent the masculine from poking fun at the would-be Dianas, who find it such hard work to shoot anything. And I strongly suspect many of them go in for the thing simply because the girls who do not are obliged to be content with the society of other girls.

The maid of to-day can boast a long line of forefathers, and is the proud possessor of a number of her grandmother's laces, is indeed blessed of the gods. Be the lace common or expensive, plain or jeweled, old or new—it matters not, but lace one must have. Lace is laid over satin to form bodices in a most effective manner, although it seems a pity to cut up such valuable finery in that way. Other bodices are many flounced, with skirts that are similarly adorned. Again, the skirts have front panels of lace set in them, with the lace sparkling with jewels—or rather, paste stones, for no one pretends that this sparkle is genuine.

By no one is lace used more effectively than by our Parisian sisters, who seem to be fitted by nature to swathe themselves in its diaphanous folds. Yards and yards of it are used by them on one dress, without raising the slightest suspicion of overtrimming.

One French matron was particularly successful in a morning gown. Of pale blue silk, it falls loosely away from the neck, forming a V in front. A Marie Antoinette fichu, trimmed with three rows of deep lace, encircles the shoulders and is tied in a loose knot in front, falling with a great bunch of lace below the waist.

Very wide lace is used in trimming the skirt. This lace is bunched into rosettes at regular intervals, falling between without any attempt at fastening. The back and sides only are trimmed in this way, however; in front the lace is traced up to the waist line, and falls in a cloudlike mass that is most fascinating.

Midsummer brings to us no abatement of the over-trimming of hats. Tulle in front, four or five wings, then a ribbon bow, perhaps some waving osprey feathers, a wide upturned brim, and behind it a mass of flowers—such is the hat which makes us look almost grotesque in its bountiful supply of finery. Among the prettiest hats displayed are those of Panama straw. They are light and cool and of a dark shade, so becoming to the average woman. Many of these hats are trimmed simply with flowers, rose wreaths and foliage, without a sign of tulle or ribbon. Others, even more dainty, have a delicate bow in rose pink perched above the blossoms.

A curious hat, and one which matches well the green and blue shot taffeta waist so universally worn, is a dark blue straw. It has a broad brim, made still broader in appearance by being turned up sharply behind, and is plaited all around the crown with green, laid over blue, tulle. At the back of the crown a fan of the tulle is arranged, resembling the spread tail of a peacock, while at the back, under the brim, are massed velvet roses in the same peacock hues.

Sailor hats are little worn this year, except for boating and cycling. The sailor shape, however, is made up in very pretty straws and, simply trimmed, forms the basis for some of the most charming millinery of the season.

Such a shape is of coarse green straw. To give the necessary breadth, it has loops outstanding from each side the front of grass ribbon edged with blue. A delicate spangled egret gives a little dash of brilliancy to this effective and stylish head covering.

Bolero, Figaro and Eton—all three will prevail in modes for the coming autumn. Certain fanciful ones are already very popular; as, for instance, the Turkish bolero, made of bright cloth and heavily braided in gold. It should be sleeveless and worn over a bodice of white chiffon or mousseline de soie.

These jackets are a true index of coming modes, since not only will the bolero be very fashionable, but braiding of all kinds will be worn. In general, the bodices will be covered almost entirely by the braided design, with the sleeve left plain. The front or the side panels only of the skirt should be embroidered, as to cover that garment entirely would make it too heavy. As a hint for summer work, why not braid one of these gowns during the hot forenoons on the veranda? A black or brown cloth of light weight should be selected, and it should be nicely stamped with a design in long line effects, which prevents the gown's appearing clumsy. Then embroider it a black gown with black, if a brown, with green braid. For a scroll design, narrow braid is used, sewed on one edge; but many of the gowns will be trimmed with rows of broad braid, which should be sewed down on both sides in order to make it lay flat.

A charming Parisian yachting gown is of creamy white cheviot, adorned with broad gold braid. A soft blouse of white mousseline de soie peeps from beneath a bolero so perverted as to be almost unrecognizable under that name. It is cut in a point which runs up the center of the back almost to the neck. In front a similar though smaller point is formed by extending the sides and crossing them. The neck is low, encircled by a broad sailor collar pointed all round, while a twilled cord about the waist hangs in two long ends down the front—a cord twisted of gold thread, and ending with bunchy gold tassels.

THE LATEST.

CHICKEN AND TARRAGON SAUCE

A Palatable Dish as It Is Prepared in the South.

Early chickens are usually large enough for broiling or frying after the favorite southern method. The delights of southern fried chickens need not be rehearsed. It is not the dish redolent of grease, so often conjured up by the imaginations of those who have never seen it served in perfection. It is one of the most delicate and delicious methods of preparing a young "broiler" for the table. The true southern cook selects the chickens she wishes from among the flock, kills them quickly, and, without an instant's delay, plucks, draws and makes them ready for the frying pan before the animal heat has left them and while they are still limp and tender. There is something repulsive to northern notions of preparing animal food in this rapid transferring of the vigorous young fowl to the frying pan. There must be no midway course, however. Either the chicken must be thus fried before the animal heat leaves it and the muscles stiffen, or it must be laid on ice for 24 hours until the stiffened muscles relax and it again becomes limp and tender for food. A failure to obey this rule produces a tough dish from the tenderest broiler that ever scratched in chicken yard.

In any event singe, draw and cut the chickens to be fried into pieces in the same way you do for a fricassee. Dry each piece well with a cloth and season it with salt and pepper. Heat an iron spider quite hot and melt two tablespoonfuls of clarified butter in it for every chicken fried. It is a simple matter to clarify butter. Melt it, and when it ceases to bubble strain it through a hair sieve on a thin cloth. Sound sweet olive oil is even nicer than clarified butter to fry chicken in. Dredge a very little flour over each piece of chicken, and lay it into the hot butter or oil and fry it for about seven minutes on one side, and if it is then of a nice golden brown tint turn it on the other side and fry it seven minutes longer. Cook a large spiderful of chickens in this way, covering it closely while cooking and taking care that the pan does not become hot enough to burn the chicken before it is cooked. It is better to fry it slowly on top of the lids, not against the fire.

There are two ways of preparing the tarragon sauce. The first is to stir a tablespoonful of flour into the butter and drippings left in the pan after removing the chicken. Mix the flour in well, add a cup of rich milk or cream, boil and strain, and add about two tablespoonfuls of tarragon leaves, chopped fine. Let the sauce boil up again and pour it over the chicken. Parsley may be used in place of tarragon or chervil leaves. The second sauce calls for a cup of rich brown gravy. Add to the drippings in the pan the whole amount strained and season and with two tablespoonfuls of tarragon leaves added. The sauce should then be returned to the stove to simmer for 20 minutes. Either of the sauces should be served in a boat, so that a little may be poured over each piece of chicken served.—N. Y. Tribune.

A Snake with Two Heads.

There is said to be a snake in Oregon called the stupefied snake, which is one of the most interesting species of the family. This snake has a head on each end and runs either way. One head is about one-fourth as large as the other. It is of a yellowish color. It generally lies in a loop, and is frequently observed running in an apparently stupefied condition on a rock or log.

Fire Department of Women.

The little town of Nasso, in Sweden, has a feminine department, 150 strong, in its fire brigade. The water-works of the village consist simply of four great tubs, and it is the duty of the women "firemen" to keep these full in case of fire. They stand in two continuous lines from the tubs to the lake, about three blocks away, one line passing the full buckets and the other sending them back.

Colors Made from Coal Tar.

Coal tar, formerly considered a waste and a regular nuisance to gas workers, is now carefully saved and utilized as one of the most valuable color producers. The chemists have extracted from it 16 shades of blue, 16 shades of yellow, 12 shades of orange and nine of violet, besides shades of other colors too numerous to mention.

LIVE WIRES.

The most effective way to capture a whale is to spear it with an electrical harpoon, when it is at once shocked into unconsciousness.

Some enterprising young electricians in Brooklyn have been tapping the trolley wires and supplying electric lights to storekeepers. Every month they regularly collected the bills for the stolen lights.

Two women were asleep on a feather bed in their home at Bonne Terre, Md., when lightning struck the house and set fire to the shuck mattress under the bed, but the women were unharmed. The feathers repelled the electricity.

Long-distance telephones have been placed in the smallest Swiss villages, making it possible to communicate from one end to the other of the country on instruments kept in perfect repair, and on which one can hear distinctly. The fee varies from two to eight cents a message. Electric lighting from water power has been introduced in even small places.

It is said that in Spain electric fishing is to be carried on on a large scale. A Spanish company has taken out patents in Spain covering the use of the electric light for this purpose. The same scheme has been tried in California, where a net was fitted with electric lights. It proved very attractive to the fish, which had previously been rather wary of entering the nets.

WHAT WOMEN ARE DOING.

A Winnegance (Me.) woman recently proved her expertness with a gun by bringing down two large gulls at a single shot.

Miss Fannie McKinnon, a compositor in a newspaper office in Superior, Wis., has just received $40,000 from a gold mine stock investment made ten years ago.

Mrs. L. V. Thill, a niece of the celebrated Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, is rapidly completing her arrangements to go to Cuba in the interests of the Red Cross expedition.

Women of Hiawatha, Kan., have organized a target company and have progressed in their training so far as to be able to fire rifles without shutting their eyes and screaming.

Mrs. Stevenson, wife of the vice president, thinks a lady can be most comfortable at her own home during the warm weather. She has arrived at Bloomington, Ill., and will remain there all summer.

FEW DO ALL THE CHARITY.

Number Who Give Anything to the Poor Is Limited.

I was told many years ago by a person of great experience, whose name would carry great weight if I were free to give it, that the number of persons who ever do anything for anybody always remains about the same. "They shift their gifts and their efforts," she said, "but they do not increase. Most people never give anything or work for anybody."

I think that, making a little allowance, this lady's experience taught her a profound truth. A great many people do nothing for nobody, partly because they are too poor and too hard worked; partly because they mean to spend everything—and not too much, either, they say—upon themselves.

As for those who give or work for other people, there are many classes. Some do so coldly, as a religious duty, without being impelled in the least by the desire to help those who want help. I knew a man once who gave away conscientiously, but reluctantly, a whole tenth part of his large income as a religious duty.

Some families inherit altruistic traditions; some persons seem born with an irresistible desire to learn and to understand the lives of other people. Now, when this instinct does not lead to the writing of novels it leads to works of charity.

Some people give in order to get rid of disagreeable objects, as one tosses a penny to an organ grinder.

I have sometimes thought that things would be made easier if we had a secret bureau at which people could put down their names for what they could afford, apart from giving doles to poor relations and checks to hospital Sunday. There would, of course, be a board of directors. Let us think it over.—London Queen.

His Idea of It.

You're talkin' now 'bout pleasure
An' where on earth it's found;
But jest you come an' measure
A little piece o' ground;

An' put a cottage on it;
An' morn, an' evenin' late
Have sweet lips 'neath a bonnet,
To kiss you at the gate!

An' then a green tree springin'
Where the sweetest shadows flit,
An' a mockin' bird a-singin'
In the very top of it!

"How do you manage, doctor, to make yourself so popular with all your patients?" "That's very simple. I assure those who only imagine they are ill that they really are ill, while those who are really ill I assure that they are quite well."—Fliengende Blaetter.

FADS AND FASHIONS OF EUROPE

Provided the stone is not very conspicuous a gentleman may, with propriety, wear either a diamond scarfpin or a diamond ring.

"Ink suitable for love letters" is advertised by a Parisian stationer. It is made of a solution of iodide of starch and characters written with it entirely fade in four weeks.

In some of the old houses in Holland are two doors which are never used unless in case of marriage or death. By one door the bride and groom enter, and through the other the dead have exit.

A fancy dress ball is given once a year by the lady artists, sculptors, singers and actresses of Berlin. No males are permitted at this ball, and about one-third of the attendants go in masculine costume.

Nearly every guest at a Norwegian wedding brings a present to the bride. The gifts are mostly of a useful character, such as clothing and provisions. Kegs of butter are the presents which find most favor.

CYCLING NOTES.

Polo players in Paris find the tricycle an excellent substitute for the horse while they are engaged in that lively game.

A ne bicycle lamp enables wheelmen to do their own cooking while out for a long spin. Five cooking utensils go with it, and weigh four ounces.

Bicycles are creating a great deal of new law in Great Britain. In England they have been declared to be vehicles; in Scotland, in a case to recover insurance for death due to a bicycle accident they have been declared to be not vehicles, the judge declaring that they could be no more considered such than skates.

FISH STORIES.

A swordfish was captured by a New London (Conn.) skipper which weighed 600 pounds.

A huge frog, weighing 11¾ pounds, was shot by Toney C. Hefel, at Delaware lake, Ind. Its legs were almost as long as a man's arms.

A trout of the Loch leven species, weighing 11¾ pounds and measuring two feet seven inches in length and 16½ inches in girth, was recently taken in Kinghorn loch.

Until 1871 there were no shad in Pacific waters. In that year a few thousand were introduced by the United States fish commission. Last year the catch sold for nearly $40,000.

Elephant Hunting Profits.

By the slaughter of elephants in Africa an annual profit of some £1,000,000 is realized. If the elephants, instead of being left a prey to the hunter, were tamed, they would bring an annual profit of some £135,000,000, according to authorities.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redying. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result. It's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? HOKE SMITH'S RESIGNATION.

It Took Effect Last Night, But He Will Instruct His Successor.

Washington, Sept. 1.—Although the resignation of secretary Hoke Smith practically took effect at the close of the department last evening, he will probably remain for a day or so at the department at the urgent request of his successor, Gov. Francis, who will not be able to arrange his business affairs at St. Louis to reach his post of duty until to-morrow or probably Thursday. Secretary Francis will find most branches of the business of the department up to date and upon current work. Secretary Smith last evening gave out a statement describing the business that has for more than three years been under his supervision and what he has accomplished during that period, dwelling principally upon the settlement of conflicting land cases in the great western territory. Many thousand of these had accumulated when he entered office, he says, but by dilligence and labor a great mass of them has been disposed of. In his statement he calls attention to the work of the last force in adjudicating these claims and shows that since March 3, 1893, to date, there has been an increase of 1,935 cases disposed of over those of the same period prior to 1893. Secretary Smith showed that the result of his policy to preserve forest reservations would ultimately result in their better preservation; also his improvement in the matter of issuing patents tends to prevent delays. His adherence to the rules of civil service and general improvements in the various branches of the departments are also shown in the statement.

SHARKEY AFTER CORBETT.

Says He Will Fight Him on the Street if Not in a Ring.

New York, Sept. 1.—Tom Sharkey, accompanied by his manager D. J. Lynch, was at the office of a sporting paper in this city yesterday afternoon prepared to meet Jim Corbett or his representative for the purpose of arranging the details of the Corbett-Sharkey fight in December. For the second time within a week Corbett failed to show up either in person or by representative and sent no excuse. Lynch was considerably nettled and spoke his mind pretty freely. He said: "I'll give him until Wednesday, and if he does not come to time then I will tell him what our intentions are. Then I will arrange for another meeting and if he then fails to appear my man will throw him over and consider propositions from Bob Fitzsimmons or Peter Maher. But we will not let Corbett rest. Whenever Sharkey meets Corbett on the street he will try and lick him then and there. Sharkey will keep this up until Jim comes to time."

The Sullivan-Sharkey Bout.

New York, Sept. 1.—About 4,500 sports took their first opportunity last night of seeing Thomas Sharkey of California, the ex-sailor who claims to have bested and nearly knocked out James J. Corbett at San Francisco. The aspirant for championship honors sparred four exhibition rounds with the old Napoleon of the prize ring, John L. Sullivan. Of course, scarcely any opinion of Sharkey's merits or demerits could be obtained as John L. was so fat and unwieldly that he was in his own way. The Californian is undoubtedly a powerful man and very fast, but beyond that he had no opportunity of showing what he could do. The crowd were perfectly satisfied to see the man who is trying to get on a match to a finish with Corbett next December, and did not expect to see a fight.

ALL RUSSIA SHOCKED

The Death of Prince Lobanoff a Great Blow.

HE WAS THE EMPIRE'S GREAT MAN

His Policy Regarding the Eastern Question, Which Was a Peril to the Peace of Europe, May Now Be Changed.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 1.—The news of the sudden death of Prince Lobanoff-Rostovsky in a railway carriage near Kieff Sunday night while traveling with the czar, has caused the most intense excitement throughout Russia, as the personality of the minister of foreign affairs was considered to be second only to the czar himself. Prince Lobanoff-Rostovsky pursued a strong foreign policy—a policy which was regarded in some quarters as threatening the peace of the world. Besides his political work the prince devoted his leisure hours to the study of and to the writing of works on Russian history. The tour which he had planned to take with the czar through the countries of western Europe was expected to be the most far-reaching in results affecting the settlement of the eastern question. Emperor Francis Joseph paid Prince Lobanoff-Rostovsky the highest honors during the recent visit of the czar to Vienna, and his death at the present juncture is regarded as a most dramatic and important event, upsetting as it does all possibilities of conferences between the foreign ministers of the great powers and compelling the czar to change the plans concerning his tour through Germany, France and England.

Details of Prince Lobanoff's Death.

The following details of the death of Prince Lobanoff-Rostovsky have been obtained. During the progress of the imperial special train, on which Prince Lobanoff was traveling, the czar, desiring to take a walk to break the monotony of the long journey, ordered the train to be halted close to a small wood near the Schepetovka station. The entire imperial party alighted and started for a walk in the wood. Prince Lobanoff had taken only a few steps when he complained of feeling indisposed and expressed a wish to return to the train. Upon reaching the carriage in which he was traveling he was unable to mount the steps without assistance, and immediately after entering it fell to the floor unconscious. A doctor was summoned at once, but the prince was dead before the physician arrived. Death was due to aneurism. Prince Lobanoff's body was taken to Kieff, where it was embalmed.

Complained of Feeling Ill.

Vienna, Sept. 1.—The Fremdenblatt says that while Prince Lobanoff-Rostovsky was in Vienna he complained of difficulty in breathing, which he attributed to calcification of the arteries. He said he hoped to take a course of massage at Breslau. When he accompanied Count van Eulenburg, the German ambassador here, on a visit to Count Nigra, the Italian ambassador to Austria-Hungary, the prince had an attack of faintness so severe that he nearly lost consciousness and it was owing to this that he changed his plans and started for Kieff instead of remaining longer in this city. The czar has summoned the deputy of the Russian minister for foreign affairs, M. Chichkine, to Kieff.

Erie, Pa., Sept. 1.—The Erie & Pittsburg south bound express train collided head-on near Springboro last night with a light engine, and Engineer Tobey Welsh of the passenger engine was terribly crushed. His home is in New Castle, Pa. All three will die. A number of passengers were injured.

Kipling To Go Abroad.

New York, Sept. 1.—Rudyard Kipling will leave on the steamer Lahn of the North German Lloyd line today for a tour abroad which may last several years. His plan is somewhat indefinite. The celebrated novelist will take his wife and their two children. They will spend the winter in southern Europe and travel later in India, where he hopes to gather materia for more stories.

The Case of a Confiscated Schooner.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Frank Fulton, of Leggett's pharmacy, is spending his vacation through New York State on his wheel.

E. H. Bogardus, of Putnam avenue, has purchased a new Crescent wheel for his son from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

There will be a meeting of the Crescent Wheelmen tomorrow evening to decide whether the club shall turn out in uniforms or not.

"Baron" Ernest Hand, of Westfield, rode two-thirds of a mile at the Crescent Oval, Sunday, in 1:18, paced by Theodore Lister, of this city.

Henry Brown, of Rockview avenue, has entered the 100 yard and 220 yard dashes in the games of the Catholic Club at Baldwin Park, Jersey City.

J. F. Starbuck, the well known professional long-distance rider of Philadelphia, is now making his headquarters in Plainfield while training at the Crescent Oval.

Officer M. J. Folay, of the Bayonne police force, rode his wheel to this city, Sunday, and then returned to Emery's Hotel, at Scotch Plains, for dinner. Officer Folay seemed very much pleased with the working of the Plainfield police force, under the present regime.

Fred and Will Van Eps, of Park avenue, returned yesterday after visiting their uncle near Pluckamin. Their uncle's house was the next one to that of the murdered man, Harry Hodgett. Both boys were well acquainted with the victim and the alleged murderer.

The twenty-five-mile road race of the Victor Wheelmen will not be held on Thursday as was anticipated. Despite the efforts of Captain Israel Jones and a few of the other officers to make the race a success, the rest of the members have taken no interest in it at all, and the entry list was not sufficient to to make it worth the while to run the race.

Two young men from New Market, Daniel Dodge and Frank Nelson, started on a 1,400-mile bicycle ride. Nelson has an uncle living in Kansas City who told them that, if they would ride out to that city from here, he would give them the biggest time they ever had and entertain them for the rest of the year. So the young men started and hope to reach their destination by October 1st.

Another century bicycle run has been arranged from South Orange to Lambertville and return on September 26th. It is expected one hundred or more riders will participate, and they expect to arrive in Plainfield in time for an early breakfast and dinner in Lambertville, arriving here on the return trip about 5:30 p. m. Messers. Frederick F. Shepardson and Nelson Ward rode over the proposed route yesterday, and they will act as pacemakers on the run.

Arthur B. Crane, of East Second street, and Walter E. Probasco, of East Front street, are both enthusiastic cyclists and have already enjoyed the delights of bicycle touring. They are now planning to start next Monday on a tour of several weeks duration. They will go from here to Lake Hopatcong, then to Greenwood Lake, next to Port Jervis, down to Delaware Water Gap and then following the Delaware river down through Trenton to Philadelphia. From there they will go into southern Jersey to Bridgeton in Cape May county and then follow up the coast to Atlantic City, Barnegat and Asbury Park and then back to Plainfield. They will make numerous stops along their route and will take it easy, as they understand the real secret of touring.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

Frank Randolph, Herbert Randolph, and R. H. McCullough, of this city, left town yesterday for Long Branch, where they will enjoy several days fishing.

Rev. Mr. Hill, of Clarksville, N. Y., occupied the pulpit in the Presbyterian church Sunday morning and evening.

The Elizabeth Athletic Club played the Dunellens on their grounds Saturday and were defeated by the score of 6 to 3 in favor of the home team.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church will hold a sociable this evening in the basement of the church. Ice cream will be on sale.

Unlucky at the Start.

Mr. Adams, formerly night baggagemaster at the North Avenue station, has resigned his position and left Monday for the south. His place has been taken by Henry Hansen, who has been a hackman for years. He went on duty last night for the first and met with an accident.

He was hurrying from one of the trains and did not notice a loaded truck behind him. He fell over the truck and sustained an injury to his arm. Being unable to work, Assistant Baggage Master Jacob Wagner was sent for and he remained on duty during the night. Mr. Hanson will soon be able to return to work.

To the Public.

The undersigned wishes to state that the new organization known as the J. P. Laire Hardware Company has voted to do a strictly cash business and one price only. By doing so it will enable them to buy cheaper and sell cheaper, thereby making it a mutual benefit which we trust will be appreciated and patronized.

AROUND THE BASES.

Will Godown's nine will meet the Gormans, the champion colored team of this city, on the Y. M. C. A. diamond next Friday afternoon.

Rome had its gladitorial combats, Spain had its bull fights, but for true pleasure for the Plainfield cranks, give them a base-ball game with the famous old Crescents in the field. Last Decoration Day the old veterans aroused themselves, donned their old uniforms and frisked about the diamond in a way that astonished everybody, themselves included. On Labor Day, that's a week from yesterday, the old Crescents are going to try it again against the Y. M. C. A. nine. George R. Cornwell will captain this wonderful aggregation of ball players while a professional battery will do their part of the work. George Cadmus, the star catcher of the old team, is going to risk his life on second base, where he expects to extinguish every base-runner that attempts to steal second.

AUTUMN EVE WEDDING.

FIRST MARRIAGE CEREMONY IN THE SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Ceremony of Making Miss Grace Lewis the Wife of Henry Parsons Was Performed by the Bride's Father.

Resplendent in all its beauty, the Seventh-Day Baptist church was filled last evening with a large number of Plainfield's society people who had gathered to witness the marriage of Miss Grace E. Lewis, daughter of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Lewis and Henry Parsons, of Chicago. It was the first marriage that had been solemnized within that edifice. It was a beautiful wedding because of its marked simplicity in every particular. The decorations, consisting of golden rod, ferns, ivy and asparagus fern, were arranged in one massive bank which completely hid from view the pulpit platform. Seated at the organ was Arthur L. Titsworth, who, while the guests were arriving, rendered the following choice programme:

Offertoire in E flat, Driffield; March in B flat, Pabst; Allegro Pomposo, Harriss; May Waltz, Anderson; Marriage Fanfare, Gilbert; Bagpipe, Ryder; Grand Offertoire de concert, Thayer; Waltz, Eilenberg; Gavotte, Messenger.

At precisely the appointed hour, 7:30 o'clock the first notes of the wedding march from Lohengrin were heard, and at the same time the bridal party appeared at the left of the church. The ushers preceded, followed by the bridemaids, Miss Lulu Lewis and Miss Evlyn Lewis and maid of honor, Miss Mary A. Lewis, all sisters of the bride. Then came the bride leaning on the arm of her father. They walked to the rear of the church and approached the altar through the next aisle. A circle was formed about the altar, and as the bride and her father entered the circle they were met by the groom and best man, James Everitt Kimball, who entered from the right of the church. The bride's father performed the marriage and used a modified form of the Episcopal service. The responses were very distinct and especially impressive was the portion when the ring was placed on the bride's finger. During the ceremony, Pastorale, by Wermann, was executed with rare skill on the organ.

As the bridal party retired from the church, Mendelssohn's wedding march was rendered. Immediately after the ceremony the doors separating the church from the Sunday school room were thrown open and in the latter room the bridal party stood, ready to receive the congratulations of their many friends assembled.

The brides' gown was white silk, with chiffon and pearl trimmings. A veil was also worn, and a beautiful pearl pendant, the gift of the groom. The bridesmaid and maid of honor were gowned in white organdie, with yellow silk trimmings. A chiffon collar worn by the maid of honor, was a mark of distinction.

There were guests present from Plainfield, Elizabeth, New York and the New England States. The ushers, F. J. Hubbard, Asa Randolph, Harry L. Maxson and S. R. Titsworth.

The bride and groom had planned to take the 9:55 Royal Blue Line train, but their young friends had it arranged so that they missed it and were obliged to take the 10:17 way train to New York. A company of the young people accompanied them to Netherwood where Mr. and Mrs. Parsons were showered with rice. Today noon they left Jersey City on the Black Diamond Express over the Lehigh Valley railroad. They will stop at Detroit and Cleveland. From the latter place they will go to Chicago where they will at once go to housekeeping.

The ushers received as favors from the groom very handsome stick pins while the bride presented her bride maid and maid-of-honor with similar with similar pins.

The presents received by Mr. and Mrs. Parsons were many and of great value.

The out-of-town guests present at the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. Naughton, of Elizabeth; Mr. Holden, Mr. Fisher, of Boston; Miss Woodhouse, Mr. Cutter, of Woodbridge; Miss Patterson, Mr. Patterson, New York; Mrs. Taylor, of Chicago; Mrs. Clark, William Clark, of Alfred, N. Y.; Mrs. Russell, Master Paul and Ernest Paul, of Bay Shore, N. Y.; Miss Tomlinson, of Shiloh; Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Peterson, of New Market.

Redistricting Local Mail Service.

On account of redistricting the city by the postal authorities the merchants and others sonth east of the railroad on Park avenue, will hereafter have four mail deliveries each day. Heretofore they have only had two a day—one in the morning and another in the afternoon. North Plainfield also gets increased facilities by extending the service to Coddington avenue and to Rockview Heights.

GAME SEASON OPEN.

Local Nimrods Can Now Go Fourth With Their Guns.

According to the provisions of the New Jersey game law for 1896 the open season for shooting railbirds and reedbirds began yesterday and closes with September 30th. Inasmuch as the first half of October often affords the best shooting at these delicious migrants, there is a strong sentiment among New Jersey sportsmen that the season should be extended at least until October 15th, if not for the entire month. Indeed, some of the fish and game wardens do not hesitate to say that its inclusion was intended, and that it was left out by oversight.

Reedbirds, although fairly plentiful in their haunts already, are not yet fat, as the seeds of the wild oats which form their food are still unripe. The scarcity or abundance of railbirds is almost always a matter of uncertainty until a high tide resulting from an easterly wind and perigee moon enables the gunners to penetrate the reeds and rushes in their shallow boats. The week beginning with Labor Day, September 7th, ought to be a favorable time to "get onto the marsh," as well as that beginning on the 21st, when the moon is at the full.

Squirrels, doves and plover may also be lawfully killed in September. They are reported to be in large numbers this year in Hunterdon and Morris counties, and afford excellent practice before the opening of the quail season on November 10th.

UNION BIBLE CLASS.

Study of the International Sunday-School Session.

Rev. D. M. Stearns, of the church of the Atonement, Reformed Episcopal, Germantown, Pa., has consented to conduct a series of Bible classes for the study of the International Sunday-school sessions, in Plainfield, at the rooms of the W. C. T. U. on Watchung avenue, commencing Monday, September 7th, and every alternate Monday evening at eight o'clock. Dr. Stearns conducts classes at the following places the figures denoting the attendance: Brooklyn, N. Y., 300; New York, 200; Yonkers, 120; Bethlehem, Pa., 150; Newark, N. J., 400; Stroudsburg, Pa., 50; Belvidere, N. J., 70; Easton, Pa., Allentown, Pa., 200; Jersey City, 150; New Brunswick, 100; Philadelphia, Pa., 300; West Philadelphia, 100; Washington, D. C., 200; Baltimore, Md., 250; York Pa., 150; Wilmington, Del., 150; Harrisburg, Pa., 350; Germantown, Pa., 200 All are invited to these services and requested to bring their Bibles with them.

Bright Rays for Reuben.

Reuben Ray, the elevator manipulator in the Babcock building, is still getting signers to his petition to the Babcock estate asking that he be retained in that capacity there. Rev. L. E. Livermore, Postmaster Hetfield and twenty-four others in the building have signed the petition, and this seems like a reasonable demand to have Reuben stay. Since he has been running the elevator no accidents have occurred, and his adaptability for such a position is plainly seen.

Found Ice and Snow.

A letter has been received from Rev. C E Herring, who at the time of writing was in Italy. Both he and Fred Bettman were well and enjoying themselves. Mr. Herring stated that in riding over one road in the Alps a considerable amount of ice and snow was found and they were obliged to walk with their wheels. They are now gradually nearing Antwerp, from which place they sail for home on Thursday.

Fair and Dance Proposed.

The Sons of Veterans held a very interesting meeting last evening at which time the members thoroughly discussed the subject of conducting a fair or dance. It seemed to be the general opinion that the camp should at this time do something. The matter was laid over until the next meeting when a committee will be appointed.

Never Considered a Candidate.

Joseph O. Osgood, secretary of the Board of Trustees of All Souls church, writes to The Press, referring to the statement published in the New York Journal, that Rev. W. L. Utley has never been considered as a candidate for the successor of Rev. Hobart Clark.

It Is Ever Thus.

A gentleman residing on Washington avenue, in the borough, called at the Press office to day, and acknowledged the power of the Press as an advertising medium, he having recovered a child's jacket advertised in Monday's Press.

CARNIVAL PREPARATION.

THE GENERAL COMMITTEE OF THE DAYLIGHT BICYCLE PARADE MEETS.

Favorable Reports From the Companies—The Cycle Academy May be Transformed Into a Bicycle Headquarter Then.

You will not know this quiet suburban city next Saturday afternoon. A vast army of cyclists and other visitors will invade the town and all to see the Daylight Bicycle Carnival that is to be held here next Saturday afternoon. As the time approaches, the probable size of the parade grows larger and larger as the different clubs in the vicinity are heard from. Even the members of the general committee are beginning to realize that their anticipations will be more than fulfilled.

The souvenir badges for the committee are expected to arrive today. The sashes for the marshals will be very handsomely gotten up and will be of red, trimmed with gold. Special badges for the marshal's aids have also been ordered. They will be of very pretty design.

The advertising committee is still at work and the large posters have been scattered broadcast throughout the surrounding country. Their work will continue up to the time of the parade.

Secretary F. R. Stevens read acceptances from the following judges: Mrs. J. H. Howell, Mrs. C. A. Reed, Mrs. S. A. Cruikshank, ex-Councilman Ernest R. Ackerman. Several of the others will be out of town on that day and replies have not been received from a number. The judges will meet at the Revere House that day at 3 o'clock from where they will be conducted to the reviewing stand.

The general committee met again last evening at the Board of Trade rooms, Babcock building, and made the few necessary arrangements that have not already been looked after. Most of the meeting was spent in a general discussion of the carnival and listening to the reports of the work done.

The work of the parade committee was told in yesterday's Daily Press and need not be repeated. The report of the finance committee was a cheerful one, as almost all the necessary funds have been subscribed or promised, and, if the other dealers who have not yet been seen by the committee, respond to the call as generously as the others, the committee will have no need to worry.

Several of the visiting clubs have communicated with the entertainment committee and asked to be assigned to hotels. It was left to the discretion of the committee as to whether the Jersey Cycle Academy should be secured as a bicycle headquarters, where a lunch could be procured and wheels checked.

One change was made in the route, and that was where the parade goes over into the borough. The original line was down Grove street from West Front street to Craig place, to Somerset street, etc. The revised line is down Grove street from West Front street, to Park place, to Duer street, to Craig place, to Somerset street, etc.

The question of music was discussed and the parade committee reported that the Independent Fife and Drum Corps had been secured and they were authorized to hire a band It is understood that Drake, of Elizabeth, is very anxious to come to Plainfield and give the people here a chance to hear what kind of music he can furnish.

The committee adjourned to meet again Friday evening at 8:30 o'clock in the Board of Trade rooms.

Philadelphians Enjoying a Good Time.

J. C. Dreifus and Misses Amelia and Bertha Dreifus and Miss Bertha M. Schinder, of Philadelphia, friends of Miss C. J. Debele, for the past week have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Debele, of Pine Grove Farm, and Mr. and Mrs. William G. Debele, of 111 Somerset street. They were much pleased with their visit to Plainfield and vicinity and greatly admired the many beautiful drives as well as the scenery nature spread before them, as viewed from the mountain tops. Mr. Dreifus, who is a wholesale merchant of Philadelphia, returned feeling greatly benefited by the change and much needed rest from business cares. He was much interested in farming and country life in general. Mr. Debele drove the visitors down to Duke's Farm near Raritan, and also drove to Cranford on Saturday evening to witness the carnival, with which they were delighted, and returned by moonlight. The entire party were so much pleased with their visit that it will not be surprising if they summer here every year, especially near Pine Grove Farm. The Debele's being originally Philadelphians they knew just how to entertain and show their friends a good time.

HOME FOR THE NURSES.

CONTRACTS AWARDED FOR THE ADDITIONS TO THE HOSPITAL.

To Accommodate Pupils as Well as the Working Corps of the Hospital—Will Give More Room For the Patients.

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital met at the Public Library, Monday evening to receive the report of the committee on the proposed home for nurses. There was a quorum present, notwithstanding the fact that a number of the members are away. The committee reported the various bids and went over the plans the second time. They were instructed to accept the lowest bid and go on with the work at once. The new building will contain thirteen bed rooms, beside a parlor, dining room, and other equipments necessary for housekeeping. It is expected that the building will be completed and ready for use by January 1, 1897. The accommodations provided will relieve the pressure on the hospital and permit the accommodation of a considerable number of patients. During a large part of this year the nurses have been obliged to give up their room for patients, but the new building will obivate this difficulty. The building will be a two story structure, 42x35, and will be placed at the western end of the hospital plot. It will be in the same general style as the regular building. It is designed, not only to accommodate the working corps of the hospital, but pupil nurses who are receiving their education as such. It is expected, too, that the building will become a central place for professional nurses, where they can be secured through the proper course. Five bids were received from responsible contractors and the lowest bid was accepted. The name of the successful bidder is withheld for the present. However, William Pangborn has the contract for the mason work. The building will be a handsome and substantial one and an ornament to the west end. Other business of importance was discussed, but action was deferred until the other members return from their vacation.

FOUGHT FOR A STEAK.

"Slippery Jim" Drew a Razor, the Constable a Club.

He calls himself James Fitzpatrick, but the people of Westfield call him "Slippery Jim." He had lots of liquor aboard yesterday when he went into Woodruff's butcher shop and demanded a porterhouse steak.

When it was refused he started in to demolish the shop. Constable Todd went at him with a club. James fought back with a razor. He stripped off his clothes and said he would die before he went to the lockup. He was put in a strait jacket, and Justice Ingram sentenced him to Elizabeth jail for ninety days.

Justice Newcorn's Court.

The case of McVey against Johnson has been adjourned in Justice Newcorn's court for one week. The case of the Sherman Outfitting Company against Kennedy was tried this morning and judgment was rendered for the plaintiff. Justice Newcorn issued a summons this morning in the case of Pratt et ux against Vetterlein et ux, which is returnable September 10th.

Fishermen's Luck.

"Al" Vail, otherwise known as the "Quaker," Wm. Pierson and James Manning constituted a party of fishermen from this city to Canarsie, yesterday. They had unusual luck, for when they started for home they did not have enough fish to make a respectable showing, and to make matters worse there was none on the dock to sell. So they landed here empty-handed.

Husband and Wife Don't Agree.

On complaint of Mrs. Geo. Voehl a warrant was issued Monday by Justice Newcorn for the arrest of George Voehl, her husband. The complaint charges the defendant with assault and battery, and he was held in the sum of $200 to appear before the Grand Jury. Lawyer Angleman represents the plaintiff and W. A. Coddington the defendant.

To be Tried For Illegal Liquor Selling.

The trial of Nathan Richmond and Samuel Kline, on the charge of illegal liquor selling on Sunday, will take place at the city court rooms tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

Will Recuperate at Somerville.

Richard Barnes, from the mountains, who was arrested by Chief Wilson Monday night for being drunk and disorderly, was sent to Somerville yesterday for ten days.

WEDDED THIS AFTERNOON.

Pretty Nuptial Event Solemnized in a North Plainfield Home.

A very pretty September wedding was solemnized this afternoon at 3:30 when Miss Mary F. Giese, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Giese, of Elm street, became the wife of Caspar Waglow, of New Market. Rev. George Hauser, pastor of the German Reformed church, performed the ceremony in the presence of a large number of guests. The decorations consisted of maiden hair fern and golden rod. The former was prettily festooned around the ceiling and in the centre was suspended a wedding bell. Attached to the clapper, which was made of golden rod, was a broad band of satin ribbon, and, as the bridal party entered, Ruth Stuffer, of Westfield, a cousin of the bride, rang the bell. The bridemald was Miss Ida Giese, of Rahway, and the best-man was Conrad W. Giese, of Elizabeth, both cousins of the bride. The bride was richly gowned in a pearl gray custom with chiffon and pearl trimmings. She also carried a bouquet of bridal roses. The gown worn by the bridesmaid was pink silk with spangled trimmings, and she carried pink roses.

The bride entered the parlor leaning on the arm of her father, while the wedding march was being rendered on the piano by Mrs. Stauffer, of Westfield. Congratulations followed the ceremony, after which a sumptnous wedding dinner was served. Mr. and Mrs. Waglow left six about o'clock amid a shower of rice for Asbury Park where they will spend the honeymoon. On their return they will take up their residence with the bride's parents on Elm street. Among the gifts was a beautiful and costly dinner set from the clerks in White's store where the bride was formerly engaged, a handsome silver water pitcher most artistically engraved, a beautiful clock and many other articles, both of costly and unique design. Guests were present from New York, Brooklyn, Elizabeth, Westfield, Newark, Orange, Rahway, New Market and Plainfield.

The committee from the Exempt Firemen having in charge the reception and entertainment of the New York Volunteer Firemen, who will visit this city October 3d, met last evening and were notified that the New York firemen had accepted their invitation.

In all, there will be 210 guests present and they will bring their double-deck hand engine, also a band of music. A short parade will be held, after which a collation will be served in the Cycle Academy. Among those invited to participate are the members of Warren Engine Company of the borough.

The committee will hold another meeting this evening.

The parade will be reviewed from the Hotel Grenada balcony.

Harvest Thanksgiving Sale.

The local corps of the Salvation Army is making a hard effort to clear away their indebtedness, and to that end they have arranged to conduct a Harvest Thanksgiving sale on September 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th. For this sale thay solicit gifts of any thing used on the household table, a list of which is printed on the bills which are being distributed about town. The gifts will be received at the barracks on West Second street next Saturday and the sale will open on Labor Day. Ensign and Mrs. Brewer are the officers in charge.

DISCORD IN SOMERSET

DEMOCRATIC LEADERS AT VARIANCE WITH THE NATIONAL PLATFORM.

The Chairman of the County Committee Says That He Will Resign—James J. Meehan to Be the Leader.

The Newark News publishes the following about the political situation in Somerset county:

Scarcely a single Democratic leader of prominence supports the Chicago platform. Alvah A. Clark, ex-Speaker James J. Bergen, ex-Judge Bartine, Joseph W. Ballentine, George Pace, ex-Senator Wm. J. Keys, are among those who openly declare they will not vote for Bryan and Sewall.

The chairman of the Democratic County Committee is Joseph W. Ballentine, a wealthy carriage manufacturer of Somerville. "Nearly one-half the Democrats in Somerset county," said Mr. Ballentine, "repudiate the ticket. I shall not vote for Mr. Bryan. I do not like the platform upon which he stands, nor the company he keeps. I shall resign as chairman of the county committee at the first opportunity, which will be at the county convention. I would not be surprised if the Republican majority in Somerset would reach 1,500 or even more." Mr. Ballentine denounced the Chicago platform as un-Democratic, and said that he did not see how any self-respecting member of the party could support it. The course Mr. Ballentine will take is shown by a large flag bearing the names of McKinley and Hobart which floats from a rope stretched between his factory and a building across the street.

William H. Long, secretary of the Republican County Committee, placed the Republican majority at 1,000, and said that there is no Republican defection in the county. This, too, was the opinion of Editor Charles H. Bateman, of the Somerville Unionist-Gazette. County Clerk Frank Somers said that he had made a canvass of the county and had only found nine free silver Republicans, while in the townships of Bridgewater, North Plainfield and Franklin alone, nearly 300 Democrats were found who would not vote for Bryan.

The leadership of the free silver Democrats seems to have fallen upon the shoulders of former Prosecutor James J. Meehan, and if the party do not make a good showing in the county it will be through no fault of his.

"I am very much pleased with the outlook," said Mr. Meehan, "the masses of the party are thoroughly loyal to the ticket and will not follow the men whom they have formerly honored in deserting the party's candidates. Throughout the country districts the farmers are enthusiastic and many Republicans have come over to Bryan. At Neshanic, in Hillsborough township, a number of Republicans have joined the Bryan and Sewall Club; in Warren at least a dozen Republicans are for free silver and the same is true in Montgomery. I know at least twenty-five Republicans who have assured me that they will vote for Bryan. It is my firm belief that the Chicago ticket will get the votes of very many workingmen who believe that neither party has ever cared for their interests and who see in Bryan's nomination the prospect of a new era in our Government. I hardly expect to see Somerset go for Bryan, but if it gives more than 200 Republican majority I shall be very much disappointed."

Lawyer Geore W. Anderson agreed with Mr. Meehan that the silver prospects looked very bright in Somerset, and that the Chicago ticket was sure to receive many converts from the Republicans.

Neither the Somerset Messenger nor the Somerset Democrat, the two party organs published at Somerville, has as yet came out for the ticket, and the Bound Brook Democrat is the only newspaper in the county that is supporting Bryan and Sewall. It is believed, however, that the others will give at least perfunctory support to the electoral ticket named by the Democratic State convention.

At Raritan, which is really a suburb of Somerville, are located the large cloth mills owned by Adolph Mack, who is one of the Republican Presidential nominees. This mill employs a large number of Italians, who have been formed into a McKinley and Hobart Club. It is claimed by Democrats that this action of the Italians will drive many Republicans into the Democratic ranks, owing to the feeling which exists against the Italians, who, it is said, have taken the places of American workmen at much lower wages.

The Handle of a Famous Pump Gone.

Some unknown person, either with malicious intent or otherwise, has broken off the handle of the town pump at Pumptown. So those thirsty horses that pass there now have to go dry.

LI HUNG ON RELIGION

Christianity and Confucianism Likened by the Viceroy.

THE SOUL AN UNKNOWN MYSTERY

American Missionaries Have Done Good Work in China, He Says, and Do Not Interfere in Political Affairs of the Country—Personally Grateful.

New York, Sept. 2.—Li Hung Chang and suite are the guests of Brooklyn to-day. They were escorted by a squad of mounted police to the centre of the bridge where they were met by a squad of mounted Brooklyn police, who escorted the distinguished Chinaman to the Brooklyn terminal. Here Mayor Wurster and other officials of the city of churches welcomed the visitors to the city. The programme for the day includes a visit to the navy yard, drive through Prospect park and a reception at the Union League club.

Li Receives Christian Workers.

One of the most interesting audiences which the Chinese ambassador has held since his arrival in this city was that accorded yesterday afternoon to a delegation representing American missions in China. Rev. Dr. Ellinwood, the Chinese statesman, was the spokesman for the visitors. He presented Li with a lengthy address expressing gratitude with the treatment accorded American missionaries in China by the government, and pointing out the good results of the work undertaken. In closing, the address said: "Permit us to express anew the satisfaction which we have felt in being permitted to meet your excellency, and to thank you for your repeated kindnesses to our missionaries. We thank the Great Father of mankind that he has spared your life in the midst of many perils; that he has permitted you to be of such eminent service to your country in many trying emergencies, which few men of any nation could have met with such great ability and success. And we commend you to his care as you return to your distant home, where you will enjoy the consciousness that not only your countrymen, but all mankind unite in honoring your name."

The Viceroy's Reply.

Through the interpreter, the viceroy said: "I am very thankful for the kind sentiments you have expressed. I highly appreciate the philanthropic objects which you have always in view in impressing the souls, minds and physique of the Chinese. I fully appreciate that all the American missionaries in China have disinterested motives. They only work for the good of mankind. It affords me great pleasure to acknowledge the grateful welcome to the country offered to me by you as the representatives of various boards and societies who have engaged in China in exchanging our ideas of the greatest of all truths which concern the immortal destinies of men. In the name of my august master, the emperor of China, I beg to tender to you his best thanks for your approval and appreciation of the protection afforded to the American missionaries in China. What we have done and how little we have done on our part is nothing but the duties of our government; while the missionaries, as you have so ably expressed, have not sought for pecuniary gains at the hands of our people. They have not been secret emissaries of diplomatic schemes. Their labors have no political significanse, and last, not least, they have not interfered with or usurped the rights of the territorial authorities.

Christianity and Confucianism.

"In a philosophical point of view, as far as I am able to appreciate, Christianity does not differ much from Confucianism, as the golden rule is expressed in a positive form in one, while it is expressed in a negative form in the other. Logically speaking, whether these two forms of expressing the same truth cover exactly the same ground or not I leave it to the investigations of those who have more philosophical tastes. It is, at the present, enough to conclude that there exists not much difference between the wise sayings of the two greatest teachers on the foundations of which the whole structure of the two systems of morality is built. As man is composed of soul, intellect and body, I highly appreciate that your eminent boards, in your arduous and much esteemed work in the field of China, have neglected none of the three. I need not say much about the first, being an unknown mystery of which our great Confucius had only an active knowledge. As for intellect, you have started numerous educational establishments which have served as the best means to enable our countrymen to acquire a fair knowledge of the modern arts and of the west. As for the material part of our constitution, your societies have started hospitals and dispensaries to save not only the soul, but also the bodies of our countrymen. I have also to add that in the time of famine in some of the provinces you have done your best to the greatest number of sufferers to keep their bodies and souls together.

Tenders His Personal Thanks.

"Before I bring my reply to a conclusion, I have only two things to mention: The first, the opium smoking, being a curse to the Chinese population, your societies have tried their best, not only as anti-opium societies, but to afford the best means to stop the craving for opium; and also to receive none as your converts who are opium smokers. I have to tender, in my own name, my best thanks for your most effective prayers to God to spare my life when it was imperilled by the assassin's bullet, and for your most kind wishes which you have just now so ably expressed in the interest of my sovereign, my country, and people."

Li's Visit to Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Sept. 2.—Mayor Warwick last evening received a telegram from Gen. Ruger, who has been designated to accompany Li Hung Chang during the ambassador's stay in this country, regarding the visit to Philadelphia to-morrow. The general inquired about the plans for the reception of the viceroy, and the city executive in his reply detailed the arrangements that have been made for the entertainment of the distinguished visitor and his suite. By the original itinerary the party planned to spend only eight hours in Philadelphia, leaving for Washington by an early train, and attending a dinner there that evening. This was changed, however. Li Hung Chang consented to stop over until Friday morning. Later he changed his mind, and the original programme will be carried out.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS REVOLT.

Rebels Seize and Barricade Several Villages—The Situation Serious.

Madrid, Sept. 2.—Advices from Manila say that the rebels who are endeavoring to secure the separation of the Philippine islands from Spain and who made an unsuccessful attack upon the outposts of Manila last Sunday night have seized and barricaded several villages. In the fighting which preceded the capture of the villages the Spaniards lost one captain killed and several privates wounded. Gen. Blenco, governor-general of the Philippine islands, has ordered all the available reinforcements to proceed to the scene of the fighting. The rebel party consists principally of Indians who have been goaded to rebel by the treatment they have received at the hands of Spanish secret societies.

Important Postal Decision.

Washington, Sept. 2.—Judge Thomas, assistant secretary for the postoffice department, has decided that "it is unlawful to send an ordinary letter by express or otherwise outside of the mails unless it be enclosed in a government stamped envelope. It is also unlawful to inclose a letter in an express package unless it pertains wholly to the contents of the package."

Typhoid Fever in New Haven.

Could Not Stand Anti-Semite Attacks.

Vienna, Sept. 2.—Mautner von Markof, a brewer of this city and one of the wealthiest of the manufacturing class in Austria, committed suicide yesterday. Attacks by anti-Semite journals are believed to have led to the suicide.

ABOUT AMERICANS.

Kansas City has a generous citizen, Mr. Thomas H. Swope, who has just donated to that commonwealth a public park of 1,300 acres.

Miss Edith Collins is the girl of the hour. She is a $7,000,000 heiress and weighs less by $2,816,000 than her whole fortune in $100 bills.

There are seven members in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan B. Hutchins, of Dover, Del., and their aggregate weight is 1,706 pounds. The heaviest weighs 295 pounds and the lightest 182.

James Boyle, Maj. McKinley's private secretary, is a Canadian by birth. He was on the St. Louis Globe-Democrat some years ago and afterward on the Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette.

Ex-Senator Bradbury, of Augusta, Me., now 94 years of age, attended a meeting of the trustees of Bowdoin college recently and enjoyed the dance on the green as much as any of the boys.

THE RAILROADS.

The railways of the world carry over 40,000,000 passengers weekly.

A new harbor at Heysham, in Lancashire, to take the place of that at Morecombe, is under consideration. The Midland railway is ready to spend $2,500,000 on it.

Warrensburg, Me., has a rapid transit system which is somewhat unique, in this country at least. A car is run over the street car line once a month merely for the sake of preserving the charter.

Golf players are to have special privileges on some of the English railway lines. They will receive certificates entitling them to return tickets for a single fare when the distance is over 30 miles and for a fare and a quarter when it is less.

John Hardy, the inventor of the vacuum brake, died recently in Vienna, where for many years he had been employed by the state railroads. He was born in 1820, worked for a time under George Stephenson, and is believed to have been the last survivor of his assistants.

ANIMAL ODDITIES.

A cat with eight feet belongs to Miss Edna Webster, of Delaware, O.

A Shetland pony colt which weighs only 23 pounds is owned by Capt. Langley, of St. Joseph, Mich.

It is stated that a dragon-fly may be converted into a scarecrow for mosquitoes. Two or three dried dragonflies suspended with fine silk thread under the roof of an open porch keep off the little bloodsuckers.

Three cows belonging to L. I. Bidwell, of Tecumseh, Mich., died suddenly and mysteriously. A post-mortem examination disclosed lead poisoning. Then it was discovered that they had drank water from old paint cans.

The vital spark in tortoises is very strong. There is a record of a tortoise which lived six months after its brains had been removed. Another, which had suffered decapitation, showed life in the severed head three days afterward.

Cures Talk

"Cures talk" in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla, as for no other medicine. Its great cures recorded in truthful, convincing language of grateful men and women, constitute its most effective advertising. Many of these cures are marvelous. They have won the confidence of the people; have given Hood's Sarsaparilla the largest sales in the world, and have made necessary for its manufacture the greatest laboratory on earth. Hood's Sarsaparilla is known by the cures it has made—cures of scrofula, salt rheum and eczema, cures of rheumatism, neuralgia and weak nerves, cures of dyspepsia, liver and kidney troubles, catarrh and malaria.

Such Cures as This Prove Merit.

"My little nephew was a plump and healthy baby until a year and a half old, then sores broke out behind his ears and spread rapidly over his head, hands and body. A physician said the trouble was scrofula humor in the blood. The child became one complete sore. We had to restrain his hands to keep him from scratching the sores. We were induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and in a short time he had more life. He improved rapidly, his skin became entirely clear of sores and he is now a healthy child." MRS. FLORENCE ANDREWS, Clearfield, Iowa.

THE ARMY.

This year's recruits for the British army number 270,000, which is considerably more than the whole British army.

Crete has adopted as its flag against Turkey the white and blue stripes of Greece, with the eagle of Byzantium in the center.

A new magazine rifle is in use in Italy. It contains six cartridges, can be loaded and fired in 15 seconds, and sends a bullet through a three-foot brick wall at a distance of a quarter of a mile.

France having decided to remodel her artillery and to provide the army with cannon of a new pattern, is now thinking of substituting for the Lebel rifle a new rifle with a caliber of 6½ millimeters.

Guardiamarina (Midshipman) Riquelme, the fourth 30-knot torpedo destroyer built for Chili, was launched recently from Laird's yard at Birkenhead, making the eighth 30-knot boat they have built in nine months.

Compressed food, which has proved a failure in our army, was found useful to the British expedition to Ashantee. The desiccated soup was not damaged by the climate.

Buenos Ayres is going to erect a monument to Garibaldi. It will be appropriate, as Garibaldi spent 12 years of his life in fighting for South American freedom, but is probably thought of on account of the large proportion of Italians in the the population of the city.

The latest invention to facilitate field operations is the typewriter bicycle. This consists of a typewriter mounted on a serviceable wheel, which can follow the movements of an army through an ordinary stretch of country.

New boilers were put into the British cruiser Blake recently, and on the trial trip there was an explosion that killed one man and scalded five others. One expert explained that there was plenty of water in the boilers, but the plate of the combustion chamber had fallen. The next expert swore that there was no water in the boiler, the water feed being defective. The admiralty reserves its decision.

ART AND MUSIC.

La Blache, the great basso, had a voice so strong that on several occasions it cracked the window glass in the room where he was practicing.

Violins are very susceptible to change of the weather. The strings of a violin always become more taut, and thus give a sharper tone, when a storm is coming on.

The famous collection of violins owned by the late R. D. Hawley, of Hartford, has been sold to a California man for $20,000. The collection consists of 12 instruments, which are among the finest in the world.

It has been arranged to erect a memorial to the late Christina Rossetti in Christ church, Woburn square, London, which she attended for nearly 20 years. Sir Edward Burne-Jones has consented to design a series of paintings for the reredos.

A pencil drawing, partly colored, of George, prince of Wales, 1798, by Richard Cosway, the miniaturist, brought $420 in London recently; another of George in 1772 brought $550, while one of Caroline of Brunswick, his princess, brought $435.

Prince Colonna di Sciarra has made a compromise with the Italian government. All of the family pictures painted by Italian artists are placed at the disposal of the government and will not leave Italy; pictures by foreigners the prince may sell to whom he pleases.

Cream Shape.

A delicate dessert is made as follows: Whip a pint of cream to a stiff froth, adding to the last a tablespoonful of powdered sugar and either a tablespoonful of essence of vanilla or two dessert-spoonfuls of any liquor you please. Have ready some good loaf gelatine (one-half ounce), previously dissolved in a gill of boiling water, and as this cools and is just beginning to set, whip it in lightly to the whipped cream, and as this thickens turn it into the mold to set, leaving the mold in a cool place on ice. The secret of whipping cream is to have it cold.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

GRAND FLORAL BALL

Dazzling Display at Convention Hall, Saratoga, Last Night.

THE EVENT AN ARTISTIC TRIUMPH

Beautiful Women, Gallant Men, Superb Jewels, Dainty Costumes, Sweet Music and Selections from Flora's Realm Produce a Scene of Dreamland.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Sept. 2.—Convention hall, the scene of many a social and political triumph, added another to its long list of successes in the grand floral ball last night, which was auxiliary to the floral pageant of the afternoon. For days the hall has been in the hands of a corps of decorators, who, under the direction of a skilled artist, transformed it into a veritable tropical garden. To accomplish this several carloads of greens, trailing vines and cedar trees from the Adirondacks were used. In all there was a perfect blending of color, while the ozone from the forest trees and the daintier fragrance of the flowers mingled with the heavier perfumes of those who occupied the vast auditorium. Tier upon tier of lovely women, dainty in silk and satin and glittering with jewels, attended by gallant men, filled the immense building. In addition to the electric lights, countless numbers of dainty fairy lamps were used, adding much to the picturesque dreamland effect. In one of the side galleries of the stage an orchestra sent forth sweet music for the waltz, while in a corresponding gallery directly opposite a band of brass rendered the livelier two-step and polka music.

A Poet's Dream Ably Depicted.

There were present fully six thousand leaders of society from all parts of the world, who are congregated here at this time. It was a poet's dream ably and beautifully depicted, with all the grace and charm that surrounds childhood and womanhood. The kaleidoscopic pictures formed were beautiful beyond description, dazzling beyond comparison. It was like a king winter holding carnival in tropical gardens. For an hour "frost maidens," "snowflakes," "snow elves" and "icicles" held sway amid flowers and forests of cedar and evergreen, only halting in their play when the luminous Polar star, gorgeous in attire, appeared among them to join in their mad revelry. It was at the close of the orchestra programme of catchy numbers that there came an unexpected pause. Then to the strains of dreamy music there glided upon the floor, as from an unseen world, a score of "frost maidens" with silver-bound white draperies and spangled veils of light blue gauze and wings of silver tissue. As they treaded the measures of dainty music the picture was in itself beautiful.

The star, Miss Margaret Tynan of New York, was a vision of loveliness, in a costume of white gauze with a cloud of silver white, a star of diamonds on her head, and drapery of silver tissue from neck to waste. At the close of the dance came the final galopade, a combination of intricate figures cleverly executed. The effect of the scintillating glitter and the final tableaux, the arch of icicles, the Polar star encircled with snowflakes, with a background of frost maidens and snow elves, formed a picture of surpassing beauty, and as the masters and misses who peopled it glided away the vast audience broke out into long-continued and appreciative applause, which continued for several minutes. After a brief intermission there came the inspiring strains of a popular grand march, the floor rapidly filled with terpsichorean devotees and the third annual floral ball was on. Until long after midnight was the revelry continued.

Chinese Coal in California.

San Francisco, Sept. 2.—The American bark Colorado, just arrived in port from China, brought a mixed sample cargo of anthracite and manufactured coal, mined and made in the Tonquin district. This coal can be brought into the country at a profit so long as the present tariff conditions exist, and a coal-dealing firm of this city promises to push the Chinese fuel on the coast market at prices greatly below those paid for the Pennsylvania and Welsh coal of the same character.

White Squadron Starts for Fishers Island.

New York, Sept. 2.—Last evening the white squadron got under way from their anchorage off Tompkinsville and proceeded to sea. The flagship New York led, followed by the Raleigh, Texas, Maine, Columbia, Massachusetts and Newark. Later the Indiana, Cincinnati and Amphritite followed. The squadron has been ordered to Fishers island.

Fatal Building Collapse.

New York, Sept. 2.—A two-story building on the northeast corner of 147th street and Amsterdam avenue, owned and occupied by James Lenihan as a saloon, collapsed yesterday afternpon. John Graham, 45 years old, a laborer, was crushed under a falling beam and killed.

Robbed Poor Italians.

VERMONT ELECTIONS

Republicans Carry the State by About 37,000 Majority.

UNUSUAL INTEREST OVER THE RESULT

Returns from Seventy-five Towns Show a Net Gain of 7,147 in the Republican Majority over the Vote in 1892.

White River Junction, Vt., Sept. 2.—Great interest centered in the elections in this state yesterday, as an active campaign was conducted by the two leading parties, and almost entirely upon national issues, although each adopted somewhat different methods, and the outcome was looked upon as a straw to indicate the direction of the wind in November. The returns so far received indicate a majority of about 37,000 for the republican ticket. Returns from fifty towns give Grout, rep., 12,404; Jackson, dem., 2,864; Battel, pop., 140; Whittemore, pro., 169. Grout's plurality, 9,740; majority over all, 9,411. The same towns in the fall election of 1892 gave Fuller, rep., 8,828; Smalley, dem., 3,938; all others, 439. Fuller's plurality, 4,912; majority over all, 4,473. These 50 towns show a gain in the republican vote of 3,576 or 40 per cent., and a loss in the democratic vote of 1,252 or 32 per cent. The increase in the republican majority is 4,938 over that of 1892, a gain of over 110 per cent. The towns above do not include the larger ones, as follows: Bennington, Middlebury, St. Albans, St. Johnsbury or the cities of Barre, Burlington, Rutland and Vergennes. Returns from 75 towns give Grout (R.), 17,908; Jackson (D.), 3,919; Battel (pop.), 214; Whittemore (pro.), 228. Grout's plurality, 13,989; majority over all, 13,547. Same towns in 1892 gave Fuller (R.) 12,757; Smalley (D.), 5,736; all others, 611. Net gain in republican majority, 7,147, showing that percentage gain is being maintained, and if it continues the republican majority will be about 37,000 in the state.

Hyde Park, Vt., Sept. 2.—L. F. Butts, republican, is clearly elected representative. Governor vote—Grout, 285; Johnson, 128; Sattell, 69; prohibition, 3—the largest vote ever cast in this town and the largest majority.

CIVIL SERVICE LIST SWELLED.

Ten Thousand War Department Employes Brought Under Its Operations.

Washington, Sept. 2.—Ten thousand employes of the war department were classified in the civil service yesterday in accordance with the sweeping order of the president of May 6, which extended the operations of the law to practically all government employes except those laborers whose work does not require any great amount of technical skill or intelligence above an ordinary degree. The delay in making the classification in the war department was due to the tremendous difficulty involved in including all those on the pay-roll of the engineer's division, consisting of about 5,000 persons employed in various capacities, some of only a temporary nature, on river and harbor improvement at out of the way points throughout the country. In many of these places the work goes on in summer only and at others in winter only, but a provision has been inserted in the rules to permit the furloughing without pay of efficient men, who can thus be re-employed without examination when operations are resumed within a year. The civil service commission has also perfected arrangements whereby lists of eligibles are available hereafter for all vacancies that may occur. The sweeping effect of the order, as broadly interpreted by Secretary Lamont to include even laborers who perform duties requiring a comparatively mediocre intelligence, is shown by the fact that in his own office but two persons, the confidential clerk to himself and Assistant Secretary Doe, remain outside the classified lists, these being specifically exempt from examination by law. Even the chief clerk of the department and all the heads of divisions are placed under the protection of the civil service statute.

Around the World in a Cockleshell.

Milwaukee, Sept. 2.—Captain Adolph Frietsch, who crossed the Atlantic a year ago in the cockleshell Nina, started at 3 p. m. yesterday on a voyage around the world in his little sailboat Schlitz Glebe. He will sail down the lake to Chicago, pass through the drainage canal to the Mississippi river, down to the gulf of Mexico, across the isthmus of Panama by rail, and then sail to San Francisco. His voyage will consume four years. He goes alone.

Irish Convention.

Dublin, Sept. 2.—The American and Canadian delegates to the Irish convention issued a statement this morning repudiating the assertions of a section of the Dublin press that they were pledged in favor of Mr. Dillon for the leadership. The delegates declare that they are wholly unbiased as regards the choice of a party leader.

Liberty Bicycle Company Failure.

Newark, N. J., Sept. 2.—Receiver Hardin's first report of the affairs of the Liberty Cycle company of Rockaway, N. J., and Bridgeport, Conn., submitted in the chancery court, shows fictitious values of $46,480.67, placed on assets claimed as $106,480.67 and liabilities amounting to $183,563.93.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

(Furnished by Weather Observer Neagle.)

Generally Fair Tonight and Thursday; Warmer Thursday Morning.

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 73 Degrees.

The call for the Democratic primaries in this city is published in another column.

Mat Quay is now at the head of the Republican National Committee in the Eastern States.

In the news columns today, The Press publishes some political gossip concerning Somerset county. Both sides of the Democracy are given.

The Trenton Daily Globe, as a Democratic organ, has made its appearance. It has thirteen columns of editorial and one column of news. We fear that it will not revolve very long at that proportion.

The New Jersey delegation to the sound money convention at Indianapolis is headed by W. J. Curtis, of Summit. He says that a money plank similar to the one in the May convention of the New Jersey Democrats will be satisfactory to the delegation.

I have been a candidate for political office once or twice, but failed to connect, and I have just found out that I was defeated because I had no crease in my pants.—J. E. Martine.

If Mr. Martine has his way he will be a candidate again this year. In that case his efforts at connection will fall worse than ever, creases or no creases.—N. Y. Tribune.

This remark in Mr. Martine's speech was prompted from a statement in the New York Times that Mr. Bryan appeared before the convention "with his pants bagging at the knees." Again we authoratively state that Mr. Martine is not a candidate for office this year. His zeal is not from selfish ambition or hope of political advancement.

As an evidence to what an extent the U S franking privilege is abused by the distribution of political documents, The Press yesterday received a mass of partisan literature bearing the compliment of Senator J. H. Gallinger of New Hampshire. Ordinarily, it is the custom of members of Congress to distribute documents to only those people residing in the territory which they represent, unless expressly solicited—and this The Press certainly have not done—but the stuff came along just the same. It is a clear case of beating Uncle Sam out of the sale of a two cent postage stamp.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation, can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

A KILLARNEY IDYL.

Phelim McCaul was not in a particularly good humor as he strode along the rough mountain path whistling a faction tune between his teeth and cutting savagely at the wayside brambles that shivered in the sharp east wind, which, appropriately enough, was heralding the Lenten season down the famous Gap of Dunloe.

Judged from Mr. McCaul's standpoint, the situation was a tantalizing one. Here he was, a man of 34, with a tidy bit put by, a snug farm and no incumbrance whatever, actually unmarried this blessed Ash Wednesday eve, and likely to remain so during the coming 12 months, all owing to the unreasonableness of one Thady O'Rafferty, whose daughter, Mollie, Phelim sought in marriage, the negotiations having been broken off that very evening for positively the last time.

Had Phelim been a trifle older, or a trifle more philosophic, he would have probably told himself the disappointment was simply a blessing in disguise, but, being still young and not at all a philosopher, he chafed fiercely at the broken match and heartily cursed Mr. O'Rafferty as he went.

Absorbed in bitter reflections, he did not hear the approaching rattle of gig wheels behind, and it was not until a friendly voice had thrice shouted his name from lungs rendered stentorian by mountain air that Phelim knew he had a fellow traveler on the road. Thus challenged, he faced around and recognizing his interlocutor as an acquaintance named Lanigan, who rented a farm a mile or so from his own place, came to a halt.

"Yerrah, Phelim, boy, where are ye goin' at that rate this hour o' night?" asked the new-comer, accommodating his horse's pace to that of the young man as they moved forward together. "Sure, I thought 'tis down colloquing with Mollie O'Rafferty ye'd be this minnit instead of flyin' all over the country like thistledown—"

"That's all off now," replied Phelim, sulkily, not well pleased at Lanigan's observation, but too true an Irishman to resist the temptation of chattering about his own affairs. "The mane little blaggard of a father wouldn't give a penny more than 200 quid with the girl, and he after as good as promisin' 300 a fortnight ago, an' I knowin' he had 800 lodged in the bank in Killarney!"

"Is it truth ye're tellin' me?"

"Oh, divil recave the lie, an' divil recave the ha'penny more he'd advance; an', I, after swearin' to his face I'd not marry any girl under 500!"

"Right y'are, I like your sperret—"

"Sure if I did, I'd be disgraced for ever—lavin' meeself down like that an' there's no fear me wife 'ud respect me either."

"Ob begob, I suppose he thought that as ye were dacent ye'd the soft vein in ye too," commented the other, cracking his whip. "I suppose he believed that since Miss Mollie was at the convent for a year an' could play the pianny, the head 'ud be turned on yer shoulders."

"Faith, then he never made a bigger mistake in his life," retorted the rejected suitor, knitting his short, straight brows, "there's not such a differ between wan girl an' another as all that, an' 'twould take a keener man than Thady Rafferty to fool me anyway—himself an' his daughter, the cross-eyed—"

"I don't wonder at yer feelin' hurt," interposed Lanigan smoothly, as he reined up, for they had reached a spot where the road branched off in different directions, "but never say die, there's as good fish in the say as ever was caught, an' if ye're willin', ye can still be a married man this very Shrove!"

Phelim laughed bitterly. He was in no mood for wooing now.

"I have three daughters yonder," pursued the other, pointing in the direction of the undulating uplands rolling away to the heights beyond, where the Purple mountain soared into the deepening twilight, "an' they hear tell of you Phelim, though I don't know if any of 'em met you lately, for they're great stay-at-homes, but they have all a wish for you, an' I don't think 'twould be hard for ye to put the 'come hether' on any of 'em; so if ye're in earnest, Phelim McCaul, come along with me this blessid minnit, an' I'll give you the pick of the three, an' I'll send across for father Pat O'Hara—he's only a couple of fields away—an' he'll buckle ye in a jiffey, since the time is so short."

Phelim's darkening brow cleared a little; natural cunning was struggling with wounded pride, and that short-sighted longing for swift revenge which impels many a rejected wooer to fling himself away upon the first girl he meets, in order to enjoy the triumph of what is usually but a Phyric victory—pride won.

"I'll go," he cried suddenly, wheeling round; "me father, God rest his soul, often said ye were a dacent man, an' sure the whole parish knows there isn't the dirty dhrop in any of ye!"

"Right you are, me bouchal," responded Mr. Lanigan, promptly; "that's the talk, an' before long you'll have a chance of judgin' whether Thady O'Rafferty has all the nice girls in the country. So just jump up here alongside o' me an' we'll be over there like winkin'."

Phelim obeyed and a quick trot along the winding road presently brought them to the group of whitewashed outhouses surrounding Lanigan's cottage, whose lighted windows shone hospitably through a mountain mist.

Here the proprietor begged his prospective son-in-law to wait while he went in and explained matters to the girls.

"They're bashful, poor things, since they lost the mother," he remarked, confidentially, "an' maybe they'd be a bit put out if they saw you comin' in on them all of a suddint."

To this arrangement Phelim made no objection, and Mr. Lanigan, hastily passing through the kitchen, went straight to the parlor, where, as he expected, he found the three Misses Lanigan placidly engaged in knitting or sewing.

At the entrance of their parent the three young ladies rose to greet him, the eldest, Kitty, a girl with dove-like eyes, limping slightly as she crossed the room.

"Girls alive, don't be flustered," said Lanigan, breathlessly. "Cissy, stir up the fire; be quiet, Peg, there's a young man outside lookin' for a wife; he must get married this Shrove, an' he's waitin' at the door."

"Who is he, eroo?" asked Peggy, the youngest.

"Spake aisy—Phelim McCaul," replied her father, with a nod, at once threatening and explanatory. "I'm goin' to give him the pick o' ye, an' 'tis a long time till ye get as good a chance again."

"Shure, he's runnin after Mollie O'Rafferty," interjected Cissy, pausing in her operation of sweeping the ashes under the grate.

"Yes, but that's all broke off now," answered Lanigan; "he's tearin' mad an' 'ud marry the divil's daughter for satisfaction. Here, don't waste any more time 'ramashin' there, but sit down, all of ye, about the table, Kitty here, an' Cissy at that side, an' you, Peg, at this, an' don't ye get up when he comes in, or lave on to be surprised, but be nice an' pleasant to him, for I said ye were all 'gone' after him, be jabers."

And, silencing the titter with which the young ladies took their places, he hurried out to Phelim, who, when he was introduced a few minutes later, found the maidens demurely seated in the positions indicated by their fond parent.

There was a decent interval filled by improving the conversation, while Bridgie, the handmaid of the establishment, brought in materials for punch, and it was only when the tumblers were half emptied that Mr. Lanigan broached the subject which occupied the thoughts of all.

"Now Phelim McCaul," he said, rising, and unconsciously imitating the manner of a gentleman he had once seen auctioneering cattle in Killarney, "these are my three girls, the same I was tellin' ye about. That's the eldest, Kitty; I'll give her £500, dry money, and there's the second eldest, Cissy, and she has £300 to her name; an' here's Peggy, the youngest, an' the man who takes her now will have £200. So there you are, me bouchal, an' which of 'em will you choose?"

Mr. McCaul rapidly worked a little sum in mental arithmetic; naturally, he decided on the £500 damsel, then he glanced carelessly at her face.

"I think, sir," he remarked, deferentially, "I'll take the eldest young lady, if she'll have me. The other two are very nice, indeed, an' it's not the first time I heard of 'em" (he was only dimly conscious of their existence until that evening) "but I think 'tis only proper to give her the refusin' of me."

There was a brief silence, a cinder fell from the glowing mass between the grate bars, Cissy tittered furtively, Peggy leaned forward, her elbow upon the table, her dimpled chin crushed in the palm of her hand, watching the episode with the pitiless eyes of 18. Kitty sat perfectly still, but her demure mouth was lifted at the corners, and there was a light under her half-closed lids like the gleam of a knife loosened in its sheath.

The disinterested Phelim rose and approached her.

"Will you have me, miss?" he asked, gently—perhaps at that exact instant he forgot the £500; I hope he did.

Kitty's head sank lower; there came a spot of scarlet on her cheeks.

"Oh, yes, indeed," she whispered.

"Begor, that settles it!" cried Lanigan, drawing a quick breath, "she's me own favorite child, the first of the clutch, Phelim, an' I say it without any shame to the others, you've got the pick of the bunch. Sure, I don't know what we'll do at all, at all, without her; but, anyway, I'm glad she's settled, and has a good husband, an' since she was to go, there isn't wan I'd rather have her before your own self. Take her; an' God bless ye, an' may the first boy be a bishop! Cissy, girl, run an' get up the tea; help your sister, Peggy, avick, while Phelim an' mesself settle a little bit o' business here, as our heads are cool."

And overruling a very faint protest on Mr. McCaul's part, he drew the young man into a corner, where a little, old-fashioned cabinet stood, and presently both men were deep in the examination of a bank book, greasy with long use and also a mysterious ledger which the girls knew to be opened only upon the most momentous occasions.

The examination of the books concluded, Mr. Lanigan remarked genially, as he pointed to an empty chair at the head of the table on whose snowy cloth the scanty array of household treasures was already glittering:

"I sent over for Father Pat as I was comin' in because 'tis gettin' late in the evenin' so ye can be marrid comfortably off-hand an' no bother about it; there's a fine room upstairs, an' a bed that's fit for a king, an' they're lightin' the fire there now so the smoke'll be cleared out when ye're ready, for sweet bad luck to me if either o' ye go out of this house to-night!"

Of course Kitty, who had remained in the parlor, blushingly objected, a mere matter of detail which did not affect the arrangements in the least, while Phelim, who had made up his mind that the bargain was a good one, became properly impatient, so that when Father Pat made his appearance he found an air of undeniable festivity pervading the house, the genial spirit of the hour breathing upon all, from Murteen, the oldest farm laborer, who had got drunk with amazing celerity, to the young lovers themselves as they sat hand in hand under the fostering smiles of Mr. Lanigan, while he pelted the amorous swain with appropriate badinage.

The good father, who had been that very evening anticipating a "cold shrove," was no forbidding figure in this scene of Arcadian felicity, and after some passages of decorous hilarity, the mystic knot was tied, and Phelim McCaul, though he had entered the house only an hour before a bachelor, found himself pledged for life to Catherine Philomena Lanigan.

This important ceremony having been transacted, the home of the Lanigans became a perfect focus of gaiety, a few neighbors and a blind piper, whom very instinct had led to the spot, keeping the impromptu merry-making afoot.

BOTH MEN WERE DEEP IN THE EXAMINATION OF A BANK BOOK.

Father Pat, a quaint figure not destitute of a certain pathos and dignity amid this somewhat boisterous jollity, presided in the parlor, and gave "tone" to the rejoicings; now praising Cissy's pancake, now joking with the young, now gossiping with the old, and later on taking a hand at a quiet game of "45" with Lanigan, the bridegroom, and one Corney O'Loon, a clerical student, a cousin of the family. Finally, it was he who proposed the health of the new wedded pair, in an extempore speech, winding up with a neat little quotation from Martial, which Mr. O'Loon promptly mistranslated, to his own great confusion, but the unmitigated satisfaction of his relations who secretly believed him to be a far superior scholar to the parish priest, and soon after Father Pat took his departure, going back to his lonely house, the richer by a ten pound note and a fresh experience in the ways of humanity.

When the priest had gone, dancing commenced in the great kitchen. Mrs. McCaul did not, however, take a part in the proceedings, but quietly retired to her room, while Peggy footed it with the most hopeless detrimental in the parish to the tune of the "Wind That Shook the Barley."

The next morning Phelim came downstairs in a great huff. "Jack Lanigan," he shouted, "come here if yer's a man!"

"Arrah, there ye aire me bhoy," observed Lanigan, cheerfully, "'tis light an' airy ye are; the top of the mornin' to ye, I was comin' up to know were ye awake, how's yerself?"

"See here," roared the deluded bridegroom, "why did ye give me that girl inside with wan leg longer than the other?"

"Sure, didn't you see her?" retorted the father-in-law, "an' didn't you choose her from the three of 'em?"

"I know that quite well," rejoined Phelim, his eyes sparkling, "but I didn't know she limped an' why didn't you tell me?"

"So I would, if you had only axed me," replied the other, genially, "but I didn't know 'twas to run races you wanted her!"

That was all. The two men stared at one another the fraction of a second; then Phelim went back into the nuptial chamber and closed the door gently.

Then he found the limp consisted of a wooden leg.

SLEEP IN COFFINS.

Peculiar Rules Governing the Nubins, a Strange Canadian Sect.

In all the world, probably, there is no body of religious enthusiasts whose regimen is so severe as that of the Aubians, of Montreal. Deprived of every suggestion of comfort, they sleep at night, not in beds, even of the hardest sort; not on a pallet of straw, not even on a bare board, such as pious monks of the middle ages used, but in coffins, narrow and grim and black. These grewsome resting places are not cushioned or even lined, and year in and year out the devotees occupy them, for the betterment of their souls and a more thorough forgetting of the vanities of the world.

They subsist upon bread and water, and, to vary the weird monotony of such living, they spend hours each day bent in prayer, about an altar in a darkened chapel, their necks laden with chains of great weight. The austerities prescribed by the rules even of the Carmelite nuns are trivial compared with what these women undergo.

This strangest of religious companies was founded by a Dr. Jacques, a graduate of the Victorian school of medicine. Years ago, when the smallpox epidemic killed off hundreds of the people of Montreal, Dr. Jacques had among his 1,500 patients the family of Aubin.

They were persons of good social standing, says the New York Journal, but after the disappearance of the smallpox they set about the fulfilment of vows they had made during sickness. Father, mother and five daughters, they withdrew entirely from the world, and live now in the house of Dr. Jacques, who is the head of the company.

The upper floor of the house is divided into rooms, or vells, bare of carpets or of furniture, save the unsightly coffins, plain, unpainted tables and tin washbasins. There is not a single article of bedding or of raiment, and no ornamentation except the images, to which prayer is said.

The prime motive of these recluses is to intercede for the souls of their sisters of the world whom destiny has thrown in the way of temptation. So, when the social season arrives, when parties, balls and festivals are in progress, when the word comes to them from the outside world that the spirit of carnival is abroad, and temptation and danger go hand in hand to waylay and destroy the souls of men and women, then, in the Aubin household, all the rigors and deprivations of monastic life are redoubled and the cloistered family, with their learned perceptor, Dr. Jacques, fast faithfully and spend hours of each day upon their knees in urgent prayer, their necks weighted with the heavy ox-chains, in exaggerated token of humility and self-abasement. Even in the fierce cold of a Canadian winter they have no fires in their cells.

CHARLES E. BENTLEY.

Presidential Nominee of the "Broad Gauge" Prohibitionists.

The recent prohibition convention at Pittsburgh nominated two tickets. The one headed by Joshua Levering represents the idea of constitutional prohibition, and nothing else. The other, headed by Rev. Charles E. Bentley, stand on a regular platform, advocating prohibition, free silver, woman suffrage and other isms. Mr. Bentley, the head of the "broad gauge" faction, lives in Lincoln, Neb. His earlier political faith was republicanism. He left that party and came out flatly for prohibition on a working political basis more than ten years ago. He was twice nominated for the legislature, once for governor, once for congress and once for the United States senate. He was not elected in these trials, of course, but nomination is ever a good stride toward election. In all of his races he ran ahead of his ticket, and in 1892, when he tried for governor, he led the presidential ticket 1,333 votes. He has ever been a warm temperance advocate. In 1886 he was ordained a minister of the Baptist church, and since that time has filled the functions of his calling in two churches. Mr. Bentley is 55 years old and a native of Onondaga county, N. Y. He had a liberal education in his youth and is a most attractive man. He has a charming wife and an interesting family.

THE LAND OF THE MIKADO.

Blind men in Japan carry a whistle which they blow to warn passers-by.

When the fashionable young ladies of Japan desire to make themselves very attractive they gild their lips.

Japan ranks sixth in population, being surpassed only by China, India, Russia, the United States and Germany.

In Massaloupa, a mountain resort of Japan, there is a spring of blood-heat temperature. Some of the visitors remain in this water for a whole month, with a stone on their knees to keep them from turning over in their sleep.

FASHION'S GIDDY WHIRL.

White dresses are fashionable; indeed, it is many a year since white has been in such favor.

White dresses are made of all sorts of materials. They may be of the plainest as well as the most elegant of fabrics, and they are also found in all intermediate qualities.

Silk dresses are trimmed with alternate ruffles of chiffon and the silk. This is very pretty in plain silk, and when the skirt is made in this way, the bodice is covered with chiffon and lace.

A senseless and ostentacious fashion is that of setting jewels in the backs of gloves among the meshes of the stitching. Diamonds, pearls and the birthstones of the month are used, and the result is something that is more or less tawdry. Certainly it has nothing to recommend it.

A new waist is made with the sides and back and the front below the bust snugly fitted, and finished with a plain belt. The yoke, collar and wide bands down the front are of galloon or open-work lace. The cuffs are of lace, and the tops of the sleeves appear to be simply enormous bows of the good-

COULDN'T BE BUNCOED.

His Name Was Both Mr. Smith and Mr. Brown.

The man with the old green carpetbag in his hand stood on the corner looking up and down the street as if undecided which way to go. The well-dressed stranger regarded him intently for a few minutes and then approached him.

"How are you, Mr. Smith?" he said, extending his hand.

The man with the green carpetbag refused the proffered hand and turned away with the curt reply:

"My name ain't Smith—it's Brown."

"Oh, I beg your pardon!" responded the well-dressed stranger, courteously. "I must have made a mistake."

"I reckon you did," returned the man with a green carpetbag.

At the next corner another well-dressed stranger approached with a beaming face and extended hand.

"Hullo, Brown!" he exclaimed, heartily. "You're the last man I expected to see here."

The man with the green carpetbag turned away again.

"My name ain't Brown; it's Smith," he said.

"Your name isn't Brown?" exclaimed the stranger, in surprise.

"No, it ain't. It's Smith, I tell you. I guess a man knows his own name, don't he?"

"Of course, of course."

The second well-dressed stranger shied off and a few minutes later the first appeared on the scene again.

"My dear Mr. Smith," he exclaimed, effusively, "why did you try to deny your identity to me? You ought to know that you can't fool an old friend!"

"I told you once that my name ain't Smith; it's Brown," retorted the man with the green carpetbag.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? BRYAN'S ITINERARY.

Changed So That He May Be in Chicago on Labor Day.

Columbus, O., Sept. 2.—Mr. Bryan's itinerary has been changed again. Instead of leaving Chicago on Sept. 4, he will speak there on Labor day, Sept. 7, and leave on the same day for Lincoln. The date of his arrival in Chicago is uncertain. Mr. Bryan left here this morning at 7:15 o'clock and is due to reach Toledo at 5:30 this evening. Leaving Toledo to-morrow morning, Mr. Bryan will go through Michigan to Elkhart, Ind., where he will speak in the afternoon; thence to South Bend for a speech in the evening. From South Bend to Chicago the route is uncertain. Mr. Bryan has promised to be in Lincoln on Tuesday, Sept. 8, to receive the notification committee of the national silver party, which endorsed his nomination and that of Mr. Sewall.

CLARA BARTON IN ENGLAND.

She Will Not Return Home Until Affairs in Turkey Are Entirely Settled.

Liverpool, Sept. 2.—A representative of the United Associated Presses learned last night that, despite her long experience of the past winter and her anxiety to be at home, Miss Clara Barton, president of the American Red Cross society, decided, on the eve of the sailing of the steamer Servia, by which she and her party were to return home, that she would not leave Europe so long as there remained a chance that her presence would be needed in Turkey. Miss Barton's work in Armenia was done successfully, yet she was unable to reconcile what she considers her duty with the abandonment of the suffering inhabitants of that country, and is perfectly willing if she can do any good to return there and continue her mission. In view of the present trouble Miss Barton telegraphed, intimating her willingness to return to Turkey if she can be of any service to the Armenians, and has received answers that there is apparently no immediate danger of further troubles, but that no one knows what may happen from day to day. Owing to the tenor of the telegrams received Miss Barton has decided to remain for the present in England, within a short call of the field of danger. George M. Pulman, Miss Barton's secretary and principal assistant, and Dr. Hubbell, another of her aides, returned to London last night.

CONDITION OF CROPS.

Weather Bureau's Weekly Bulletin for Eastern States.

Washington, Sept. 2.—The following is the weather bureau's special crop bulletin for eastern states: New England—Heavy rain in extreme north; rain needed in central districts; favorable ripening and harvesting weather; corn heavy; potatoes variable; apples, large crop; full seeding progressing. New York—Crops maturing rapidly; harvesting beans and hops, and tobacco cutting progressing satisfactorily; potato blight apparently increasing; buckwheat growing finely; soaking rain much needed. New Jersey—Cutting corn commenced in southern and middle sections; in northern counties plowing well advanced, but little seeding done; a great deficiency of rain fall in all sections. Pennsylvania—Crops generally well advanced and in good condition; corn and buckwheat maturing rapidly and some cut; apples abundant; pastures fair; most tobacco secured. Maryland—Late crops; corn and potatoes shortened by drought; pastures poor and ground so hard that wheat seeding progresses slowly; large yield of early corn; fair crop of tobacco being cured; peaches still abundant.

YELLOW METAL MEN

Convention of Sound Money Democrats Opens To-day.

INDIANAPOLIS FULL OF EXCITEMENT

Indications Point to the Nomination of Bragg. Although There Is an Undercurrent for Vilas—Cleveland Would Decline to Accept the Place.

Indianapolis, Sept. 2.—Crowded hotels, enthusiastic workers and brass bands—three accompaniments of a national convention which were not visible in the Indianapolis sound money gathering yesterday morning—were all supplied last evening. The rush of delegates was so great as to crowd the leading hotels. Delegations that had ordered suites of four and five rooms were tendered one as the best that could be done for them. Six double beds in a room were not uncommon at the Dennison house last night, and one room at the Bates house had twenty cots in it. Senator Caffery of Louisiana, the selected permanent chairman, and his fourteen associates were turned into two rooms to do the best they could for themselves. The "push" at the hotels this morning was very great. McKinley demonstrations and free silver shouters aided to block the streets in numbers greater than those of the sound money men.

Predicting Democratic Defeat.

At the Dennison hotel this morning Senator Vilas added to the enthusiasm of the opponents of the Chicago ticket by stating that Wisconsin would be carried for McKinley. Senator Caffery followed, declaring that many old-time democrats in Louisiana had gone so far in the McKinley direction that it was impossible to call them back. Gov. Stokely of Delaware asserted that if the republicans of the state would unite they could carry it for McKinley. Gov. Jones of Alabama did not hesitate to express his belief that Bryan could be defeated in his state, and judge Euclid Martin of Nebraska prophesied that the nominee of the Chicago convention would fail to carry even his own state. The spectacle thus presented of prominent democrats rejoicing over the probable success of a republican candidate forms one of the most remarkable anamolies of the situation.

No Contest for the Nomination.

Another unusual feature is the entire absence of any aggressive competition for the nomination. By general consent the task of selecting the leaders has been remitted to the delegates of the middle western states, where it is believed the actual battle ground will be. This trend of sentiment favors Bragg and Buckner, but there is a strong undercurrent for Vilas. The Wisconsin ex-senator remains loyal to the instructions of his state convention, which declared for Bragg and declines to discuss the possibility of his own nomination, but it is this all the same.

Cleveland Would Not Accept.

It was authoritatively stated by a personal friend of President Cleveland this morning that he would not accept the nomination under any circumstance and should his name be presented he will probably be heard from. It is intimated that a prominent member of the New York delegation has a letter to read should the occasion arise. It is not to be presumed, however, it is said, that Cleveland is lacking in interest in the work of the convention. The gentleman above referred to stated that while he was not authorized to speak for Mr. Cleveland he would venture the prediction that if the proper kind of a platform should be adopted the president would probably make known his approval.

EDITORS AT CANTON.

A Delegation of West Virginia Newspaper Men Call on Maj. McKinley.

Canton, O., Sept. 2.—The advent of autumn was notable in Canton by the arrival of a delegation of the republican editors of West Virginia. Ninety-five per cent. of the republican newspapers were represented by their editors or others in the delegation. The editors arrived at 12:30 and found special cars on the street railway waiting to convey them to their hotel. After they had dined they formed in line and marched to the McKinley residence. They were escorted by the Canton cavalry brigade. Major McKinley was introduced by Hon. P. W. Morris, editor of the Ritchie Gazette and president of the Republican Press association of West Virginia. Major McKinley then made a neat little speech which was repeatedly cheered. He then shook hands with his visitors and chatted with a number of them. Mrs. McKinley received the ladies.

Offer of Fusion in New Hampshire.

Concord, N. H., Sept. 2.—Chairman Amey of the democratic state committee has received a communication from Chairman Currier of the populist state committee offering the vote of the populists for one place on the democratic electoral ticket. The proposition will be submitted to the democratic state convention to-day. It will probably not be accepted, because the populists will cast no more than 500 in a total of 87,000 votes in November.

Quay in Charge During Hanna's Absence.

New York, Sept. 2.—Senator Quay, who arrived in this city yesterday, will have an office at the republican headquarters and will be in charge during Chairman Hanna's absence. Mr. Hanna, if his present programme is carried out, will leave for the Chicago headquarters to-night.

SPORTS

WEDNESDAY, Sept. 2. Sun rises 5:25 a. m., sets 6:34 p. m. Lanterns must be lighted between 7:34 p. m. and 4:25 a. m.

Cyclists desiring to join the League o American Wheelmen will be furnished with application blanks and necessary information by addressing the Cycling Department of the Daily Press.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Mrs. Frank Baldwin, of Willow avenue, is learning to ride a wheel.

Miss Margaret Schuck, of Vine street, enjoys riding a new wheel, which she recently purchased.

L. G. Timpson, who will have charge of the first division of the cycle parade on Saturday, announces Meredith Dryden and Harry Coward as his aides.

Edward F. Randolph, of West Eighth street, started yesterday on a month's cycling tour. He will ride through Staten Island, New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania.

The Y. M. C. A. Cycling League will hold its next general run tomorrow evening with Orange as its destination. The delegation from the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. will start from the Y. M. C. A. building at 6 o'clock. All are invited to participate.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Branch of the State Game and Fish Protective Society will be held in Percy C. Ohl's office in the Babcock building, on Tuesday evening next, when the annual election of officers will take place. All the members of the society are urgently requested to be present, as matters of great importance are to come up for consideration. The subject of "planting" more game will also be discussed.

AROUND THE BASES.

The game between the old Crescents and the Y. M. C. A. nine on Labor Day morning will begin at 10 o'clock.

The base ball next Saturday afternoon between the Y. M. C. A's and Plainfield A. C. promises to be a very interesting one as there is quite a rivalary between the two teams. This will be the first game played at home by the P. A. C's. They have played out-of-town with some of the strongest amateur teams in Central New Jersey and have met few defeats. A good crowd is expected.

LAWN TENNIS.

The tennis tournament, which was to have been started at Orange today, has been cancelled. Thomas U. Smith and Albert P. Simmonds expect to enter another tournament at Sleepy Hollow on Monday instead.

Housed Up In a Sanctuary.

A half-starved cat, maltese in color, and presumably the pet of some one in the immediate vicinity, is housed up in the cellar of the Unitarian church on Park avenue. The feline, so B. G. Perkins says, has been there since Sunday, and it is now becoming emaciated for want of food. Of course the janitor didn't know about it or the cat would have been liberated ere this.

Fine Paid by His Wife.

The fine of $28 imposed by Justice Crosley on Charles Kruger, for cruelty to animals, was paid by Mrs. Kruger this morning.

Miss Katherine Krymer, of Brooklyn, is the guest of Miss MacLaughlin, of Somerset street.

Miss Marie Steinhauser, of Jersey City, is visiting Miss Verdon, of Shady Lawn, Somerset street.

Mr. and Mrs. Seely Edsall, of Sandford avenue, returned home from Ray Brook, Essex county, last evening.

George H. Goddard and family, of East Ninth street, have returned from their summer outing spent in Sullivan county, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. McGee and Donald A. McGee, of Orchard place, Washington Park, have returned from Mouse Island, Me.

Mrs. Rachel Webb, of Brooklyn, who is in her eighty-sixth year will spend Thursday with her niece, Mrs. George Goodwin, of West Front street.

Col. A. S. TenEyck, of Somerville, is in town today visiting among his friends. The Colonel is seventy-four years of age, but he is yet hale and hearty and takes great delight in talking with old comrades.

Mrs. Charles Hyde, Miss Edith Hyde and Miss Edith Smalley, who have been in Europe for several weeks past in the hope of ultimately recovering from rheumatism, are at present at Aixlesbains, France, undergoing a new and improved system for the eradication of the complaint.

The whole system is drained and undermined by indolent ulcers and open sores. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve speedily heals them. It is the best pile cure known. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street

"Boys will be boys," but you can't afford to lose any of them. Be ready for the green apple season by having DeWitt's Colic and Cholera Cure in the house. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATS.

Bragg and Buckner Apparently the Coming Ticket.

Indianapolis, Sept. 2—The National Democratic Convention was called to order by Gen. Palmer, at 12 o'clock, which is 1 o'clock New York time.

Gen. Palmer made a brief speech and introduced the temporary chairman, former Governor Flower.

Secretary Wilson, of the National Committee, was made temporary secretary of the convention.

After the address of former Governor Flower, a resolution was passed providing for four committees—upon rules, organization, credentials and resolutions.

A resolution was offered referring all resolutions to the committee unread and an adjournment was taken to 4 o'clock.

Upon reconvening, the permanent organization, with Senator Caffery in the chair, will be installed, and the Convention will listen to Senator Caffrey's speech.

Then all the preliminaries will be got out of the way today, and when the Convention meets again at 11 o'clock to-morrow the platform can be taken up at once and the nominations made immediately thereafter.

If the talk in the hotel corridors last evening was indicative of the action of to-day's National Democratic convention, Bragg and Buckner will be the nominees of the National Democratic party.

To Purchase Exempt Badges.

A meeting of Warren Engine Company was held last evening at which time there was a goodly number present. In view of the fact that there are now about twenty-five exempt members it was decided to purchase badges for them. The badge will be of new design and very handsome. Two new members were elected and the rest of the business was of a routine nature.

Judge De Meza's Runaway.

Judge George De Meza left his spirited steed on Somerset street, for a minute or so, yesterday afternoon, while he conversed with a friend on some matters pertaining to buisness, when the animal became frightened, and ran away. Near the corner of Summit avenue, the wagon collided with a stone wagon, and the result was that the Judge's shafts were broken off one wheel wrecked, and the harness was mostly all torn from the horse.

—John Rosencrantz was fined $1 this morning for riding his wheel without a light.

—The entire Republican city executive committee will meet this evening in their rooms to arrange for the banner raising which takes place tomorrow evening.

—Neuman Bros. have purchased the fruit in several large peach orchards in Hunterdon county, and will sell the fruit tomorrow at very reasonable prices.

—Neuman Brothers will receive tomorrow morning 100 baskets of choice canning peaches, Jersey fruit, which will be sold by the basket at 75 cents, $1 and upwards, and seventy-five baskets of choice canning Bartlett pears, which will go at 75 and 85 cents a basket.

Boundsman Mattox is still very low and some fears are entertained for his recovery. He is suffering from brain fever.

Mrs. K. T. Hunt, of 73 Sandford avenue, returned to her home this afternoon after an absence of one mouth.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred MacDonald, of East Front street, are today attending the funeral of a relative in South Jersey.

Mrs. George Thatcher, of West Seventh street, left today for Philadelphia to attend the funeral of a near relative.

John and Miss May McLaughlin, of North Plainfield, Miss Katherine Krymer, of Brooklyn, and City Judge George DeMeza, have all returned from an outing at Pluckamin, in Somerset county.

Henry Armour Scheidt, son of Chef Charles Scheidt of the Mountain Park Inn, was christened in St. Joseph's church last evening by Rev. Father Miller. A reception followed at Henry Wiedemeyer's, at which a few relatives and near friends of the family were present.

When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

If you have ever seen a little child in the agony of summer complaint, you can realize the danger of the trouble and appreciate the value of instantaneons relief always afforded by DeWitt's Colic & Cholera Cure. For dysentery and diarroea it is a reliable remedy. We could not afford to recommend this as a cure unless it were a cure. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

NIGH ONTO THE PARADE.

THE GREAT EVENT ONLY FORTY-EIGHT HOURS OFF.

From Reports Received, There Will Be an Immense Crowd Coming From All Direction—Decorations to be Elaborate.

The time is rapidly drawing nigh when the Daylight Bicycle Carnival is to be held. On Saturday will come the throngs of visitors, in carriages, on foot, on wheel and by the trains of the Jersey Central Railroad. That corporation evidently appreciates the importance of the event for they are making big preparations to handle the crowd and the wheels of such cyclists as care to go or come by rail. The street railway is expecting a big crowd and will be prepared to handle one.

The storekeepers are all activity. The demand for bunting, flags and colored paper is great and those who expect to decorate but have not yet purchased the material had better tend to that matter at once unless they wish to get left entirely. The coasting contest on Saturday morning will attract many here at that time to remain until night and the restaurants in town will be taxed to their utmost capacity to feed the visitors.

Every body has invited some out-of-town friend to come and spend the day and see the Carnival, while you never knew you had so many out-of-town friends who have suddenly informed you that may be the'll drop in and see you Saturday. But everybody will be welcome, for Plainfield is a hospitable city and will entertain her guests right gallantly.

Strange to say, that crack organization, the Independent Fife and Drum Corps, is but slightly known in Plainfield. Their fame outside this city is wide spread and at Annandale, where they appeared Decoration Day, nothing was thought too good for them. There are nineteen members of the corps and they give excellent music as all those that have heard them on parade will testify. They will appear in line Saturday in one of Captain William Hand's stages.

Do you remember how some old crankers predicted that the evening bicycle parade would be a failure and then when it was a great and glorious success, how they hadn't a word to say? Well, this time it is the same way, there are kickers who would find fault with everything and they are finding fault with the Carnival. Just wait until Saturday afternoon.

New Brunswick is highly delighted at the idea of a bicycle carnival and want to have one, too. So her wheelmen are coming over en masse to Plainfield hoping that Plainfield will return the compliment when New Brunswick holds her parade.

You have no idea how far the news of the carnival has spread. A member of the general committee was telling at the last committee meeting how, clear up in some little country town, he found the Carnival the chief topic of conversation. Nearly all the village is going to rise up with the sun Saturday morning, hitch up and drive down to Plainfield, to "see that 'ere carnival."

Don't forget to decorate your house and if you have a wheel, no matter what kind, go in the parade and help make it a grand and glorious success that will give Plainfield a reputation that it will be hard to beat.

PLEADED NON VULT.

Two Men Arraigned for Selling Liquor Without a License.

The long-postponed trial of Nathan Richmond and Samuel Klein, alias John Evans, for illegal liquor selling, was held this morning but the exciting developments expected didn't develop. Instead, both prisoners pleaded non vult, through their counsel, ex-Councilman Walter L. Hetfield. The Judge reserved his decision until a week from Saturday.

Richmond is a tailor, who keeps a little shop on Plainfield avenue, just above South Second street. He had no license but the police suspected him of selling beer. By some clever detective work, they claim that they have the necessary evidence to convict him.

The case was the same with Klein, who keeps a little candy and notion store at the corner of Plainfield avenue and South Second street.

Pushing Sewer Connections.

The work of making sewer connections is going forward with all possible speed, and this matter should be attended to before cold weather sets in and the ground becomes frozen and hard. Alexander Kane is running a force of nine men in making excavations and connections with the main sewer pipe on East Sixth street, which work he is doing for George Tobin.

LOOTED THE CAMP.

Young Plainfielders on an Outing Lose Various Articles.

A party of Plainfield young men, consisting of Everett Morgan and Charles Randolph, of West Front street, and Chauncey Burt, of West Seventh street, who are camping at Lake Hopatcong, had a rather unpleasant experience the other evening. They were away from their tent and during their absence a gang of thieves visited the camp and cleaned out its contents. Morgan lost an entire suit of clothes, Randolph los his revolver, fishing rod and tackle and sundry articles of clothing. Burt was luckier than the rest, but the thieves managed to get away with several articles belonging to him.

They Hid His Wheel.

A. Willis West, of Crescent avenue, has been made the victim of a practical joke that has made him vow to purchase an immense padlock from some hardware store. Tuesday evening he stopped at the home of a friend in the borough and some other friends (?) found his wheel leaning by the fence. They took it away and hid it at the Park Club house. West came out later but could not find his wheel, and finally walked home completely disgusted. This morning, on walking over to the Park Club, he saw his bicycle in the rack. He is going to get a lock and chain, and is thinking about purchasing a club for the benefit of his friends. The club will not be of the style of the Park Club, however.

Birthday Surprise.

A birthday surprise party was tendered to John Carl, at his home on Manson place last evening, and there were some twenty-two young persons present. During the evening there was singing, dancing and refreshments. The vocalists were Miss M. Martin, Miss K. Benson, Frank Shattle, J. B. Martin and F. W. Bowden. The party met at the residence of J. B. Martin near by, and it was one or after before the party dispersed. Mr. Carl was in town during the evening, and when he returned was surprised to find the house brilliantly lighted up and the guests making themselves merry.

Captain Mimms to Marry.

Lieutenant Ransom, the leader of the American Volunteers in New Brunswick, will bid farewell on Sunday, September 6th. He will be married on September 16th to Captain Sarah Mimms, who is now in charge of the Volunteer ranks in Newark, formerly in charge of the post in this city. The lieutenant will be promoted to captain and with his wife will have charge of the Volunteer post at Scranton, Pa.

Field Day Date May Be Changed.

The committee in charge of the Knights Templar field day have about decided to change the date from October 1st to October 6th. The reason given is that the former date being the first day in the month, many of the members would be unable to attend. Another reason given is that it is politicians' day at the Inter-State Fair, which is held at Trenton.

THE OFFICIAL BADGE OF THE Y. P. S. C. E.

A WAR FOR THE BALLOTS

REPUBLICANS ORGANIZED A CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE LAST NIGHT.

To Float a McKinley and Hobart Banner Tonight—Ex-Mayor Saunders, a Democrat, May Deliver a Speech for Them

The Repulican Executive met in their rooms on East Front street last evening and heard reports from the various committees. It was stated that the McKinley and Hobart banner would be mised this evening on North avenue, opposite the Hotel Grenada. The committee reported that they expected ex-Mayor W. L. Saunders to make the speech of the evening. He was obliged to go to Albany today and if he can return by 8:30 this evening he will address the crowd present. Mr. Saunders is a Democrat, but believes thoroughly in the gold standard, and if he speaks he will probably talk on the currency question.

The Plainfield Cornet Band has also been secured and will previous to the meeting parade the main streets and discourse patriotic music. They will also furnish music at the meeting. A liberal display of red fire will also be burned.

After the reports had been received the meeting adjourned and another meeting was held immediately afterward at which time the committee organized themselves into what will be known as the Republican Campaign Committee, and the following officers were elected: Chairman, Charles J. Fisk; secretary, J. B. Coward; treasurer, J. Fred MacDonald.

The appointment of committees was left to the chairman. The committee decided to meet in the parlors of the Hotel Grenada this evening, at 8 o'clock. It was also decided that the committee will meet every Tuesday evening during the campaign. The meeting then adjourned till next Tuesday evening.

Now They Are There.

As will be seen by the following the G. A. R. boys are at their destination:

St. Paul, August 31th, 1896.

The G. A. R. train just arrived and all hands are well and in the best of spirits, though Smith is calling for McVoy and Moore. Several comrades are asking for Coriell and Morse, because the comrades did not use up all the commissary supplies. Nash says it is all right, and that we need more Jersey apples in liquid form. The ladies of the Relief Corps are happy and enjoying themselves hugely at the jokes of Commander Stahl. The boys say they would like to have a Kyte with them, not to arrest them but to guard them. N.

Satisfied Demands of Mortgagee.

The foreclosure sale of Mrs. Neignbor's property on East Front street was adjourned yesterday afternoon by Sheriff Kyte, as Mrs. Neighbor was able to satisfy the demands of the mortgagee and thus hold her property until it can be disposed of at private sale.

Shooting at Clay Birds.

Ten members from the Independent Gun Club, of this city, are contesting with a similar team from the Dunellen Gun Club on the grounds of the latter club this afternoon. The match is at twenty-five clay birds each, the losing team to pay the expenses of the shoot.

Jay VanArsdale, of Jackson avenue, has returned after visiting his grandmother, at Pluckamin.

ALLEGED WIFE BEATER

JOHN LASSITI, COLORED, CHARGED WITH TRYING TO CHOKE HIS WIFE.

She Also Claimed That He Struck and Beat Her—He Has a Good Reputation and He is a New Offender.

Family quarrels are the cause of many of the cases in the city court, and this morning Mr. and Mrs. John Lassiti, of East Second street, both colored, revealed their household troubles to City Judge DeMeza. Lassiti was the prisoner and his wife the complainant. They have both lived in Plainfield about eight years, and about three years ago they were married and went to live on East Second street. Neither name has ever appeared on the city court records and they were unknown to the police until Roundsman Frederickson was called in by Mrs. Lassiti yesterday afternoon. She is a slight woman, very light skin and quite delicate. She told the officer that her husband had come home early in the afternoon after drinking heavily. He abused her, she said, and beat her and finally tried to choke her.

Frederickson arrested him and locked him up for trial. He appeared before Judge DeMeza and the wife's story was repeated. It seems that this was not the first instance of the kind. Lassiti claimed that he had not been drinking and had not badly abused his wife.

He is a laborer and has a good reputation as a quiet and respectable citizen. The Judge declared him guilty, but suspended sentence on condition that he promised to leave his wife alone in the future.

THE ENDEAVOR BADGE.

Appropriate and Pretty—Designed by R. H. Radford, of This City.

The cut printed on this page is one of the badges for the Christian Endeavor State convention, which is to held in this city on October 7-9. The ribbon is to be of orange and black, the State colors, and the scroll will be of celluloid with the picture of Washington Rock on it. The little creature at the top of the ribbon is the head of the pin by which the badge is fastened on and it is supposed to represent the State bird of New Jersey, the mosquito.

This badge was designed and made by R. H. Radford, of Park avenue.

Death of William B. Hewitt.

William B. Hewitt, aged 47 years, died at his home on East Third street at 10:20 o'clock today from consumption. He had been ailing more or less for a long time, and for several weeks past had been confined to the house. He leaves a widow and five sons, one of whom has been employed in the Daily Press office for several years past. Decedent was born in New York and came to Plainfield in 1880. He was a sign writer and carriage painter by trade, which he followed in J. P. Homan's carriage factory on Somerset street, up to the time of his first illness. The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

Mrs. H. Weigmann, of East Front street, arrived home yesterday after spending seven weeks at Asbury Park.

CLEVELAND SAYS NO.

He Would Not Accept the Nomination for President Again.

Indianapolis, Ind., September 3.—President Cleveland this morning telegraphed to D. G. Griffin that he was unalterably opposed to receiving the nomination of the National Democracy.

There appears to be a good deal of opposition to Gen. E. T. Bragg, of Wisconsin, who hah eveloped more strength than any other aspirant, but unless the following of the half dozen men, who are mentioned, formulates a more tangible plan to defeat him than now exists, the little Wisconsin gold bug will carry off the prize on the first ballot.

There is no organized opposition to him, but it is almost certain that if either Gen. Palmer, of Illinois; Gen. Black, of Illinois; or Daniel G. Lawler, of Minnesota, can secure the support of New York, Pennsylvania and Massachussets delegations, Gen. Bragg may be defeated.

There will be no opposition to the General from his own State, as was indicated yesterday.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

E. H Ladd, Jr., and family, of Franklin place, returned yesterday from their summer vacation.

Rev. J. W. Richardson and family, of Prospect place, are expected home today from Middlebury, Conn.

Miss Sarah VanFliet, of Roycefield, N. J., is spending a few days with Miss Young, of Manning avenue.

Louis Morgan, of the Pond Tool Works, returned home yesterday after spending a month in England.

Mrs. Charlotte Smith and daughter Mary, of West Fifth street, are spending two weeks with relatives in Brooklyn.

Miss Carrie Tomlinson, of Bridgeton, J. J., is visiting at the home of Dr. T. H. Tomlinson, of LaGrande avenue.

Fred G. Smith and George P. Smith, of Crescent avenue, have returned after enjoying camp life near Hartwick, N. Y.

Miss Mabel Bonnell and Herbert Bonnell, of East Fifth street, have returned after a visit with friends at Pluckamin.

Wilson F. Fulper, formerly of Plainfield, but now of Brooklyn, was in town last evening calling on his acquaintances.

Miss Odiorne, of Pennsylvania, niece of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Odiorne, of Park avenue, who has been visiting the latter, returned home this morning.

Charles Dodwell, the genial conductor on the Central Railroad, was unusually happy this morning. A young daughter arrived at his home last evening.

Manager Mills, of the U. S. Express Company, and family, are spending today with Mr. Mills' brother at his new home on West End avenue, New York.

Hon. James E Martine is kept busy these days. Tonight he speaks at Orange; on Saturday at Neshanic, and on the 16th instant he will "whoop 'em up" at Allentown, Pa.

Special Officer Harvey Ritterbush, of Somerset street, who is also special detective for the New Jersey Central Railroad Company, returned from a fishing trip to Atlantic Highlands yesterday

Henrietta J. Stephenson, wife of Edmund Stephenson, president of the "Home Bank," Forty-second street, New York, died Saturday, Aug. 29th, at her home. The deceased was a very estimable woman, and will be mourned by a large circle of relatives and friends. Wm. J. Stephenson, of North avenue, is a nephew.

Considering the Details.

The entertainment and reception committee of the Exempt Firemen's Association in this city, met in Alert's parlors last evening and talked over matters in connection with the parade in this city Oct. 3d. A short line of march was considered, but this is liable to change at any other meeting of the general committee, the next of which will be held on the 16th inst.

The Farmers' Picnic.

About 1,000 people were at the picnic of the farmers at Chimney Rock yesterday afternoon. A speech on the currency question was delivered by James E. Martine. No Republican speakers put in an appearance.

—The Christian Endeavor choir will meet for rehearsal tonight in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church at 8 o'clock. All persons are welcome whether members of an Endeavor society or not.

THE TERRIFYING CLANG.

DISAGREEABLE PRACTICES OF SOME OF THE LOCAL BICYCLISTS.

Bells That Make One Think Fire Engines and Ambulances Are Approaching Now Sound From the Bicycles in This City.

Ding! Ding! Ding! You think it the bell of the ambulance or one of the fire apparatus and your hair rises with fright. You leap out of the road as fast as possible. Then you turn, expecting to see the hose cart or ambulance go flying by. When, behold, it was only a bicyclist with a seven-inch gong on the rear of his frame. He rings it again and smiles tauntingly at you as he speeds by, and you have the poor enjoyment of seeing other people get out of his way with the same precipitate haste that you did. You hear another bell. Surely this is not on a bicycle; it is too loud. There is a lady crossing the street, leading a little child by the hand. She is terror-stricken by the clanging bell, the child screams but, at last, they reach the sidewalk and the lady goes into the nearest store to set down and recover from the shock. The bell was on a bicycle after all, fastened on the frame just under the seat, and the hump-backed rider rings it with a chain. Of course, its lots of fun for the cyclist—seeing everybody tumble over themselves getting out of his way. Yes, but they'll get used to it, he says. Perhaps so, and then when the ambulance and hose carriage come along they will not get out of the road and trouble will follow.

The wheelmen are a nice set of fellows. They have done lots of good things, influencing the people in favor of good roads for one, but some of them, not all by any means, have got a new fad that is very unpleasant and even dangerous. There seems to be a longing to get the largest and loudest-toned bell possible and as a result the streets are full of them. They are not pleasant to the ear and often badly frighten women and children.

Chief Grant is not in love with them and told a Daily Press reporter the other day that there is likely to be a crusade against them. The city ordinance says that the bell must be placed on the handle-bars. Some of the riders have a little bell there besides their large gongs while others openly violate that part of the ordinance. Several of the latter have been notified to change the location of their bell.

Asbury Park has been enjoying these immense gongs for some time until the authorities of that seaside town got tired and an ordinance has been passed. It requires wheelmen to carry lamps after dark and bells at all times. The new regulation goes into effect on September 18th. The ordinance also provides that bells, and not gongs, must be used, and that the bells shall not be more than 2½ inches in diameter.

Only a few days ago there was a bicycle at one of the local repair shops on which there was a gong placed behind the seat. It was so large that it scraped the tire, finally ruining it and the wheel was sent back for the agent to put on a new tire, as the old one was defective, the owner said. He still rides and the bell still sends forth its clang.

Of course, we all enjoy the ding, ding, ding, and think it lots of fun to jump out of the way or else we would probably object to it and say something.

ON A RAMPAGE.

A Borough Man Arrested on Complaint of His Son.

On complaint of William J. Kiely, of Steiner place, Justice Thomas issued a warrant last evening for the arrest of Patrick Kiely, father of the complainant. For the past three weeks Mr. Kiely has been indulging too freely in strong drink and has caused a considerable amount of trouble. Last night while in an intoxicated condition he threatened to burn his house down and also attempted to assault his family. The former being unable to put up with such actions, sought Justice Thomas. The man was arrested by Marshal Hansen and was arraigned this morning before the Justice. He pleaded guilty to the charges and was asked to give $200 bail for his appearance before the Grand Jury. This he was unable to do and was given until 2 o'clock this afternoon, and as he could not get the bail he was taken to Somerville.

Wm. Jones, of Randolph's pharmacy, will take his vacation the last of September and expects to spend it in the South.

PERMANENT ORGANIZATION COMPLETE

Senator Caffery of Louisiana Permanent Chairman—Speeches Made Denouncing the Chicago Platform and Repudiating the Ticket.

Convention Hall, Indianapolis, Sept. 3.—The first day's session of the national democratic convention, called by the advocates of the gold standard and the opponents of the Chicago platform, was marked by unanimous action and favorable surroundings of wind, weather and enthusiasm. Eight hundred and twenty-four delegates were present out of a possible 900. These represented forty-one states and three territories. In many instances the delegates were supplemented by full sets of alternates, so that the attendance equalled the seating capacity of the hall. As a body, the delegates presented the appearance of business men, well dressed, well mannered and courteous—some of them so unaccustomed to political conventions that they had to be instructed as to the simplest matters of procedure. To leaven this lump of political innocence there was quite a sufficient admixture of veteran politicians—old wheelhorses, in fact—including three United States senators, Palmer, Caffery and Vilas; four or five governors and ex-governors of states—Jones of Alabama, Stokley of Delaware, Buckner of Kentucky and Flower of New York, besides several prominent ex-congressmen, among them D. E. Everett of Massachusetts and Perry Belmont of New York. The convention went to work with business celerity, effected both a temporary and permanent organization and got down by one day to the important order of business. Senator Palmer of Illinois, chairman of the committee which issued the call, rapped the convention to order. Ex-Governor Flower was made temporary chairman and read a very long address, many points of which were cheered. He said that this gathering was a notice to the world that the democratic party had not yet surrendered to populism and anarchy. "No democrats here," he said, "sought honors from those who framed the Chicago platform. Every democrat here," he continued, "has only humiliation to expect in the event of the success of the Chicago ticket. No democrat honored here by being made the candidate of this convention can look forward with any reasonable hope to an election. None of us who help to nominate him can expect to be participants in any distribution of political favors. We are here because we love the democratic party and because we love our country. That is the inspiration which has drawn us together and encourages our action. That is the fact which evidence our sincerity and makes our cause strong with the people." Ex-Gov. Flower was succeeded by the permanent chairman, Senator Caffery of Louisiana, whose speech was much shorter than the temporary chairman's but was unusually incisive. He said that the leaders chosen by the democracy had desecrated her altars and preached false doctrines, and that it rested with the assemblage here to mend the broken shrine and point out the true path. He called the Chicago democrats inflationists and repudiators. He said the delegates here are not traitors, but are true democrats, and that while democracy lasts the republic shall last. Senator Caffery drew hearty applause when he said: "We appeal from the democracy drunk with heresy to a democracy sober with reason." At the conclusion of his speech he was heartily cheered.

Oratorical Effects.

The oratorical effects of the day were secured by D. E. Everett of Massachusetts and John P. Irish of California. Dr. Everett declared that Massachusetts was for gold and not for bimetallism by international agreement, asserting that every nation whose views were worth having had adopted the gold standard. He also repudiated any "alliance with the McKinley protectionists," and proclaimed "regularity" for the present convention, which he believed would be the precursor of a long line of regular democratic conventions. Mr. Everett was cheered when he said that Massachusetts would not submit to the insult cast upon the chief executive of the nation, and that Massachusetts stands by Grover Cleveland. He said that Massachusetts had no candidate to present, and made a touching reference to the death of ex-Gov. Russell.

Cleveland's Name Cheered.

After the unanimous adoption of the report of the committee on rules recommending the adoption of the rules of "the last democratic convention," naming the convention of 1892 as such, there were loud calls for John P. Irish of California. Mr. Irish was very aggressive in his remarks. He spoke of "McKinley's protection and Bryan's free silver populism" as "twin sisters of the horse leech," working in concert, each to produce a depression of prices for which free trade or free silver was to be the remedy. He opposed an income tax, and called upon all true democrats to protect the supreme court of the United States from the degradation which would be thrust upon it by the "puppet of the free silver syndicate." All these remarks were vigorously cheered. The most noticeable feature of the day's gathering was the reception which met President Cleveland's name. Whenever it was mentioned it was greeted with an uprising demonstration of applause. The convention adjourned at 5:40 until 11 o'clock to-day.

MAY CHANGE THE NAME.

Legal Objections in Some States to "National Democracy."

Indianapolis, Sept. 3.—It may be necessary to appoint an extra committee to consider the advisability of giving the party a new name. There is undoubtly a disposition on the part of a large majority of the delegates to retain the name National Democratic party, on the ground that they constitute the real democracy of the nation, but there are legal objections in some states, which, it is said, will make its use impossible. The members of the national committee discussed the subject at considerable length yesterday afternoon, and while they did not arrive at a conclusion, for the simple reason that the discussion was informal, they seemed to agree that the subject was one of great importance and that it should be treated with the utmost discretion.

Cleveland Receiving the News.

Buzzard's Bay, Mass., Sept. 3.—The president is receiving over a special wire the proceedings of the Indianapolis convention, as he did those at St. Louis and Chicago. The wire is run from the main line over to Gray Gables, a special operator being sent from Boston.

CONNECTICUT REPUBLICANS.

The St. Louis Platform Endorsed and Lorrin A. Cooke Nominated for Governor.

Hartford, Sept. 3.—At the second day's session of the republican state convention, permanent organization was effected, with Samuel Fassenden of Stamford as permanent chairman. The platform adopted endorsed that of the republican national convention and declared specifically for the gold standard and a protective tariff. Lieut.-Gov. Cooke was nominated for governor on the first ballot. Charles Phelps of Rockville was nominated for secretary of state by acclamation. The ballot for lieutenant-governor resulted in the choice of J. D. Dewell of New Haven. Presidential electors were chosen as follows: At-large—Col. George Pope, Hartford; James Graham, Orange. First district, Gardner Hall, Willington; second, George I. Allen, Middletown; third, George A. Hammond, Putnam; fourth, J. Deming Perkins, Litchfield.

Silver Party Campaign.

Washington, Sept. 3.—George P. Keeney writes to silver headquarters that he has organized in Chicago sixty silver clubs with a membership of 30,000. George A. Groot, chairman of the silver notification committee, writes that the full committee will be present at Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 8. Senator Tillman of South Carolina will resume his stumping tour in Pennsylvania, among the miners, Sept. 10. He will speak in Philadelphia, Sept. 19.

G. A. R. PARADE.

One of the Brilliant Events of the Veterans' Encampment at St. Paul.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 3.—Twenty-five thousand veterans of the Grand Army marched proudly yesterday under a canopy of red, white and blue, flanked by pillars of white and between lines of 75,000 applauding citizens. The route was two miles long, ending at an immense reviewing stand where Commander-in-chief Walker stood with his staff after leading the old soldiers to that point at Smith park. The spectacle as the army on foot, the bands of music and mounted officers of national renown came down the hill on Sixth street with flags and banners flying, was inspiring and beautiful in its martial aspect. It was arranged to start the column at 10 o'clock, but there was an hours' delay. The Second regiment of the Minnesota National guard kept the multitude to the limits of the sidewalks with bayoneted rifles and the assistance of the police. On the arrival of the commander at the reviewing stand a salute of twenty-one guns from Battery B of the Minnesota militia was fired at Smith park. The Illinois posts were first in position and numbers. Clouds threatened rain but there was none to mar the grand march.

Monument to Gen. Josiah Porter.

Albany, Sept. 3.—A monument to cost from $12,000 to $15,000 is to be erected here in memory of Gen. Josiah Porter. Capt. David Wilson of the Second battery of New York city is secretary of the committee which has the project in charge and he has sent a letter to the many members of the association requesting their immediate active co-operation.

Denies That Fava Has Been Recalled.

Bar Harbor, Me., Sept. 3.—Baron Fava, who has been here for a few days, has left town. Baroness Fava was seen and shown the dispatch stating that Baron Fava had been recalled and she completely denied the report. Baroness Fava leaves here to-day, probably for Washington.

Treasury Gold Reserve.

Washington, Sept. 3.—The treasury gold reserve at the opening of business to-day stood at $103,203,213. Yesterday's withdrawals at New York were $101,800.

National League Games.

Professional gossips are common in China. Most of them are elderly ladies, who have regular patrons of the female sex, whose houses they visit and whom they entertain by narrating the news and scandal of the day. They thus earn about enough to maintain them in a life of idleness.

The women in an Oklahoma town outvoted the males in a recent election. A local publisher, desiring to announce the result conspicuously in his paper, dispatched this order to a type foundry: "Please send us one small cut of a hen. Women carried the election here, and I suppose we will have to swing out a hen instead of a rooster."

SCRAP WITH A BADGER.

New Orleans Man Has a Unique Fight in Texas.

Although a Powerfully-Built Individual, Mr. Lees Had a Tough Time Getting the Better of the Infuriated Little Beast.

Information has reached the New Orleans Times-Democrat of a novel and exciting experience undergone by a New Orleans man at Sugarland, Tex. The incident is one that rarely, if ever, occurred before. Certainly it cannot be recalled that on any previous occasion a man had found himself forced into a hand-to-hand encounter with a wild badger, that active and odd-looking beast whose forepaws exhibit an array of long, sharp claws scarcely less formidable than a tiger's. Yet such a struggle between an unarmed man and an enraged beast of this species is now on record, and Mr. S. S. Lees, well known as the representative of the Sterling Boiler company, is the hero who bested his wild animal adversary and with only nature's weapons.

For some days Mr. Lees has been the guest of Ed H. Cunningham & Company, sugar producers and refiners at Sugarland. During his stay his host and others on the plantation sought to provide some novel entertainment in honor of their guest. After much ruminating and many councils together on the subject, some one hit upon the idea to arrange a fight between a wild badger and hounds. This proposition met with general enthusiastic indorsement, especially when every one learned that Mr. Lees had never witnessed a set-to of this kind in his life. Active preparations were begun by the organization of a party which was to go out and provide the necessary badger, or as the naturalist would say, Taxideo Americana.

With this object in view, early one morning a little party set out from the plantation for the near-by haunts of the object of their quest, whose trail had been seen a few days before. The equipment of the hunters consisted of a rifle, a lasso and a strong twine net fastened to the end of a long pole. It was their purpose, of course, to capture the badger alive, and the rifle was taken along solely for safety's sake.

Not long after reaching the vicinity of the animal's abode they sighted their prey, and after some lively maneuvering and exciting scuffle succeeded in lassoing the beast, enmeshing him in the net and making him a sure candidate for a gory arena.

By seven o'clock Tuesday evening all the preparations for the fight had been completed. Two fine hounds, picked from a pack of 25, were held in leash awaiting the trial of animal courage and strength. The fight was to be pulled off in a large room on the first floor of the refinery, and at the hour mentioned there were assembled Mr. Lees, his host and a crowd of other persons.

From the moment the badger scented the dogs his ire began to rise and his snarls became vicious. The dogs evinced an eagerness for the fray, too, and it looked as if it were going to be a battle royal.

Suddenly, however, all the plans for the combat were upset. The badger was being securely held in the net. He was released at the same instant with the dogs, but as the hounds sprang at their wild foe they were cutely dodged by the furry beast, who, now grown desperate with mingled fury and alarm at the presence of so many men, sought to escape by leaping over the heads of those assembled in the room. Here Mr. Lees became the most prominent actor in the arena. As it attempted to leap over him the badger did not clear Mr. Lees' head, but lit squarely on his breast. Instantly there was a lively commotion among the crowd.

Though astonished at the sudden turn of affairs, Mr. Lees, who is a powerful man and something of an athlete, began to fight desperately, and the badger, furious at finding his escape cut off, fought likewise. The struggle was, however, short, sharp and decisive. Before the bystanders had a chance to take a hand in the fight between man and beast, Mr. Lees had secured a vise-like grip on the badger's throat, and though the animal clawed wickedly at his breast and inflicted several slight but painful wounds, he held on until the badger was choked almost beyond struggling. Not even then did Mr. Lees release his grip, but threw his wild adversary to the floor and continued to choke it until life was extinct.

There was plenty of excitement about the refinery while Mr. Lees and the badger were having it out with each other, and when it was all over Mr. Lees was the lion of the hour. Mr. Lees' exhibition of nerve and strength was not down on the programme, but his friends say he has now both seen and felt a badger fight.

IMPERSONALITIES.

A lady in Nebraska advertised for a husband, and announced: "I own a good job printing office, and can set type."

Two farmers in Christian county, Ky., had a suit about the ownership of a mule. The jury stood six to six, and they agreed to match pennies to decide the case. The verdict was in favor of the defendant.

A bride and groom began married life in Bangor, Me., in a queer way. They paid the clergyman who married them, the hotel keeper and the livery stable man with bogus checks.

A couple were recently divorced in South Dakota after a year of married life, during all of which time they had been very "spooney." The husband swore that he usually kissed his wife about 100 times every day.

Some months ago the heirs of an estate worth $20,000, in Los Angeles county, Cal., went to law about it. The executor has just announced that he has only 40 cents left. The lawyers got the rest.

An athletic negress in Houston, Tex., severely beat her intoxicated husband, and three policemen were sent to arrest her. She successively hurled the three officers out of the house, and at last accounts she still held the fort.

A CONSERVATOR OF BEAUTY

The Power to Throw Off the Burden of Care.

There is a good old saying: "Handsome is that handsome does," which is more literally true than many people believe. There is no cosmetic, no massage treatment for smoothing wrinkles from the brow of care like an amiable disposition. If there is one thing above all others that young people should be taught to cultivate it is a disposition to look on the bright side. There are troubles enough in every life. Man is born to trouble as well as joy. All existence shows the ever present struggle between light and darkness, evil and good, and alternate success and failure. It takes the strongest faith of the Christian mother to believe in the final triumph of right over wrong. All that the best and wisest men and women can do is patiently to do the duties around and "trust God," in spite of apparent failure, that all things will finally work out for the best.

Nothing is gained, and everything may be lost, by continual grieving over the past. Fortunate and happy is that person who can drop his past troubles and work bravely on toward ultimate success. Brooding over the sorrows which we cannot turn aside, grieving over past losses, not only weakens the will, but stirs the bile, interferes with free circulation of the blood, and clogs up the complexion and humors. Explosions of sudden anger are found by chemical research to impart a poisonous quality to the perspiration. It is well known that anger produces marked changes in the face, drawing the corners of the month and tracing heavy lines. It is as certainly true that we can poison our blood with bad temper as we can by the use of improper food or any other deleterious thing.

We sometimes see faces on which a querulous, selfish disposition has left its mark. The eyebrows are lifted instead of gracefully curving, the corners of the mouth are drawn down, and heavy lines are written on the brow; in fact, the entire countenance is so seamed that it is approaching the appearance of the typical hag. There are other faces, gentle, fair and lovely—the expression written upon them telling of the lovely souls within, as surely as the gentle accent of the voice.

Beauty of face like this, the reflection of the beautiful spirit within, cannot be gained by a life of inaction. There is no face so surely stamped with the disfiguring lines of a selfish life as that of the listless, indolent woman who possesses no interest beyond the gratification of her love of ease. The eye becomes listless, the features fixed and expressionless, and the entire aspect shows a lack of alertness and grace. To cultivate the mind and keep an interest in living topics of the day is to keep the spirits young and make the blood flow rapidly and the eyes become sparkling and beautiful. No intelligent woman who does not allow herself to become absorbed in her own selfish interest is in danger of that mental stagnation that writes its story in dull, commonplace lines on the faces of so many middle-aged women. The remedy against the lack luster eye, the dull, bilious complexion, the heavy lines that seam so many faces, lies in the power of every woman who has learned to conquer her spirit, though when the evil marks of temper and selfishness become fixed by habit they are as ineradicable as the scars of a saber stroke.—N. Y. Tribune.

VERMONT ELECTION RETURNS.

Republican Majority 37,440, a Gain of 9,822 Above Previous High Water Mark.

White River Junction, Vt., Sept. 3.—The corrected returns are now at hand from all but nine towns in the state. The missing towns cast a small vote. Without these places the total vote is: For governor—Grout, rep., 52,566; Jackson, dem., 14,646, Battell, pop., 521; Whittemore: pro., 572. Grout's plurality 37,920: majority over all, 36,787. If the missing towns keep up the percentage of gains so far received the republican majority in the state will be 37,440, or 9,822 above previous high water mark.

GREAT FIRE AT SYRACUSE.

Conflagration Which Started Early This Morning Causes a Loss of $500,000.

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 3.—A fire that started at 2 o'clock this morning in Weiting Opera house spread until the loss will reach fully $500,000.

SEA GIRT RIFLE MATCHES.

Georgians Duplicate Their Performance of Last Year and Carry Off a Prize.

Sea Girt, N. J., Sept. 3.—Georgia duplicated her performance of last year at the third day's meeting of the New Jersey State Rifle association. The southerners won the valuable bronze trophy, "Soldier of Marathon," scoring eighteen points over Massachusetts. The District of Columbia marksman were third with a score of 1,022. When the sharpshooters went to the butts the wind was very light and the riflemen were congratulating themselves that the day would be free from a heavy breeze. The wind, however, soon shifted around to the north and blew hard enough to interfere with exceptionally good scores. The inter-state match took up the greater part of the day, and it was not finished until after 4 o'clock. Five teams entered, as follows: Georgia, Pennsylvania, District of Columbia, Massachusetts and New Jersey. Many persons expected that the members of the 12th and 7th regiments of New York would compete for the inter-state trophy, but the sharpshooters packed up early in the morning and left the camp. They realized that they had little chance of winning the prize. Lieut. Stebbins of the 12th New York said that his state had made no appropriation to send a team to compete for the prizes.

IS THE LAURADA A WRECK?

If True, the Disaster Is Believed To Have Been Due to Foul Play.

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 3.—The news received here from Kingston, Jamaica, that the Cuban filibustering steamship Laurada, which recently transferred her men and arms to the tug Dauntless, has been wrecked, is generally believed to be true, but if the information is correct, it is thought the disaster was the result of foul play.

The Laurada has been extremely successful in running the Cuban blockade, having landed many parties of men and large supplies for the insurgents. The work has been done so cleverly that the United States authorities were unable to get any proof that the neutrality laws were being violated. Spanish men-of-war have frequently chased the steamship, but she always managed to escape.

PARDON FOR BARDSLEY.

Clemency Recommended for Philadelphia's ex-Treasurer.

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 3.—The board of pardons, at a special meeting yesterday afternoon, voted to recommend the pardon of John Bardsley, ex-city treasurer of Philadelphia, now serving a 15 years' sentence in the penitentiary. The reason for this action will be submitted to Gov. Hastings when he returns to Harrisburg next week. The action of the governor is final. Bardsley has been in prison since 1891.

TO RECEIVE THE CZAR.

Emperor William and the Empress Start for Dresden.

BIG TIME IN SAXONY TO-DAY

Great Military Parade To Greet the Kaiser at Zaithain—Programme of Events Arranged for the Entertainment of the Autocrat of the North.

Berlin, Sept. 3.—Emperor William left Potsdam last night on his way to Dresden. This afternoon he will be present at a great parade of the Saxon (Twelfth) Army corps and the Fourth Guards Cavalry brigade at Zeithain. After the parade a banquet will be given in the royal castle of Albrechtsburg, at Meissen, where covers for 300 will be laid. In the evening the old historic castle and the hills of the Elbe will be illuminated. To-morrow the emperor and his guests will leave for Breslau, arriving in that city at 1:30 p. m. There will be no reception at the station by the civil authorities; only the military household, etc., will be present, owing to the shortly following arrival of the czar. The emperor will ride and the empress drive through the Scaweidnitzer road, where the guilds will form in line to the town hall to drink the loving cup. After the "cup" their majesties will drive to the palace. On the road 12,000 school children will be formed in line, with banners. The czar and czarina upon their arrival will leave their train in the eastern wing of the railway station, the vestibule of which has been turned into a tropical flower garden. There their majesties will receive. The Kaiser Alexander footguards will form a line from the station, and the Kaiser Alexander dragoons will escort the carriages in which the imperial guards will be seated. On Sept. 5 Emperor William will accompany the czar and czarina to to the parade which will take place that day. Both imperial couples will drive from the czar's residence to the drill ground. After the parade they will drive over the Konigsplatz, where, in the meantime, the Warriors' and Veteran unions and the Catholic and Evangelic Wormen's unions will have formed in line. A gala opera and theater performance will be given, commencing at 8 p. m. The kaiser has ordered the Russian nationaly hymn, followed by the Prussian national hymn, shall be played when their imperial majesties enter their box.

PHISIOLOGY OF EXERCISE.

An Interesting Paper Read at the Social Science Convention at Saratoga.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 3.—At the morning session of the American Social Science association several papers were read on health, the first one being by R. R. Bolton of the New York university on the "Phisiology of Exercise." His resume of the subject was very interesting. He condemned spasmodic exercise, such as training for an athletic competition, and then relinquishing the exercise until the next contest. He spoke in favor of bicycling and golf as the best kind of exercise for both old and young, and reviewed at length the effect upon the system of judicial exercise. Last night the following officers were elected: President, James B. Angell of Ann Arbor, Mich.; first vice-president, F. J. Kingsbury of Waterbury, Conn., and sixteen associate vice-presidents; general secretary, F. B. Sanborn of Concord, Mass.; treasurer, Anson Phelps Stokes of New York, and a board of directors.

They have selected a site for a new breaker and will sink a slope, the cost of which will be about $100,000. Work will at once be commenced upon this industry, which will employ 500 men and boys. The breaker will have a capacity of 450 tons of coal per day.

Watterson Believes He's Safe.

London, Sept. 3.—A letter has been received here from Henry Watterson of the Louisville Courier-Journal, addressed to a friend who wrote him last week and asked him for his views upon the political situation in the United States. Mr. Watterson said he could not add anything to the statements already made on the subject, and concluded with the remark: "As for myself, I am far enough away to be in no danger of being struck by the Indiana lightning."

Railroad Quarterly Report Overdue.

Boston, Sept. 3.—The New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad have asked the board of railroad commissioners for an indulgence from the rule requiring quarterly reports to be filed fifty days from close of quarter. The June 30 report is now twelve days overdue and the road asks leave until the 15th of September for the filing of this report. It is understood that some of the records of the company have been destroyed by fire.

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 73 Degrees.

There are 940 election districts in this State.

The Daily Press will be issued at noon on Saturday. There will be no paper on Labor Day.

Congressman Benton McMillin, of Tennessee, will probably address the Democratic State convention next week.

Allan McDermott has authoritatively announced that he will accept the Hudson county district Congressional nomination, and that if he receives the honor he will make the fight for election on a gold standard issue.

Those Plainfielders who are agitating the subject of individual cups for the public schools will doubtless be encouraged to pursue their work in that direction with greater vigor, since the superintendent of the Bureau of Contagious Diseases of Newark has recommended that each scholar in the public schools of that city be provided with an individual cup or glass.

There was not only romance but unadulterated novelty in the flight of the young Jersey couple who yesterday mounted a bicycle "built for two" and sped off to the altar of Hymen as found at the home of a country justice of the peace near New Brunswick, where "two hearts were made to beat as one." The old man—i. e. the father of the bride—pursued with a spirit of wrath, and an old horse. But the equine was pitted against uneven odds—ball bearings, pneumatic tires and a power that came from a knowledge that the parental ire was likely to interrupt—and the animal arrived at the end about forty-seven lengths in the rear of Cupid's rig. Piqued at his defeat, the old man demolished the bicycle, but what cared the happy couple then.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation, can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

In a recent letter to the manufacturers Mr. W. F. Benjamin, editor of the Spectator, Rushford, N. Y., says: "It may be a pleasure to you to know the high esteem in which Chamberlain's medicines are held by the people of your own state, where they must be best known. An aunt of mine, who resides at Dexter, Iowa, was about to visit me a few years since, and before leaving home wrote me, asking if they were sold here, stating if they were not she would bring a quantity with her, as she did not like to be without them." The medicines referred to are Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds and croup; Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, pains in the side and chest, and Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for bowel complaints. These medicines have been in constant use in Iowa for almost a quarter of a century. The people have learned that they are articles of great worth and merit, and unequaled by any other. They are for sale here by T. S. Armstrong druggist.

It is called Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It always does the work." 50 cent, bottles for sale by T. S. Armstrong druggist.

Some of the people hereabouts are complaining that since Plainfield is getting its supply of clear and wholesome water from driven wells near here, the supply at Scotch Plains has been noticeably diminished. Heretofore and only a few years ago, it is claimed that a good supply of water was readily obtained by driving or digging down from thirty to forty feet into the ground, but since the pumping station at Netherwood has been in operation, it now requires a depth of from sixty to seventy feet, in order to get even a fair supply of water. Some of the older inhabitants are inclined to believe that if Plainfield continues to draw on Scotch Plains' natural, through subterranean supply of water, when the dry season sets in, the place will need be bagged up and shipped to the coast. As it is now, women are seen daily trudging to and from the town pump with vessels for water.

A PARADISE SONG.

The day was hot, the way was long, the feet were tired, so tired.
The goal is won toward which we strove,
the goal so long desired,
The eyes which sought the distant hope through wavering mists of care
See it at last, oh close, so close in Paradise
the Fair.

The black, black night through which we groped is turned to radiant day,
The doubt to certainty more glad than song or speech can say;
The baffling winds which buffeted beyond our strength to bear
Blew us along the blessed way to Paradise
the Fair.

We doubted and we fainted and we seemed to miss the road
As, stumbling on, and painfully, we toiled beneath our load:
And the uphill left us breathless, and the tempest stripped us bare—
What matter, since they bore us up to Paradise the Fair?

We who were lonely once and found the silence very sore, Companioned round by our beloved are lonely nevermore;
The puzzles all are now explained, and the griefs which grieved us there
Are proved to be the Lord's sure path to Paradise the Fair.

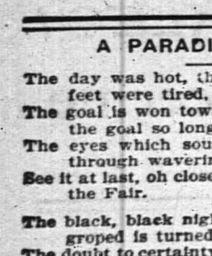
THE JUDGE'S SECRET.



EVER before in the history of the state had an advocate at the bar made such a strenuous effort to convince a jury of the innocence of the prisoner. Many years ago it was that the noted trial took place, but the scene all comes back to me as vividly as at the time it occurred, now that a startling revelation has recently been made, after the death of the judge who sat upon the bench.

Although not more than a boy, I witnessed the trial of Andrew Hastings with more absorbing interest than anything else in my life has since awakened. I remember the gestures, the impassioned face of Hastings' attorney, Col. George Harvey Palmer, and I can almost repeat the very words he uttered when addressing the jury. It was a wonderful defense he made—wonderful how he fought every inch of ground, while a chain of strong circumstantial evidence was tightening the halter about his client's neck. His cross-questioning of the state's witnesses was so exhaustive, his pleadings to the judge and to the jury so earnest as to arouse the sympathy of many in the packed courtroom. It was, as I remember, the first important case with which Col. Palmer had been connected in Monroe county courts. He had moved to Alabama from Virginia and had been in his new home but a few months before the Hastings murder case became the sensation of the hour.

Last week Judge James C. Garrow died in Monroe county, Ala., and among his papers was found a statement concerning the Hastings case—a statement written to be made public after his death. I have read that statement, and it, in connection with the trial of Andrew Hastings, makes such a remarkable chapter of court history that I have written it all down here.

It was in the days of the noted kuklux klan, that organization which sprung into life in the south during the memorable days of "reconstruction." It is supposed that the organizers of the klan originally intended to control the suddenly-freed slaves by appealing to their superstition, for the kuklux gave birth to hobgoblins, ghosts and spooks, and was shrouded in the most profound secrecy and mystery. But the klan soon became chargeable with many inexcusable and outrageous crimes.

Some time in the spring of 1867 the judiciary began to take active measures for the suppression of violence attributable to the klan, or rather to the lawless bands calling themselves kuklux, for the original organization had by that time ceased to exist.

On March 14, 1867, near the town of Claiborne, Monroe county, Ala., Amos Bivins, a camp follower of the union army, who had opened a store in Claiborne, was found dead on the side of the public road. He had been beaten to death with a club or some other heavy weapon.

"Another kuklux victim," was the public verdict, and with this the people were disposed to discard the matter from any further consideration, but Judge Garrow was one of the most earnest among officers of the law, who had decided the time had come in the south for the suppression of crime. He instructed the sheriff to make a most thorough investigation, and, if possible, to bring the murderer or murderers to justice.

It did not take long to fix the crime on Andrew Hastings, who clerked for Bivins. The evidence against Hastings while circumstantial, was very strong. Having been raised in the south, Hastings had no love for his employer, who was regarded as one of the despised class of "carpet baggers" in those days. He finally quarreled with his employer when reproved for insulting the union soldiers and negroes who traded at the store. Witnesses testified to this quar-

...sulted in Hastings being ...ed and there was an abundance of evidence to the fact that as he left the store he was heard to remark: "I'll fix the d—Yankee."

It was only two nights after Hastings' discharge that Bivins was killed. Two witnesses swore that Hastings tried to borrow a shotgun from them on the day prior to the murder. It was also proven that Hastings was heard to say when speaking of the killing: "The people ought to give the man who did it a vote of thanks."

Added to all this was the fact that Hastings could not account for his whereabouts on the night of the killing between the hours of eight and twelve o'clock. Bivins left his store about ten o'clock to go to his home, and it was presumed he was killed a few minutes after that hour.

When on trial Hastings stated that he had gone 'possum hunting alone, leaving home about eight o'clock, and returning about one o'clock the next morning. It was for this purpose he attempted to borrow a gun. He proved that it was his custom to go on these night hunts by himself. With his previous good character, this was all there was for the defense.

But Col. Palmer made the most of it and fought the evidence of the prosecution at times with an impassioned manner that almost amounted to a madness. I remember an old lawyer in the courtroom remarking: "Well, I never have seen an attorney so thoroughly identified with his client's interests before." Col. Palmer's argument to the jury, as I said, was a most masterly effort. His face was pale when he arose and walked to the jury box. His voice, although stern and full, trembled as he cried out: "Gentlemen of the jury, God is my witness when I say to you that I am here to plead for the life of an innocent man."

He made but little effort to controvert the damaging evidence against his client. His address was mainly a passionate appeal for mercy for an innocent man who was the victim of peculiar circumstances. He ended his speech by holding the Bible high above his head and saying:

"As true as the Holy Book I hold in my hand, so true is this man innocent. I say to you, I know it. You may call it intuition if you like, but so sure as you convict him you will have the blood of an innocent man upon your heads."

The verdict was guilty, and Hastings was sentenced to be hanged. The case was appealed to the supreme court, and the decision of the lower court was affirmed. An application was made to the governor for clemency, and a petition bearing the names of many prominent citizens of Monroe county was sent to the chief executive. Col. Palmer was leaving no stone unturned to save his client. The strain and hard work was telling on him. He had grown emaciated, and more than once had been ill from nervous prostration.

The governor refused to interfere, but intimated that he might give the case a more favorable consideration if the presiding judge recommended a commutation of the sentence. This was regarded as a forlorn hope, the determination of Judge Garrow to suppress crime being so well known.

The day of the execution was near at hand and Monroe county was preparing to witness its first hanging in many years. Then, like a thunder clap came the news that the governor had pardoned Andrew Hastings. Not even a commutation of the sentence to life imprisonment had been looked for, but here was an absolute pardon, and the murderer with a shadow of the gallows already over him was a free man.

It was some time before the people could be made to believe that the news was true, and many did not believe it until Hastings was allowed to walk from the prison unshackled.

The only reason the governor assigned was that Judge Garrow had requested it in a private letter, and the appeal was such as not to be disregarded.

But why did Judge Garrow make such a request? His honesty was above suspicion, his integrity was undoubted, and his firmness could not be questioned. Yet, after declaring it his purpose to check the lawlessness then existing by the strong arm of the law, he deliberately used the power of his office to free a man convicted of a most foul murder. What could it mean? The judge would explain. But the judge did not explain, and his silence through all these years has kept the Hastings case one of the strangest of the unexplained murder mysteries of Alabama. When questioned at the time the judge said: "I had just and sufficient reasons for acting as I did."

Time and time has this case and its strange denouement come before my mind, and often have I tried to reach a solution which would be satisfactory to myself and leave no suspicion upon the memory of a member of the judiciary whose character had always been above reproach.

It is all clear now. Judge Garrow has passed to stand himself before a judge whose justice, it is to be hoped, will be tempered with exceeding great mercy for us all. I have before me this statement, published in a Monroe county paper, and I give it here as the sequel to what I have already recorded:

"To Those Who May Be Living When I Am Dead: I believe if any shall desire to look into my life history they will find nothing that posterity shall be ashamed to read upon my gravestone. Yet there is one transaction of my career as criminal judge which demands of me an explanation. In truth, I should have been ready to meet that demand before I passed away, but I was so placed that my lips were sealed. The wrong (if wrong I did) was in allowing myself to be so hampered, but justice to an innocent man weighed in the balance against unjust suspicion toward myself.

"This single act of mine for which I may have borne public condemnation was the part I took in securing a pardon for one Andrew Hastings, arraigned and convicted of the murder of Amos Bivins at the fall term of the circuit court in Monroe county, Ala., October, 1867.

"Without any attempt to criticise the motives of those who thought it wise amid scenes of desolation and lawlessness to hold in check the passions of suddenly freed slaves by an appeal to their superstitious fears, I, with others of the judiciary, determined that the time had come in the south to restore law and order. With the determination to make an example of the first case that came under my jurisdiction, I refused to interfere in the death sentence of Hastings. To this decision I clung, although daily importuned by Col. George H. Palmer, Hastings' attorney. Never in my experience on the bench had I seen such persistence and dogged perseverance as that lawyer displayed.

"He came to me one day—a week before Hastings was to be executed—and said:

"'Judge Garrow, suppose I should give you proof that another man killed Bivins, would you recommend his pardon?'

"I replied that if the proof was such as to convince me of its reliability I would certainly feel called upon to interfere in the condemned man's behalf.

"'But, judge,' he continued, 'you will have to give me your solemn assurance not to divulge what I relate to you.'

"I demurred to entering into any such compact.

"'Remember,' he cried vehemently, 'while you can wrong no man by your silence, yet if you do not listen to me you will allow an innocent person to die upon the gallows. I swear this before the living God.'

"His manner as much as anything else overcame my scruples, and I gave him my promise 'so long as I live' not to reveal any statement he might make to me. Then he said:

"'Judge Garrow, the man Amos Bivins met his death as an expiation for a crime he had himself committed. In Virginia just before the close of the war, with a squad of marauding soldiers, he entered the home of a man who was bearing arms in defense of the very fireside that was being ruthlessly invaded and desecrated. Mother and children had to flee in the night, and she, the mother, met her death from the exposure and fright. This man Bivins was the only one recognized, as he had sold goods about the community from a peddler's pack. The hand which laid the blows upon his head may not have intended to strike life away, but reason lost its sway, and there was naught to stay the avenger's hand but death.'

"He paused a moment and letting his hand fall heavily upon my shoulder, he exclaimed huskily:

"'Judge Garrow, I am the murderer!'

"He brought to me the hickory stick, dark in places with the stains of clotted blood. I reviewed his history, his conduct of the case, how he had expended money and devoted his time with no hope of any remuneration: I looked into his face, and I knew he had spoken the truth.

"JUDGE GARROW, I AM THE MURDERER."

"I believe if it had not been for what he considered the justice of his cause and his little children, he would have surrendered at the first. It was undoubtedly his intention to have saved his client even if the last resource should have been to take the prisoner's place upon the gallows.

"There was nothing left for me to do but to urge the pardon of Hastings, and that I did. J. G. GARROW,

"Judge Munroe County Circuit."

It is not often desired to resurrect unpleasant memories, but sometimes justice to the living and to the dead demand that the sepulchers of the past be invaded. So I have given this bit of history, believing that I am justified in doing so, even if I had to drag from its grave such a ghastly skeleton as the kuklux klan.—Atlanta Constitution.

Strict Rules of Etiquette.

In Baron Rothschild's recent book of anecdotes he tells some curious tales of the extremely stringent rules of etiquette which prevailed at the French court in the reign of Louis XVI. Marie Antoinette christened Comtesse de Noailles "Mme. Etiquette." Once, when she fell from a donkey in her private grounds, she jumped to her feet and cried out, laughing: "Go and fetch Mme. de Noailles; she will tell us what is prescribed for a queen of France when she falls off a donkey." One cold winter night when the queen was undressing the maid was handing her the chemise de nuit when the lady in waiting came in, to whom, as being of superior rank, the garment had to be given over. She could not touch it, however, until she had removed her gloves, and before that operation had been performed Duchess d'Orleans, a princess of the blood, turned up, and after her Comtesse de Provence, who was of higher rank still, so that the chemise had to be handed from one to the other, while the queen stood waiting and shivering. At last, unable to contain herself any longer, she exclaimed: "It is odious! What a nuisance!"—Mirror.

MILITARY MARCHING.

Pace in Different Armies—Effect of Music on the March.

A curious report of the marching capabilities of the different European armies, drawn up at the German ministry of war, has at the moment a special interest. The figures are those of the established "regulations" of the several services, and it appears that the length of the Russian soldier's pace is 71 centimeters; of the German, 80, while the French, Austrian, Belgian, Swedish and Swiss soldiers all tread a pace of 75 centimeters. The Italian soldier takes 120 steps in a minute, the French from 112 to 116, the German 115, the Austrian 118 and the Belgian 110 steps. An Italian regiment marches at the rate of 90 meters in the minute, a German regiment at 89, an English at 88 and a French regiment at 86 meters per minute. The meter is equal to about 39 1-3 inches, and in English measure, therefore, the rate of progression of the four last-mentioned regiments would be (about) as follows: The Italians, 98 yards per minute; the Germans, 96; the English, 95; the French, 93 yards per minute. It may be mentioned here that, by the regulations of the British service, our slow march consists of 75 30-inch paces to the minute, this measure being used only on parade and for occasions of solemn pageantry. The quick march, in which all evolutions are performed, increases to 110 paces, while the "double" rises to 150 paces in the minute.

It is now generally agreed that as athletes the moderns are stronger and "able to obtain more results from their exertions than the ancients." Whether this may be justly said in reference to military prowess is perhaps not quite so clear. The standard pace of the Roman soldier was the same as our own (30 inches), the length of 5 feet being really the measurement of two steps, or the pace from where either foot was lifted up to that on which the same foot was again set down. The Roman mile of 1,000 paces was equal to rather more than nine-tenths of our own statute mile, and the legions usually marched at the rate of 20 of their miles (say 18 of ours) in five hours. But this was often exceeded on emergency, and to estimate the true quality of this performance it must be remembered that the Roman foot soldier carried a load of some 60 pounds' weight besides his arms. Josephus says that on the march he was "but very little different from a beast of burden." Lord Wolseley tells us that a division can march 2½ miles an hour if very well managed, but that, as a rule, time should be calculated at 2 miles an hour, including ordinary halts.

The rationale of cadenced marching is too obvious to require analysis, and all modern marches are, as far as possible, made to some kind of music. "Sounds," said a great master of military science, "have a secret power over us, disposing our organs to bodily exercises, and at the same time, deluding, as it were, the toil of them." If the band is broken up Lord Wolseley counsels officers to call upon the drums and bugles. The troops "march 100 per cent. better than in silence," and, this resource also failing, the men should be got to sing by companies. All this was well understood by the ancients. Plutarch describes the Lacedaemonians, when advancing to the attack, as "keeping pace to the time of their flutes, their music leading them into danger cheerfully and unconcerned." Most of their actual marches, however, were performed in silence.

With such a widespread experience of its advantages, it is remarkable that cadenced marching should have fallen into almost total disuse during the middle ages. To remove this defect in the French military system was one of the chief labors of Marshal Saxe. In the middle of the last century the musical instruments of the French army were as poor as some of the so-called "marches" of their composers. They might, indeed, have turned their fifes and drums to better account; for the nature of their discipline is sufficiently indicated by the following observation by Marshal Saxe: "As every man is suffered to consult his own ease and inclination, some march slow and others fast; but what is to be expected from troops that cannot be brought to keep one certain regular pace?" On the contrary, their well-ordered marching was the glory of the Prussian troops, and the victories of Frederick the Great at Rosbach, Leuthen and Zorndorf were greatly due to this superiority. At this time the Germans had marches of great merit as musical compositions, and the French poverty in this particular was, in fact, relieved from a German source. They also adopted many of the German instruments, as well as others in use among the Walloon regiments. At this date Handel had given to our own troops the stately measure of the march in "Scipio" and many another composition of a similar marked character. But the time was not yet for such strains as the march in "Die Zauberflote," or for the solemnity of Beethoven's funeral dirges.—St. James' Gazette.

SLEEP AS A VACATION

Complete Bodily Rest Is Often Better Than Change of Scene and Climate.

It has been suggested that what some people want is sleep holidays. They do not need to go to watering places and summer hotels and to be entertained by a round of gayety with a band always playing. The apostles of the new method say that many people would be benefited if they just went to bed and slept for lengthened periods, and that they might do well to take holidays in just that way. They affirm that as a rule men and women and children do not get sleep enough and that the old adage: "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy and wealthy and wise," needs changing. There need be no reference to early rising in it. For "early to rise" "late to rise" might be substituted. The advice of that old saw was concocted, they say, in days when there was no express trains, no telegraphs, no telephones, no hurry. Where is the use of telling people to get up early whose brains are racked by anxiety and worry and who are really being burned up by the ever-increasing rate at which things have to be done? The proper thing to say to them is to get as much sleep as they possibly can on every possible occasion. The suggestion of occasional sleep holidays, when worried people of this kind could temporarily shuffle off their mortal coil, is on this understanding quite intelligible. There would be no difficulty in making arrangements to carry the scheme out. The proprietors of the summer resorts would no doubt be glad to provide accommodation for any number of somnolent guests. The prevailing question would be not "What is there for dinner?" but "Is my bed ...?" There would be memoranda as to the length of time sleep had been indulged in or was to continue. "Mr. A—— came on Saturday; he is to be called on Wednesday night;" "Mrs. B—— will sleep for one week," etc. No doubt if the fad were started, establishments would vie with each other in the perfection of their sleeping preparations, and we should be told that absolutely unbroken repose for any desired period could be obtained.

Joking apart, however, there may be something in the contention that a greater amount of sleep is required by people nowadays — especially brain workers—than was formerly the case. Nikola Tesla, the electrician, is credited with saying that he believes a man might live 200 years if he would sleep most of the time. That is why negroes often live to advanced old age, because they sleep so much. He also alluded to the current report that Mr. Gladstone now sleeps 17 hours every day. There is something distinctly pleasant in the idea of an old age of such commanding intellect being kept vigorous by this simplest of remedies. But the worst of precepts, like those of modern apostles of sleep is that their instructions will be taken advantage of by the lazy and brainless as an excuse for an inactivity for which they have no manner of warrant, either in the development of their brains or the delicate adjustment of their nervous system. When the professional tramps read of Gladstone we shall find stacks of them asleep by the roadside.—Toronto Mail and Empire

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? THE SUFFERING TURK

Bad Armenians, He Says, Are Slaying His Soldiers.

MANY ALREADY KILLED AND WOUNDED

Stories from the Sublime Porte Given to the Press by the Turkish Minister at Washington—All the Trouble Due to the Armenian Rebels.

Washington, Sept. 3.—The Turkish legation has received from the sublime porte the following telegram: "When the troops were passing through Pera, on their return from the Selamlik, a bomb was thrown from a house, but although the bomb exploded no harm was done. Three Armenians were arrested in connection with this attempt. In the rooms of the ministers of the school for girls at Psomatia, thirty-six bombs, dynamite and fire-arms were discovered. The number of soldiers and agents of the authorities killed or wounded by the Armenian revolutionists during the troubles is considerable."

PLOT OF THE TURKS.

The Rioting Instigated by the Government and Permitted by the Powers.

Boston, Sept. 3.—Hagop Bogigian of the American Armenian relief committee is of the opinion that the trouble in the Ottoman bank, Constantinople, was not the work of any Armenian society antagonistic to Turkish interests or desires. He says: "The fact is, that from the beginning of the first massacre at Sassoon to the last one in Constantinople, in every instance it was the work of the agents of the Turkish government, well paid, planned and arranged. This is a fact that at least two of the signatory powers understand and are perfectly cognizant of. Both are playing a game of chess. These so-called riots are expected to furnish to either of them an advantage over the other. Neither of them has got a particle of humanity nor true civilization, not to say Christianity. It is perfectly plain to those who understand the workings of the last two years' butchery in Turkey that the so-called Armenian revolutionists, if Armenians at all, were Turkish agents, receiving regular salaries with written guarantees from the Turkish government that no harm should come to them, and that after the accomplishment of their work in particular places and particular times they should be allowed to go out of the country or live there under the direct protection of the government, in either case receiving high salaries. These facts are well known to the representatives of European powers, but those Christian and civilized nations and government encourage the Turkish governments in its cruelties and barbarities by their inactivity and jealousy. What a terrible mockery of Christianity! If this is the kind of Christianity and civilization they are trying to introduce into Asia, Africa and the islands of the sea, I hope God will be merciful to those countries and spare them from falling into cowardice, selfishness and inhumanity."

WILL ACT INDEPENDENTLY.

England Said To Have Changed Her Policy with Regard to Turkey.

London, Sept. 3.—The report in official circles that Lord Salisbury has determined to pursue his own course at Constantinople without regard to the other powers, and that he has given the British ambassador, Sir Philip Currie, precise and significant instructions, with greater powers, to command naval aid in enforcing the demands of Great Britain, has caused a division of opinion among those generally well-informed, some scouting the idea of the government acting without at least the moral support of the other powers, while others believe the report is true, and point to the recent dispatch of a powerful fleet to Turkish waters and the premier's well known devotion to the principle of "England's splendid isolation" for confirmation of their views.

San Francisco Wants Li Hung.

San Francisco, Sept. 3.—The chamber of commerce, board of trade and Mayor Sutro have sent an official invitation to Li Hung Chang through the Chinese consul general here to a reception at the hall of the chamber of commerce should he pass through San Francisco. The Southern Pacific campany has placed at the disposal of Li Hung Chang a special train from New York to this city and thence to Portland, Ore., if required.

Mortgaged for $1,400,000.

New York, Sept. 3.—A mortgage for $1,400,000 has been taken by the New York Life Insurance company on the new office building which is being erected at the northeast corner of Pearl street and Broadway by the Central Syndicate Building company for the Central National bank. The mortgage is due in 1898, with interest at 4½ per cent., the principal and interest payable in gold.

German-American Engineers.

Pittsburg, Sept. 3.—The twelfth annual convention of the German-American Engineers' society is in session here. One hundred delegates from all parts of the country were given an official reception at the Victoria hotel last evening. The formal business of the convention began this morning.

Placed on Retired List.

Washington, Sept. 3.—Major John Egan, First artillery, having served more than thirty years, has just been, at his own request, placed on the retired list. He was born in New York and appointed to the military academy from New York in 1838.

OUR LABOR TOO DEAR

Li Hung Says We Cannot Compete With the World's Markets.

EXCLUSION ACT UNFAIR AND FOOLISH

Hopes for Its Repeal Under Another Administration—Too Many Political Parties in the United States, He Says. Irishmen Hate the Chinese.

New York, Sept. 3.—Li Hung Chang and suite left for Washington this morning. They were conducted from the Waldorf to Desbrosses street ferry and to Jersey City, where a special train was in waiting. A vast crowd congregated at both the New York and New Jersey ferries and cheered the distinguished old Chinaman as he departed. At the reception in Brooklyn yesterday afternoon Li came near fainting and was compelled to retire to his hotel, where he denied himself to all callers. Li's finger, which was badly jammed in a carriage during Tuesday's demonstration, was greatly improved this morning. Before starting for Brooklyn the viceroy received a number of newspaper representatives and submitted to an interview. He was asked in what respect the people of the United States had failed to come up to his expectations.

Too Many Political Parties.

"I cannot say anything bad about the American people or America," said the viceroy. "I have nothing to complain of. My reception has been very gratifying to me. The only criticism I have to make is that there are too many political parties in this country. I hope that the press will endeavor to unite people into fewer parties. I think that it will be better for the country." "Have you purchased or contracted for any material for China which is necessary for shipbuilding or railroads or other improvements in China since you have been in this country?" he was asked. The viceroy evaded the question.

Exclusion Act Unfair and Foolish.

"Do you look for the repeal or modification of the Chinese exclusion law, known as the Geary act, passed by our congress in 1892?" "I know," said the viceroy, "that you are to have a new election in this country and that, necessarily, there will be changes in your government. I confidently expect that the friends of China will support measures looking to the repeal of the present law. I know that the press is the most influential institution in America. I hope that the press will use its influence with the government to have the Chinese exclusion law repealed. The exclusion act is a most unfair one and most foolish, because it is admitted by all who have studied political economy that competition and competition alone will keep a market in good health whether the market is one of commerce or labor. The democrats wish to monopolize the labor market of America. By exculding the Chinese you kill healthy competition.

Labor Too Dear in America.

"It would be the same thing if we in China excluded your goods, although they were cheaper and better than the goods of other countries which were allowed to come to our shores. I ask you, would that be fair or would it not? Put aside from your minds that I am a high Chinese official and mandarin and look upon me as a man who is studying the best interests of America. I say to you that to exclude cheap labor or cheap commerce from your country is unfair and against the best interests of your country. By excluding the Chinese and taking the Irish you get inferior labor and pay superior prices for it. You are proud of your state. You are proud that you represent the best type of modern civilization. You boast of your freedom, of your liberty. Is the exclusion of the Chinese a part of your scheme of liberty? You in America, according to the statistics of the patent office, turn out more inventions than any other country. In America, agriculture, commerce and industry equally have the attention of the people. In England, it is the industry which makes that nation. England is the workshop of the world. You make mechanical things better in this country than they do in any other, but you charge too much for them. Your labor is too dear.

Blames the Irish.

"Exclude cheap labor and you cannot compete with the markets of the world. Let your labor have free competition and it will become cheaper. A Chinaman lives a more simple life than an Irishman and the Irish hate the Chinese. Is this fair to exclude my countrymen? If any gentleman wishes to advance any argument in support of the exclusion of the Chinese I will be pleased to hear it and answer him." No reporter cared to argue the question with the ambassador and the following was put to him. "Do you favor the establishment of newspapers on the American plan in China?" "We have newspapers in China," said the viceroy, "but the editors are too economical in telling the truth. We would be pleased to get editors who will tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, but at present editors are too conservative in writing the truth. If we can get truthful editors we will be pleased."

John R. Gentry's Fast Race in Harness.

Fleetwood Park, N. Y., Sept. 3.—In the free-for-all pace race yesterday afternoon John R. Gentry won the third heat and race, leading from start to finish. Robert J. was second and Frank Agan third. Time, 2:03¼. The time of the three heats won by John R. Gentry is the fastest ever made by a harness horse.

SPORTS

THURSDAY, Sept. 3. Sun rises 5:28 a. m., sets 6:29 p. m. Lanterns must be lighted between 7:29 p. m. and 4:28 a. m.

Cyclists desiring to join the League o American Wheelmen will be furnished with application blanks and necessary information by addressing the Cycling Department of the Daily Press.

CYCLING COMMENT.

W. Gordon Williams, of East Front street, has traded his Eclipse bicycle for a Barnes.

Make a good impression on the visitors, Saturday. Everyone is asked to decorate. You can get flags, festooning and lanterns from R. C. Rand.

James G. Voorhies, of Clinton avenue, has given up the store in the Y. M. C. A. building, in which he recently conducted the bicycle business.

Another party of bicyclists from this city will ride their wheels to New Rochelle and return on Sunday next. They expect to reach there in time for good fishing and the party will be headed by Samuel Goff and M. Burke.

About sixteen members of the Junior Cycle Club of the New Brunswick Y. M. C. A. enjoyed a run to this city yesterday afternoon, and were entertained at the local Y. M. C. A. building. They returned home late in the afternoon.

George A. Horne, of Willow avenue, Wilbur F. Cornwell, of Waynewood place, and Vincent J. Rittenhouse, of East Sixth street, started early this morning on their wheels for Asbury Park. They will return this afternoon.

W. Gordon Williams, of East Front street, met with a painful accident last Tuesday evening. He was cleaning his wheel and caught his left thumb in the pedal as it was revolving. His thumb was crushed between the pedal and the crank and bled freely.

Captain Charles C. Lister, of the Crescent Wheelmen, makes a special announcement in The Press today, requesting all members to report at the club house, 104 West Second street, on Saturday with bicycles trimed and the riders to wear white duck pants, etc.

While spending his summer vacation near Hartwick, N. Y., George P. Smith, of Crescent avenue, recently entered a carnival of sports at Lawrence, N. Y. The only regular athletic event besides the bicycle races was a hundred yard dash which Smith won easily by about ten feet.

While riding on East Fifth street, near Park avenue early last evening, Miss Amy Burt and Miss Eleanor Williams, both of West Seventh street, met with an accident. They rode too close together and the pedal of one wheel caught in the front wheel of the other. Both young ladies were thrown and were severly shaken up and bruised by the tumble.

Charles C. Lister, captain of the Crescent Wheelmen, has been invited to join with the captains of other clubs to form an escort for the last relay rider in the Journal Examiner trans-continental bicycle relay race which started from San Francisco at noon, Tuesday, August 25th, carrying a war message to General Nelson A. Miles, at New York. The last relay is expected to reach McCombs Dam Bridge, New York, and it is planned to escort him from there to Fifty-seventh street and Broadway, and thence to the Journal office on Park Row. Captain Lister expects to be present.

For the benefit of those who have only recently taken an interest in the carnival, the following is published.

Prizes will be given for the following: Club with the largest number, first, second and third; best uniformed club, first and second; best individual decorated wheel, man's, first and second; best individual decorated wheel, lady's, first and second; best burlesque, first and second; best military organization, first and second; best appearing Jersey club with largest number, first and second; best decorated juvenile wheel, first and second; best decorated tandem, first and second; best business float, first and second.

Probably the greatest race meet ever held in Plainfield will be seen on the afternoon of Saturday, September 26th, at the Crescent Oval. On that day the Crescent Wheelmen will hold a national circuit meet and all the fast riders, amateurs and professionals, will be present. Last year, the national circuit started at Plainfield and all remember the immense crowd that thronged Plainfield that day. But many of the fast riders did not start in the circuit until later, not being in condition at that time. They have all appeared now, however, and will be in the pink of condition in time for the Plainfield meet. Entry blanks have been sent all over the country and entries have already been received from riders as far off as Maine and Iowa. Great preparations are being made and the Crescent Oval will be put in perfect condition for the races; it is already very good.

AROUND THE BASES.

If pou want to hear some real old-time coaching and see some real old-time baseball playing, then wend your way toward the Y. M. C. A. field, just off of Washington avenue, Monday morning at 10 o'clock, and see the old Crescents defeat the youngsters of the Y. M. C. A. team. You smile at that last remark about the veterans defeating them, but don't you worry. The old-timers own that they are not as young as they used to be and can't skip around the diamond as easily, but there is lots of life in them yet. And then don't forget the battery. Tom Keller is keeping that a secret, and they must be something great for that worthy ex-manager has grown five inches around in his efforts to keep the secret. The rest of the team will be as follows: Tom Keller will guard first base, George Cadmus will waltz around the vicinity of the second bag, while Captain George R. Cornwell will act in his old position as shortstop. J. Hervey Doane will stop red hot grounders at third. Then in the outfield, "Chick" Demarest will try his hand at left field, Fred Walz will try to catch the balls coming into the centre fielders territory, while Will Cadmus will look after the right field. The umpire has not yet been selected, but a subscription is already being started by the cranks for the benefit of his wife and children. Manager McLaughlin will announce the personal of his team in a few days.

LAWN TENNIS.

The tournament at the courts of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on next Monday promises to be an interesting one as it is for the championship of the club. The championship cup is, at present, held by Carl F. Walz, who has won it twice and only needs to win it again to have it become his personal property. The winner of the tournament will play Walz and on that result depends the championship. There will be no tea in connection with the tournament on account of the near approach of the time when the new club house is to be opened. This will probably be the last tournament on the present courts of the club as the club will give up possession of their present courts this fall and build new ones in the rear of the new club house, now being erected on Plainfield avenue.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

John L. Force, Fred Moore and Charles Moore spent yesterday in the country hunting for early game. They expect the game to arrive in a few days.

ON TO MAUCH CHUNK.

A Delightful Excursion For Plainfielders on Labor Day.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey announces that it will run another low-rate excursion to Mauch Chunk on Monday next. It will be a holiday outing and should be sufficiently attractive to draw a generous attendance from Plainfield and vicinity. These excursions are surely growing more popular as time wears on, and it is an undisputed fact that there are no other one-day resorts that afford so great an amount of pleasure to the tourist.

The old city of Mauch Chunk is always interesting and the charm of Glen Onoko never fades from the memory of those that have had the good fortune to have paid it a visit. The popular switchback gravity railroad has lost none of its exciting features. It is as much up and down hill as ever and a round trip made over it from and return to the summit of Mount Pisgah is full of invigorating influences and exhilaration. The road for a great distance west of Bethlehem runs along the crooked Lehigh river which is one of the most picturesque streams in the north and here and there along its banks are bustling cities and quiet towns. It is the longest and most desirable ride to be enjoyed anywhere within the same distance of Plainfield and the cost is within reach of all. Special train, which carries a lunch car, will leave Plainfield at 9:25 a. m. and return about 8 p. m. Rate for round trip is $1.75. Switchback tickets at half price, if purchased on train.

J. Howard Leggett, the druggist, now rides a new wheel and he enjoys the pastime very much.

When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

If you have ever seen a little child in the agony of summer complaint, you can realize the danger of the trouble and appreciate the value of instantaneous relief always afforded by DeWitt's Colic & Cholera Cure. For dysentery and diarrocea it is a reliable remedy. We could not afford to recommend this as a cure unless it were a cure. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

FAIR DAY NOW ESSENTIAL

EVERYTHING ELSE BIDS SUCCESS TO THE BICYCLE CARNIVAL.

Rules of the Coasting Contest in the Morning—Merchants and Residents to Decorate Liberally—Numbers of Clubs.

Less than twenty-four hours will elapse before the Daylight Bicycle Carnival will be in full blast. Already the city is beginning to assume a holiday appearance for some of our enterprising merchants and business men have started the ball rolling by decorating their stores and offices this afternoon so as to be in readiness for tomorrow. The efforts of the committee have not been in vain and all is ready for a grand event that will excell any affair of the kind ever held in this section of the country. That is, unless it rains; from present appearances clear weather seems to be likely, however. Should it rain, the Carnival will be held on the following Saturday.

Every resident in Plainfield and North Plainfield should not fail to decorate to some extent, and the store keepers should all see that bunting, flags, or some other decorations adorn the front of their places of business. The crowd will begin to appear early in the morning and the ingoing procession will continue until late in the afternoon.

The coasting contest in the morning has aroused lots of interest and the Watchung avenue hill is crowded every afternoon with scores of wheelmen who are practicing for the event. Some claim to have coasted almost to Richmond street, but it remains to be seen whether that can be accomplished under the rules that have been adodted to goveren the contest. The rules are as follows:

The entries shall be confined to amateurs as defined by the L. A. W.

The start shall be from a push-off at a tape stretched at the top of the hill. Official pushers-off to be designated by the committee. No pusher off shall overstep the said tape. Such an offense shall be considered sufficient cause for the disqualification of the competitor affected.

Not more than one contestant shall be started at one time.

The body shall be kept as rigid as possible, and the feet shall not be removed from their perch until the rider dismounts or falls off. "Sculling," wobbling of the head or body, the wobbling or zigzagging of the wheel, or taking the course of another contestant when less than two open lengths ahead, shall be considered foul riding, and be sufficient cause for the disqualification of the contestant. Touching the pedals for any reason whatsoever shall also be cause for disqualification.

The finish shall be judged by the furtherest part of the rider's foot when he dismounts or falls off his machine. All contestants shall remain on the exact spot at which they dismount until released by the measurers.

There shall be no restrictions as to the weight or style of machine; but no wheel shall be provided with extraneous weights or mechanical aids, nor be unprovided with chains, (or levers,) cranks and pedals.

The referee shall have general supervision of the contest. He shall give judgment on protests received by him, shall decide all questions or objections respecting foul riding or offenses of which he may be personally cognizant or which may be brought to his attention by an umpire or other officer. He shall decide all questions the settlement of which is not otherwise provided for in these rules. His decision in all cases shall be final. No protest shall be considered that is not filed by the contestant himself as soon as possible after its occurrence.

The measurers shall decide the position of the men at the finish, and their decision shall be final and without appeal. In case of disagreement, the measurements of the majority shall decide.

Judges shall be stationed at such points on the course as the referee may direct, to watch closely the riding and immediately report to the referee any competitor or competitors whose riding he may consider unfair, to the end that the referee before making any decision may be credibly informed by an official as to the facts.

N. R. Titsworth has been placed in charge of the contest as referee and will be assisted by Charles C. Lister, James Rogers, Charles B. Morse, Fred J. Pope and Fred Barker. It will be remembered that the contest starts at 10 o'clock and will close at 11:45 o'clock. The entrance fee is twenty-five cents, and each contestant may start as many times as he wishes on payment of his entrance fee before each attempt.

BROKE HIS ARM.

Riding a High Wheel Was Dangerous Practice for Young Thompson.

The good old ordinaries are few and far between, but Clarence Angleman, of East Fourth street, is one of the few who can claim ownership of one of those high wheels. This same wheel has a tendency to "buck" at the most inopportune occasions and shoot the rider over the handle bars. It is an old trick of the ordinary, but a decidedly unpleasant one, and Andrew Thompson, a Western Union Telegrayh messenger, had his arm broken in four places as a result of one of these tricks.

Yesterday afternoon, Thompson, who lives near Angleman, borrowed his wheel to experiment on it in front of his home. Suddenly the rear wheel reared up and Thompson went over the handle bar breaking his arm. Dr. Endicott set the injured member and the lad was sent to the hospital.

MAY ENTER THE MINISTRY.

Charles B. Brown Has Recvied the Offer of an Associate Pastorship.

The following item of news regarding a former Plainfielder was noted in the Minneapolis Penny Press of a recent issue.:

Charles B. Brown, until recently secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, of this city, has been offered the position of associate pastor of the new inter-denominational mission on Washington avenue south, and will probably accept the same, entering upon the duties at an early date. Mr. Brown's large acquaintanceship in the city and long experience in church, mission and Y. M. C. A. work peculiarly adapts him for this new field of service. It is proposed to push the work of the mission in all its departments, and to extend its influence over the entire city.

The New Firm.

The business people and residents of Plainfield are glad to know that J. P. Laire opened his store yesterday morning under such favorable circumstances. The firm name is the J. P. Laire Hardware Co. The store contains a complete and new stock of goods and everything in that line can be purchased. Mr. Laire feels confident that he will receive liberal patronage. Associated with Mr. Laire are Geo. Dunham, Frank Clarkson and Charles Kiederling, while Miss Mabelle Force is the efficient cashier.

Arranging for Their Tenth Anniversary.

A regular meeting of the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein was held in the hall on Somerset street last evening, and the attendance was fair. President Schoettlin was in the chair, but the main business transacted was simply of a routine nature. The committee recently appointed to arrange for the tenth anniversary of the society reported progress. The anniversary will occur on Oct. 19th, when it is expected visitors will be present from all parts of the State.

Willing to Come for Expenses.

Mr. Drake, of Elizabeth, the leader of the celebrated band of that place, has offered to come to this city and give a grand concert, providing the expenses of travel are paid. There is a sufficient amount of money it is believed left in the hands of the '95 Fourth of July Committee to meet such expenses, and as the committee has no other way to dispense with the money, why not have a concert which everyone could enjoy free of charge?

Knights Of Honor Meeting.

Dictator Thad Smith presided at the meeting of Senate Lodge, Knights of Honor in Firemen's Hall, last evening. One of the main objects of the meeting was to decide upon a uniform rate of assesment. Heretofore there has been no regular classification according to age. The new schedule will go into effect on October 1st. On the third Thursday in this month the grand officers will be here and more fully discuss the matter.

Turned Out of House.

A sad case is reported from Dunellen, where a well-known resident was summarily set out of house and home by the authorities, last evening, because he was a little behind in his rent. The occupant of the house offered to raise two months' pay, it is said, and promised the balance within thirty days. But this offer did not seem to suit the sturdy landlord and "Jersey justice" took its course.

Borough Democratic Primary.

The Democrats of North Plainfield will meet in the basement of the school house tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock to select three delegates to the State Convention to be held at Trenton on Wednesday for the purpose of selecting Presidential electors.

Banner Raising Tomorrow.

The Republican campaign committee met last evening after the severe storm and decided to raise the banner tomorrow evening, when it is expected that ex-Mayor W. L. Saunders will be present and make an address.

Real Estate Picking up.

There is already evidences that the sale of property along the proposed extension of Watchung avenue will be a lively one, as there are a number of people who are now inquiring about the properties.

BEING ROYALLY TREATED

G. A. R. DELEGATES ENJOYING A HUGE TIME.

The Attractions of the Twin Cities Thrown Open to Them—Comrade Smith a Veritable Encyclopoedia for All.

Hotel Sherman, Headquarters of the N. J. Department, G. A. R., at St. Paul, Minn.—The Plainfield delegates have already found the commissary department of the hotel and, having laid in a good supply of rations, have been out to see the city and its handsome decorations. They found the buildings covered with bunting and electric lights, and the residents willing and ready to grasp the hand of every Jerseyman, many of them asking for friends in and around Plainfield. Comrade Smith knows every Plainfield man, woman and child when asked about anyone. Then Mrs. Smith, how sorry she is that she has not got a better memory so she can make the members of the Relief Corps sorry they did not come fourteen hundred miles and see the beauties of this beautiful city and the manner in which the west receives its guests. The programme is:

8:30—Reception to the commander-in-chief and Mrs. Walker by the citizens' committee and citizens of St. Paul at Hotel Ryan.

8 to 12—Reception to the Grand Army, Woman's Relief Corps, Sons and Daughters of Veterans and the St. Paul citizens' committee by the Woman's Relief Corps, Department of Minnesota, in Senate chamber at State Capitol. Mrs. Marie Hasenwinkle, department president.

8—Military Order Loyal Legion, Commandery of Minnesota, headquarters Hotel Ryan annex, entrance from third floor of hotel and 414 Robert street. Companions welcome all the week.

And you bet the Plainfield boys won't see any of it. N.

POLICE REFORM OVER THE BROOK

Council Considering the Case of a Marshal Said to be Neglecting His Duty.

A special meeting of the Borough Council was held last evening in the Council rooms. Mayor Hegeman, Jr., Clerk Arnold, Counsel C. A. Reed and Councilmen Lounsbury, Valiant, Woolston were present. The meeting was called for the purpose of considering the case of Marshal Lines, who it is claimed has been neglecting his duty as an officer.

The meeting took the form of an informal conference, and the matter under consideration was discussed pro and con. without any definite results. The conference was a private one and nothing of a definite nature could be learned.

Councilman Lounsbury has the matter in charge and at his earliest convenience he will report in the matter. The session lasted over two hours. The regular meeting of the Council will be held this evening when a quantity of important business will be transacted, and Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed is expected to make a report on the Watchung avenue extension regarding the transfers of property.

Owes His Life to Frisbie.

Another illustration of the necessity of getting to the station on time was witnessed this morning when W. G. Morse, of East Fifth street, ran out from the waiting room to catch the 8:01 train for New York. Mr. Morse stumbled and fell on the car steps and narrowly escaped falling between the cars, when gallant James Frisbie rushed up and bodily lifted the passenger on the car. The train by this time was getting well under way and many persons turned their heads from what they expected would be a fatal accident.

Rev. H. J. Johnston to Take a Wife.

The marriage of Rev. Henry James Johnston, pastor of the Grace M. E. church, to Miss Mary Edwina Smith, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. George W. Smith, of East Orange, will take place next Thursday evening at the Calvary M. E. church, East Orange, at 7 o'clock. Rev. G. W. Smith is presiding elder of the Elizabeth district.

In the Same Regiment.

John M. Palmer, nominated on the National Democratic ticket from Illinois, served during the late rebellion in General James S. Negley's command. When General Thomas gave up his command at Nashville, John M. Palmer was transferred to General Negley's command.

The Disturber Not Found.

Patrolman Freleigh was called to the residence of Lemuel W. Serrell, Jr., on Crescent avenue, late last evening, as it was thought that a burglar had entered the house. A careful search by the officer failed to reveal any signs of one, however.

Hangs in a Good Place, Anyway.

J. E. Martine was asked by a Press reporter what he thought of the Republican banner. "Well," said he, "the only good thing I see about it is that it hangs in the same place that the Democratic banner hung in the last campaign."

WIND, RAIN, LIGHTNING.

A TERRIFIC STORM VISITED PLAINFIELD LAST NIGHT.

Lightning Struck in Several Places, But Did Not Cause Much Damage Except to Telephone and Electric Wires

Violent thunder storms seem to be unusually frequent this year and the third and most severe of all visited this section last night. Although the damage may not have amounted to as much as that of the last storm, yet the rain was simply a deluge and the thunder and lightning was continuous and of extreme severity.

It was really quite warm yesterday in comparison to the recent cool weather and there was a touch of humidity in the air. In the afternoon a thin haze partially obscured the blue sky, but the sun continued to shine. As the afternoon drew to a close and the crowded trains began to deposit their loads, the clouds began to gather over the Watchung Mountains. At 5:30 o'clock, the dark line of clouds began to move slowly onward.

A quarter of an hour later the grey cloud had changed to inky blackness and it approached rapidly. Out from under it rolled banks of ashy-colored clouds, boiling and raging as they came. Then the blackness of the upper strata of clouds assumed a coppery color, as though reflecting the light of a fire in the distance.

On came the clouds with remarkable rapidity and in a few moments the sky was obscured. The quickness with which the storm approached was unusual, but the approaching signs were not as portentious as on previous occasions.

Plainfield did not seem to realize that a storm was soon to break until it was almost here. The commuters scurried from the station to carriage or trolley car or else hurried homeward on foot, hoping to reach there ere the storm broke. Cyclists scorched along the streets dodging in and out between the throng of carriages that filled the streets. Young yelping curs ran for shelter only to get in the way of pedestrians, while the loud clang of the gongs on the bicycles added to the general turmoil.

First came the wind. It gathered the dust up in clouds and blinded the struggling pedestrians, while whirling away their hats. Trees swayed almost to the ground, while blinds rattled and everything seemed to portend a severe storm. In a moment the rain came. First in large drops that stung almost like hail and then in a perfect sheet. The wind still continued to blow, and the pourdown was uninterrupted. Pedestrians and cyclists scattered for shelter and then for nearly half an hour the rain came down in torrents. The thunder roared and crashed continuously, while the brilliant flashes of lightning seemed incessant. Gradually the storm went over, the rain ceased and the grumblings of the thunder in the distance was the only sign of the deluge.

Underfoot it was very evident that it had rained. The streets were flooded for a time until the dry ground soon soaked it up.

The street railway felt the effects of the storm. During the severest part of it the current was shut off and the cars were stopped. A lightning arrester on Richmond street was struck and traffic on the Netherwood extension was delayed for nearly an hour.

The Republican banner that was to be slung across North avenue last night, was all ready to be pulled across when the storm came. The wind and rain wrapped it around the guy wires that supported the pole and entangled it there.

Limbs were blown off numerous trees all over the city and some weak structures that had escaped other storms, collapsed at this one.

Evan Jones, of Kensington avenue, says that it was the most severe storm that has visited Plainfield in 35 years.

During the heavy shower last evening some of the electrical fluid ran over the incandescent wires leading into John Rafferty's sample room, on Park, and set fire to a lace curtain hanging in one of the front windows. Almost in an instant the light material was in a blaze, and it was with no little difficulty that the curtain was hauled down and the flames extinguished before igniting with the woodwork.

A big limb was blown from a tree at the corner of Linden avenue and Duer street so as to almost completely obstruct travel on the sidewalk.

Warren Engine Company's house on Somerset street suffered slightly from the severe lightning. The fuses were burned out and at the same time a curtain was burned considerably. The curtain hangs very close to where the wires enter the building and the tex-

MADISON AVENUE WIDENING.

Some Figures of Expense That the Improvement Will Make.

In connection with the widening of Madison avenue, the following taken from the commissioners' report will be of interest to Plainfield people:

The damages allowed for property taken from Front street to the Central Railroad crossing is $16,809.70, while the benefits assessed on the property fronting on that portion of Madison avenue to be widened is $954.72. The commissioners' fees amount to $251.21. The property fronting on Madison avenue from the Central Railroad to Seventh street has been assessed $1,160.78 by the commissioners. The other assessments are as follows:

Front street, east and west of Madison avenue, $2,121.37.
Second street, east and west of Madison avenue, $597.86.
Third street, east and west of Madison avenue, $120.70.
Fourth street, east and west of Madison avenue, $152.29.
Fifth street, east and west of Madison avenue, $117.31.
Sixth street, east and west of Madison avenue, $188.54.
Seventh street, north side of Madison avenue, $121.94.
City of Plainfield, balance, $2,933.15.

The commissioners state that the principal item of damage is the value of the brick building on the east corner of Madison avenue and Front street, a portion of which must be destroyed, and the damage is fixed at $5,280. Other property on Madison avenue, between Front street and Second street, by changing what is now not much more than a lane into a wide street, making the same available for business purposes, adds greatly to the market value, and this property in the judgment of the commissioners should bear a larger portion of the cost. The commissioners met last evening, but no business was transacted and an adjournment was made to Thursday evening, September 17th.

SHOOTING AT CLAY BIRDS.

Plainfield Knocks Out Dunellen Cracksmen to the Tune of 16.

There was some exciting shooting on the grounds of the Dunellen Gun Club yesterday afternoon. The match was between the Independent Gun Club, of this city, and the Dunellen Gun Club, of Dunellen. Ten men were to have contested on each side, but some didn't show up, so the number of shooters was limited to seven. No prizes were offered in the contest, the only consideration being that the losing club should pay for the clay birds and other expenses. Henry Haurand, of this city, acted as referee, and Messrs. Fletche and Gray alternated in keeping the scores.

The following is a summary of the shoot:

A return match will be shot on the Plainfield grounds on a date next month not yet decided upon.

NEW COURSE OF STUDY.

North Plainfield Public School Made a Preparatory One For College.

Arrangements are rapidly being completed for a successful opening of the North Plainfield Public School, which will take place next Tuesday. Principal A. D. Warde is now at the school and is attending to the details in connection with the opening.

At the meeting of the Board of Education held this week a new course of study was adopted, embodying the eleventh and twelfth grades. This will make the school a preparatory one for college. Latin, Greek, German, French and the higher mathematics with a corresponding course in science will be taught. The members also decided to introduce a kindergarten department, which will be complete in every particular. Pupils will now be able to complete their studies at this school and at the same time prepare for college if they so desire.

No Action Taken Yet.

A meeting of the Police Board was held last evening and a number of the officers appeared before the Board. It is understood, however, that no action was taken regarding the charges made against two of the policemen by the disreputable woman from South Amboy, now in the county jail.

"Boys will be boys," but you can't afford to lose any of them. Be ready for the green apple season by having DeWitt's Colic and Cholera Cure in the house. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

GUBERNATORIAL GOAL.

THAT IS STILL SAID TO BE FOSTER VOORHEES' AMBITION.

And John Kean is After the U. S. Senatorship — Voorhees' Determination Knocks Many Other Deals in the Head.

Though it has been repeatedly announced that State Senator Foster M. Voorhees, for three years the Republican leader in the New Jersey Senate, would not be a candidate for re-election, it is now certain that he will accept the nomination if the Union county Republicans tender it to him with some degree of unanimity says a Trenton dispatch. Assemblyman J. Martin Roll had been a candidate, with the reservation that he was not to be considered if Mr. Voorhees decided to run. Sheriff Kyte has been another candidate, but it is probable that he, too, will retire to make Mr. Voorhees' way clear.

Senator Voorhees himself is authority for the statement that he would accept a renomination. He was a delegate to the State Convention on Thursday, and his great popularity was attested by the ovation he received when he presented the platform as chairman of the Committee on Resolutions. The Union county delegation led the demonstration, which was taken up by the whole convention, but after reading the resolutions the Senator had the sagacity to quietly slip off the stage of the Opera House, and the loud calls for a speech failed to reach his ears.

This reconsideration of Voorhees intentions with regard to the Sentorship is probably influenced by the possibility of a nomination for Governor in 1898. John Kean is in the line for United States Senator. That was about settled by the National Convention which made Garret A. Hobart the nominee for Vice President and removed him as a Senatorial probability. Mr. Kean would otherwise have been a candidate for Governor again, with excellent chances of winning, since he has the powerful influence and strong personal friendship of General Sewall as a starter. If Voorhees had insisted upon retiring from public life for two years his friends and admirers feared that he would have lost a vast amount of valuable ground, for in two years much can be forgotten in politics, and their arguments on this line probably and more weight with the young man than any one thing else.

Mr. Kean's boom for United States Senator to succeed James Smith received its first healthy impetus on the night before the First Congressional district convention at Woodbury. He had gone down with State Committeeman Barker Gummere and W. S. Hancock, of Mercer county, and other North New Jersey friends of Congressman Loudenslager to be present at the convention and during the evening the party were entertained at the residence of State Senator Daniel J. Packer. The situation was discussed in an informal way and the Senatorial prize was acknowledged to be Mr. Kean's. Since then his boom has shown signs of considerable growth throughout the State, and his friends point with pride to his commendable course as a party leader. Of course, all these calculations are based upon the capture by the Republicans of both branches of the Legislature two years hence. Senator Smith's successor will not be chosen till 1899, a rather long look ahead.

STRUCK IN THE FOREHEAD.

A Heavy Board Descends Onto the Head of George Angerbauer.

George Angerbauer, of East Third street, who is in the employ of Boice, Runyon & Co., was unloading lumber from a wagon on Fairview avenue when he met with a serious accident that came very near proving fatal.

The lumber was being carried into William H. Bohl's new house and just as Mr. Angerbauer approached the building one of the carpenters on the scaffold above dropped a joist which struck Mr. Angerbauer in the middle of the forehead, just above the nose. He was thrown to the ground and a long and severe cut resulted. It was dressed at Armstrong's pharmacy.

A Warrenville Fire.

The house owned and occupied by Mrs. Dora Bohl, at Warrenville, was destroyed by fire yesterday morning between 9 and 10 o'clock. The loss is estimated to be about $1,500, partly insured. The cause of the fire is supposed to have been a defective flue. Mrs. Bohl is the mother of William H. Bohl, of Stone street.

The whole system is drained and undermined by indolent ulcers and open sores. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve speedily heals them. It is the best pile cure known. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

GOLD MEN'S TICKET

Palmer and Buckner Both Natives of Kentucky.

ONE WAS A BLUE, THE OTHER A GRAY

Final Day's Proceedings of the Indianapolis Convention—Main Points in the Platform—An Interview with the New Presidential Nominee.

Indianapolis, Sept. 4.—The second and final days' session of the national democratic party was conducted with the same business celerity that marked the opening proceedings. It closed up all its business, platform, nominations and every thing else in a continuous session of less than five hours. Then it anjourned sine die without once indulging in any extravagant proceedings, or at any time permitting its order of business to be interfered with by the galleries. In this respect the convention was an object lesson as to what national conventions might be made if the plans suggested in 1892 by ex-consul-general P. Collins of Boston, as to the limitation of spectators, in some modified form, were adopted by the great national parties. The nominees are senator John McAuley Palmer of Illinois for president. Ex-governor Simon Bolivar Buckner of Kentucky for vice-president. Both candidates were born in Kentucky. One wore the blue, the other the gray, so Louisville, the capital of the "Dark and Bloody Ground," was appropriately designated as the place of notification for both candidates, Sept. 12 being the date designated. Gen. Palmer was nominated on the first ballot and ex-Governor Buckner by acclamation.

Rich in Oratory.

The convention was rich in oratory throughout, but the speech of Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge of Kentucky easily took rank as one of the most effective of campaign utterances heard in recent years. When he rose to speak there was some hissing heard, but his brilliant oratory soon won him friends and he was repeatedly cheered. Before adjourning the convention took the precaution of clothing its executive committee with full power to take all proper steps to secure recognition for the ticket in states where the Australian ballot law or other legislation might interpose obstacles to the recognition of two democratic tickets each claiming to be regular. This difficulty is anticipated in Ohio and some other states in the accepted battle ground of the middle west.

Cleveland's Positive Declination.

During the early part of the day Daniel P. Griffin, chairman of the New York delegation, sent the following telegram to President Cleveland at Buzzards Bay: "There has been manifested an unmistakable desire upon the part of the convention to nominate you for the presidency. The New York delegation is anxious to learn your personal wishes, and would consider it an honor to vote for your nomination." To this telegram Mr. Cleveland sent this brief but conclusive answer: "My judgment and personal inclinations are so unalterably opposed that I cannot for one moment entertain the suggestion."

The Platform.

The platform adopted is, in part, as follows: This convention has assembled to uphold the principles upon which depend the honor and welfare of the American people, in order that the democrats throughout the Union may unite their patriotic efforts to avert disaster from their country and ruin from their party. The declarations of the Chicago convention attack individual freedom, the right of private contract, the independence of the judiciary and the authority of the president to enforce federal laws. They advocate a reckless attempt to increase the price of silver by legislation to the debasement of our monetary standard and threaten unlimited issues of paper money by the government. They abandon for republican allies the democratic cause of tariff reform to court the favor of protectionsts to their fiscal heresy. In view of these and other grave departures from democratic principles, we cannot support the candidates of the convention, nor be bound by its acts. The democratic party has survived many defeats, but could not survive a victory won in behalf of the doctrine and policy proclaimed in its name at Chicago.

All Other Parties Arraigned.

The conditions, however, which make possible such utterances from a national committee are the direct result of class legislation by the republican party. It still proclaims, as it has for years, the power and duty of the government to raise and maintain prices by law, and it proposes no remedy for existing evils except oppressive and unjust taxation. The national democracy here convened therefore renews its declaration of faith in democratic principles, especially as applicable to the conditions of the times. Taxation, tariff, excise or direct, is rightfully imposed only for public purposes, and not for private. Its amount is justly measured by public expenditures, which should be limited by scrupulous economy. The demand of the republican party for an increase in tariff taxation has its pretext in the deficiency of revenue, which has its cause in the stagnation of trade and reduced consumption, due entirely to the loss of confidence that has followed the populist threat of free coinage and depreciation of our money, and the republican practice of extravagant appropriations beyond the needs of good government. We arraign and condemn the populistic conventions of Chicago and St. Louis for the co-operation with the republican party in creating these conditions, which are pleaded in justification of a heavy increase of the burdens of the people by a further re-ort to protections. We therefore denounce protection and its ally, free coinage of silver, as schemes for the personal profit of a few at the expense of the masses. In fine, we reaffirm the historic democratic doctrine of tariff for revenue only.

Money and the Tariff.

The experience of mankind has shown that by reason of their natural qualities gold is the necessary money of the large affairs of commerce and business, while silver is conveniently adapted to minor transactions, and the most beneficial use of both together can be insured only by the adoption of the former as a standard of monetary measure, and the maintenance of silver at a parity with gold by its limited coinage under suitable safeguards of law. To the long established democratic policy we adhere and insist upon the maintenance of the gold standard, and of the parity therewith of every dollar issued by the government, and are firmly opposed to the free and unlimited coinage of silver and to the compulsory purchase of silver bullion. But we denounce also the further maintenance of the present costly patchwork system of national paper currency as a constant source of injury and peril.

Other Declarations.

The platform further declares for arbitration for the settlement of international disputes, a liberal policy of pensions to deserving soldiers and sailors and condemns all efforts to degrade the United States supreme court. The administration of President Cleveland was highly commended.

Gen. Palmer Interviewed.

When asked by a reporter what he proposed to do during the campaign Gen. Palmer replied that he was unable to talk intelligently upon the subject at present. "The location of headquarters and all matters of detail will be left in the hands of the national committee and my friends," he said. "That we shall make an active campaign goes without the saying." Senator Palmer expects to participate in the campaign as freely as possible, but what results would come from the work of the convention he would not predict. Had the convention not adjourned so hastily after completing its work the senator would have made a speech which would, the leaders with him hoped, have obviated the necessity for a formal notification. This will, however, come later, in accordance with democratic custom. Senator Palmer will at once devote himself to the preparation of his letter of accept ance.

EARTHQUAKE IN JAPAN.

One Town Destroyed, Several Damaged and Many Persons Reported Killed.

Yokohama, Sept. 4.—Much alarm is felt here over a report of an earthquake which took place in the northeast provinces of the main islands of Japan on Monday evening. The town of Rokugo has been entirely destroyed and several other towns severely damaged. Many persons are reported to have been killed by the earthquake, and a still larger number injured, while a multitude have suffered severe losses by damage to property. The provinces visited by the earthquake are the same as those devastated by the terrible earthquake and tidal wave of June 15 last, when a large number of towns were wiped out, and the estimated loss of life was 30,000.

Nominated for Congress.

Baltimore, Sept. 4.—Ex-state senator Robert Moss of Anne Arundel county was yesterday nominated for congress by the democrats of the Fifth district. The Chicago platform and nominees were endorsed by the convention.

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 4.—Congressman John J. Gardner has been unanimously renominated by the republicans of the Second Congressional district.

Free Trains Tendered Li.

New York, Sept. 4.—The Pennsylvania railroad and the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad company have tendered a free special train to viceroy Li Hung Chang and his party from Washington to Niagara Falls, the train to leave Washington to-morrow night, arriving at Canandaigua at 7:30, Rochester at 9:30 and Niagar Falls at 11.30 Sunday morning.

Superior Mine Burning.

Hurley, Wis., Sept. 4.—The Superior mine, one mile west of here is burning. The fire was discovered coming out of the shafts, which soon was completely destroyed. The fire is supposed to be near the fourth level and spreading both ways. There is no way to fight the fire except to cover all the openings and smother it, which will take a month.

LOVE TO TALK POLITICS.

Gratuitous Pedagogues in Statecraft Who Love to Prate Campaign Platitudes.

The gratuitous schoolmaster in politics has begun his work. He found a great field for his talents in the crowds that assembled about the bulletin boards during the last week's conventions.

He was first seen elbowing his way up close to a newspaper billboard. He read the bulletins already up, making a knowing observation on the different actions of the convention and prophesying what the next bulletin would announce. When a fresh one would be posted the meek-looking man next to him would turn around. The educator of his fellow-men did not need words. He knew for what that meek-looking man turned to him—he wanted knowledge. And he gave it to him—and to everybody else within hearing distance.

"Truth may be crushed to the ground," said the educator of his fellow-men, "but it will rise again with more force."

"I beg—" attempted the man whose necktie was racing up to his ears.

"Mark my words!" yelled the orator, "truth will prevail."

"That's right," from the crowd.

"Gentlemen, I tell you the time has come, the people want money—"

"You bet," yelled a man on the outskirts.

"—that will circulate," continued the orator, "as freely—"

"As water," interrupted the irreverent youth

It is easily seen that wind is essential to a street corner orator. The uninterested and fun-loving tough gentleman of Chicago's Paradise alley makes it necessary. He finds it great sport to get a few feet from the educator of the masses and interject the orator's remarks with jocularity.

The downtown streets are not the only places where the self-appointed orator prospers. Wherever people are wont to gather after nightfall the schoolmaster in politics is sure to be. Over on the North side there is a bit of breathing place called Washington square. Ever since the conventions there have been from one to a dozen of these orators scattered around the square, each with 50 or 100 auditors about him.

A man who passed through Washington square on Saturday night on his way to the cars stopped a moment to see what the apparent trouble was. He returned after midnight, and found the orators had increased since early evening. They were still at it when he passed out of the square again on his way home. They will keep at it.—Chicago Tribune.

Sales Talk

With Hood's Sarsaparilla, "Sales Talk," and show that this medicine has enjoyed public confidence and patronage to a greater extent than any other proprietary medicine. This is because it possesses greater medicinal merit and produces greater cures than any other. It is not what we say, but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, that Tells the Story.

All advertisements of Hood's Sarsaparilla, like Hood's Sarsaparilla itself, are honest. We have never deceived the public, and this with its superlative medicinal merit, is why the people have abiding confidence in it, and buy Hood's Sarsaparilla almost to the exclusion of all others.

Customers Want Hood's.

"We order Hood's Sarsaparilla in large quantities and it is the only blood purifier which a druggist can buy in large quantities without risk. It is selling very rapidly and customers who buy it once are sure to call for Hood's the next time. We believe Hood's Sarsaparilla must possess true merit in order to retain its popularity. Its sales exceed all similar preparations and its praises are often heard." L. SOMMER & SON, Springfield, Illinois.

Thousands of druggists say the same.

of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites, can be taken as easily in summer as in winter. Unlike the plain oil it is palatable, and the hypophosphites that are in it aid in digestion and at the same time tone up the system.

For sickly, delicate children, and for those whose lungs are affected, it is a mistake to leave it off in the summer months. The dose may be reduced if necessary.

We recommend the small size especially for summer use, and for children, where a smaller dose is required. It should be kept in a cool place after it is once opened.

LINEN BATISTE GOWNS.

Some Dressy Costumes for Afternoon Wear.

The linen batistes bear a faint resemblance to the heavier qualities, but they are quite different in texture and are made up more elaborately, and worn for quite different occasions. So sheer are some of the batistes as to be almost transparent, and the embroideries look as though worked by fairy fingers. Colored and tinsel effects are fashionable in these trimmings, and the colorings used are most exquisitely dainty and fine.

When embroidery is used the narrow Valenciennes lace is not used, but some of the very newest gowns are trimmed with the latter. A gown just finished, of the sheerest possible batiste, has three rows of this narrow lace along every seam of the skirt. The waist is quite covered with the same lace, put on in clusters of three rows a half inch apart. The sleeves have also the three rows, but put on from shoulder to wrist, not around the arm. A shot collar of pale blue taffeta and a girdle belt of the ribbon give a touch of color which accords with the pale blue silk that lines the gown.

A favorite model for a batiste has an applique pattern on the front and side breadths of effective embroidery. The batiste is cut away underneath, and the silk lining shows through. On the front of the waist the same pattern is repeated, while the back of both waist and skirt is quite plain. Pale pink, pale blue, and yellow are favorite colors to wear with these linen batistes, but the latest fad is a flame-color, which is certainly very striking.

Fancy silk is also much used with grass linen, and often the body of the waist will be of silk with the skirt and sleeves of the linen. The plaid silks are coming into fashion for this purpose, and are very gay indeed, almost too great a contrast. Sleeves of the silk, with collar and belt to match, are seen in some of the newest gowns, and have a curious appearance.

An extremely pretty and dainty grass-linen costume has the waist of a pale blue foulard with the arabesque pattern of the same color. A deep square cape collar of batiste embroidery with a band down the front of the waist is edged with Valenciennes lace, and a band of the same is around the skirt, making an effective trimming. In sharp contrast with the faint coloring of this gown is one of exactly the same material, the skirt quite plain, but exaggeratedly flaring. The waist and tight-fitting sleeves are of the linen, while over the sleeves and crossing over the front of the waist to form a V-shaped fichu are three overlaping ruffles of bright blue and yellow plaid. The gown is smart and perfectly cut and fitted, and both costumes are in the very latest fashion, so that it is evident the most showy as well as the quietest tastes can be suited.—Harper's Bazar.

A POISONED LIVER.

DON'T KEEP POISON IN YOUR BODY LONGER THAN YOU HAVE TO.

If your stomach poisons your liver the consequences may be serious.

What poisons arise in your stomach come from undigested food which has decomposed there. They are absorbed by your blood and go to your liver, where they paralyze its functions and make you billious.

Finally they go into the blood again and are carried all over the body, disordering your different organs, and perhaps making you dangerously sick.

This is the origin of many diseases which are not always known for what they are.

The poisons of undigested food can only be got rid of by the use of a purifying, strengthening, digestive tonic, like the Shaker Digestive Cordial.

A few doses of this wonderful cordial will soon clear away all undigested, fermenting, poisonous substances, restore your appetite, aid you to digest your food, purify your liver and blood of all dangerous poisons, and restores you to perfect health.

It will cure billiousness, indigestion, nausea, headache, dizziness, mental depression, weakness, fever, flatulence, constipation, loss of appetite, bad taste in mouth, stomach-ache anaemia, rheumatism, etc., where other medicines will barely give relife.

At druggists. Ten cents for a trial bottle.

LIABILITIES OF CARRIERS.

Important Decision in a Case for Damages the Outcome of a Railroad Accident.

Boston, Sept. 4.—It was held by the full bench of the supreme court yesterday in the case of James Doyle, administrator of Cornelius Doyle, versus the Fitchburg Railroad company, that a public passenger carrier for hire cannot exempt itself from liability for its own negligence by means of a contract which is voluntarily entered into by the passanger. The grounds of public policy dictate this conclusion. This action was brought for damages to the conscious suffering of the plaintiffs intestate, who was fatally injured while traveling upon a passenger train of the defendant "through the gross negligence of its servants." The plantiffs intestate was at the time of the sustaining of his injury an employee of the defendant, and was traveling by virtue of a ticket which the defendant gave him on entering into its employ, and which contained a contract upon the back exempting the company from all responsibility occasioned by accident.

THE VENEZUELAN DISPUTE.

A Call to England Not To Yield Rich Gold Fields.

London, Sept. 4.—The St. James Gazette publishes a letter signed by "One who accompanied Gov. Hemming on his tour of inspection in the gold territories of the northwest district" (of Venezuela), in which the writer says that the whole country is rich in gold, and that he is sure that within a year there will be big boom there. In conclusion the writer says: "Whatever happens, England must not yield this rich land of ours." The St. James Gazette, commenting upon the letter, remarks: "Can it be credited that Mr. Gladstone's mistake in the Transvaal will be repeated in South America, and that the Marquis of Salisbury will abandon English sovereignty over land of such promise?"

THE ZANZIBAR BOMBARDMENT.

Said Khalid's Supporters To Be Banished and Their Property Confiscated.

Zanzibar, Sept. 4.—It is now considered probable that the leading Arabs who supported Said Khalid in his attempt to usurp the throne of Zanzibar will be banished and their property confiscated. In addition, it is believed that a portion of the property of the others concerned in the revolt will be confiscated and devoted to the settlement of the claims, amounting to $150,000, arising from the looting of stores and residences which followed the escape of the insurgents from the palace after the beginning of the bombardment.

Another Steel Plant Shut Down.

Pittsburg, Sept. 4.—Owing to poor business the Edgar Thomson steel plant of the Carnegie company at Braddock has been shut down in all departments, making idle 5,000 employees for an indefinite period. This is the first time in the history of the works that poor business has forced the company to shut down. The blast furnaces are still in operation, but several will be banked.

Says It Is Blackmail.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 4.—Arthur M. Leffingwell of this city, whose name has been used in a rather unpleasant manner in connection with the family troubles of Harry Southgate of Brooklyn, declares that the latter's attack is blackmail, pure and simple, and that Southgate became enraged because he would not put money into certain schemes.

Big Cut in Railroad Rates.

Washington, Sept. 4.—The Southern and Seaboard Railroad companies have filed with the interstate commerce commission schedules of freight and passenger rates to take effect September 5. The reductions from present rates in some instances exceeds 50 per cent., whilst the average reduction is over one-third of the rates now in force.

Cretan Reforms.

London, Sept. 4.—A dispatch to the Times from Canea, island of Crete, says: "The Christian deputies approve the Cretan settlement and have sent out messengers urging the insurgents to accept the reforms and to desist from hostilities."

LI IN WASHINGTON.

Will Spend All This Afternoon at the Chinese Legation.

OUT OF UNITED STATES JURISDICTION.

Many Officials Call on the Viceroy at the Arlington This Morning—Programme for Saturday—The Railroads Are Anxious To Haul Him.

Washington, Sept., 4.—Li Hung Chang, after receiving a large number of officials in his apartments in the Arlington this morning, started at 11 o'clock with his suite for the Chinese legation out on Meridian hill. There a peculiarly Chinese luncheon will be served, at which only the ambassador and his son and the principal secretaries will be the guests of Minister Yang Yu. The viceroy wishes to devote the greater portion of the day to Chinese affairs exclusively, and the surroundings at the legation will make him feel more at home than at any place he has stopped for several weeks and thus afford him a few hours of much needed rest.

Outside United States Jurisdiction.

Most of the afternoon will be devoted to a consultation between the ambassador and his closest subordinates with the minister on Chino-American relations, and no visitors will be allowed to interrupt the conference. During this visit the viceroy will be outside the jurisdiction of the United States and under the imperial flag floating over recognized Chinese domain for the first time since he reached this continent. During the afternoon the minister proposes to take the ambassador for a drive to the Soldier's home, which is near the legation, and show him we take care of our super-annuated soldiers, and the drive may be extended to Arlington, where the honors extended to the nation's dead will be pointed out. On the return to the hotel in the evening the viceroy will attend the dinner given in his honor by ex-Secretary Foster, which will be attended by secretaries Lamont, Carlisle and Francis, Minister Yang Yu, Senor Romero, Justice Harlan, Major-Gen. Miles and Major-Gen. Ruger and Gov. Lowndes of Maryland. All the other cabinet officers, diplomats of high rank and supreme court justices are out of town. It is expected that at this dinner Li Hung Chang will seize the opportunity to make a speech, bidding goodby to the United States, and thanking Americans for the honors they have accorded him. On Saturday it is proposed by Gen. Ruger to conduct the viceroy and suite on a hasty tour of the city, visiting the capitol, the Washington monument and several of the executive departments, ending possibly with a trolley car party to Mount Vernon, where a wreath will be left at Washington's tomb. Saturday's program, except the departure for Canada at 6 o'clock in the evening, is, however, wholly tenative.

Pleased with Philadelphia.

Although greatly fatigued Li Hung says he greatly enjoyed his short visit to Philadelphia. After his reception by Mayor Warwick in Independence hall, the viceroy was escorted to the Hotel Walton, where he enjoyed a short nap. He then called upon Mrs. John Russell Young, who had apartments in the hotel. After the first greeting, the party seated themselves and at Mr. Young's suggestion the viceroy was given his silver-mounted pipe and proceeded to light it. Li partook of some tea and sweetmeats, and just before the close of the interview had brought in and presented to Mrs. Young two rolls of Chinese silk and several chests of tea. Li took his departure with the same ceremonious bow with which he entered the room. After another rest the start for the Union League club was begun. As he appeared upon the hotel steps a great throng of people cheered him. Li entered the four-horse carriage in waiting and was driven to the Union League club. The interior of the league had been converted into a perfect bower of flowers, in which the yellow of China predominated. As Li was borne into the reception room he was greeted by Silas W. Pettit, president of the league. The viceroy for half an hour bowed to the stream of people passing before him. At 4:15 he signified his wish to leave, and was carried to the carriage and driven to Broad street station. Here another crowd greeted him as he entered his car.

To Exterminate the Yellows.

Albany, Sept. 4.—William W. Aspell of Milo, Yates county, has been appointed by State Agricultural Commissioner Wieting as a special agent to take steps to exterminate and prevent the spread of the yellows or black knot among the plum and peach trees in the town of Milo.

China Will Build Warships.

Paris, Sept. 4.—Liberté says: "China has engaged French engineers to take charge of the works at Foo Chow arsenal and arrange for the building of fast armored cruisers there. The big ironclads, however, will be ordered at the shipyards of other countries."

Two Federal Judges Appointed.

Washington, Sept. 4.—The president has appointed Charles F. Amidon of North Dakota to be United States district judge for the district of North Dakota, and John E. Carland of South Dakota to be district judge for the district of South Dakota.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

(Furnished by Weather Observer Neagle.)

Fair Tonight and Saturday; Colder Saturday Morning.

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 73 Degrees.

The Republicans had the satisfaction last night of at least knowing that their banner was in the swim.

The Press will be issued at noon tomorrow. Then no paper again until Tuesday, as Monday is a holiday.

The absence of Senator Smith from the country and his apparent lack of interest in the candidacy of the Chicago ticket is causing some dissatisfaction among the more loyal party men, and there are mutterings of discontent which may result in an effort to remove him from the chairmanship of the State committee.

Tomorrow will be a gala day for Plainfield. Without a doubt there will be several thousand visitors in the city. They will see the sights, spend more or less money, and go away favorably impressed with Plainfield and her enterprising citizens. With the pleasure, amusement and profits which events of this sort provide for our own citizens, this is all that is expected of the Carnival. And the more the merrier and the better.

A Jersey City Police Justice has decided that a street car transfer ticket is good until it is used, and that the time limit system is illegal. A man was arraigned before this justice on the charge of refusing to pay his fare with anything but a transfer slip that has been held two hours past the time of its expiration. The court discharged the prisoner and advised him to sue the company. If this advice is followed, the validity of the time limit rule in the matter of transfers will be passed upon by higher authority.

Elias S. Ward, who was a prominent figure in the last Republican gubernatorial convention, is arranging for a big Republican "pow-wow" on his farm near Madison. It will be given on September 16, in the interest of the candidacy of Mahlon Pitney, who seeks a re-election for the second time to Congress. The prominent Republicans from all over the State, and particulary from the Fourth Congressional District, are to be invited. The special guest of the day will be Speaker Thomas B. Reed, of Maine.

THEATRICAL.

"The White Crook Mammoth Spectacular Co." This attraction, composed of recognized talent, will appear at Music Hall for one night, September 8th, presenting a programme of rare excellence entirely surpassing all previous effects in this line. Extravaganza, properly blended and with high-class specialty acts, will be the leading features. It has been Manager Rush's ambition to make this the largest and best attraction of the kind organized. It combines the best features of opera, farce-comedy and vaudeville. In selecting his able and talented company, and giving it proper staging, Manager Rush has not allowed the question of expense to deter him from having the best. See ad.

—Somerset Council, J. O. U. A. M., will meet this evening and transact some important business.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation, can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

Sent it to His Mother in Germany

Mr. Jacob Esbensen, who is in the employ of the Chicago Lumber Co., at DesMoines, Iowa, says: "I have just sent some medicine back to my mother in the old country, that I know from personal use to be the best medicine in the world for rheumatism, having used it in my family for several years. It is called Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It always does the work." 50 cent, bottles for sale by T. S. Armstrong druggist.

In a recent letter to the manufacturers Mr. W. F. Benjamin, editor of the Spectator, Rushford, N. Y., says: "It may be a pleasure to you to know the high esteem in which Chamberlain's medicines are held by the people of your own state, where they must be best known. An aunt of mine, who resides at Dexter, Iowa, was about to visit me a few years since, and before leaving home wrote me, asking if they were sold here, stating if they were not she would bring a quantity with her, as she did not like to be without them." The medicines referred to are Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds and croup; Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, pains in the side and chest, and Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for bowel complaints. These medicines have been in constant use in Iowa for almost a quarter of a century. The people have learned that they are articles of great worth and merit, and unequaled by any other. They are for sale here by T. S. Armstrong druggist.

WORST BOY ON THE ISLAND.

William Mueller Has Been Locked Up Ten Years of His Life.

His Story as Told by Himself—The Burden of It All Is That "Nobody Hain't Treated Him Right."

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

Those who best know William Mueller, whose story as related by himself, his father and the officers of the law I am about to try to reproduce, declare him to be the worst boy in New York. As to that I cannot speak with authority, but if there are worse boys in New York than he, then Heaven help them and the city.

This boy had earned a bad name before he was six. He is now 18 and yet more than ten years of his life have been passed behind locked doors and barred windows. He is at present "doing" his second "bit" in the New York penitentiary on Blackwell's island and all hands there agree that he is the worst boy they ever ran up against. The opinion held concerning him by the penitentiary authorities is fully concurred in by the regular police and the officers of Commodore Gerry's Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. Both have had to keep strict and constant watch upon him off and on for the last dozen years. The Gerry society will not be bothered with him in the future, for he is no longer a child, but the police will perforce be on the lookout for him the minute he is again released from imprisonment.

He excuses himself on the ground of ill-treatment. The deputy warden of the penitentiary says that the lad's evil doing is the result of a hopelessly warped nature.

"He will undoubtedly be a criminal all his life," this official declared when talking of young Mueller, "and most of his days will be spent behind the bars. Whatever is forbidden, that he itches to do, and though he has a certain sort of shrewdness, his criminal instincts are so much stronger than any and all others that he will at any time take desperate chances to commit a crime. He will no sooner get out after 'doing a bit' than he will be caught in some fresh iniquity and be locked up again. Under the 'habitual criminal act' of this state he might be sent to prison for life, and I'm not sure but that would be the best thing both for him and the community at large. His present 'bit' here, is for 11 months and $300 fine. If the fine isn't paid he will have to serve 300 days after the 11 months are up and that will make his term almost two full years, for unless he turns over a new leaf he is certain to get no commutation for good behavior. He has been here only about a month now this time, and yet he has earned more punishments for a long term. He has even had to be than often fall to a full-grown man in locked up in a dark cell, and that is a punishment given to comparatively few here. His first 'bit' on the island was for six months only, but it was long enough for him to make his mark as the toughest youngster we ever had dealings with, and he is evidently not going to rub out that mark this trip. He is a 'degenerate' if there ever was one."

William Mueller looks like a "degenerate." He is undersized and of a nervous manner and he whimpers when he speaks. Again and again while he was talking with me he laid the blame of his ill-doing on the shoulders of others, and his eyes frequently threatened to overflow with tears, while his lips were in a constant state of self-pitying tremulousness. At the request of his father, Louis Mueller, of 224 East Ninety-eighth street, who had lost sight of him but had heard he was locked up again, I went over to the island a day or two ago to see the boy. Little by little as he talked he told the story of his crooked life.

"Dey's only one trouble wit me," he said, "and dat is nobody hain't never treated me right, an' when I've tried to git even I've always got caught. Dey began to treat me wrong when I was a little bit of a feller. Me mudder was dead an' me fadder, he worked all day. De folks he boarded me wit, dey wouldn't let me go out on the street and nobody wouldn't give me no money. So I took what I could git me han's on and sneaked out de door whenever I could. Den de Gerry s'ciety folks, dey didn't treat me right, for dey caught me whenever any odder boys done any dirt. I uster know boys w'ot would trow down stands and trip folks up in de street an' break windows and all dem things but I didn't do 'em. No, sir. I jist kept quiet like an' all I done was to take wot I could git me han's on when de folks wouldn't give me w'ot I needed. Me fadder t'ought he was good to me, but he didn't know how I was treated, an' he usfer stay out all night lookin' fer me sometimes an' have to work overtime to make up.

"When I was between five and six, I guess it was, dey sent me to de institute on Tent' street, an' dere I stayed 'bout four years, I t'ink. But they didn't treat me right dere eider an' when me fadder married again me step mudder she didn't treat me right neider. She'd kick whenever I'd take a few pennies or stay out all night an' sleep in a waggin. Me fadder he sent me to a school an' paid fer me goin' dere but dey didn't treat me right any more dan de odders bad an' dey turned me out fer gittin' me han's on tings. Den I was sent to de public school an' it made me tired to go dere. So I was sent to de Juvenile 'sylum 't Hunner' n' Seventy-sixt street, 'n' dere I stayed about four years more. W'ot did I hafter go there fer? W'y me step mudder didn't give me no money fer a good while 'n' she'd made a great fuss about me sleepin' in cellar ways an' like dat, when she said dey was always a bed in de house fer me, an' she gabbed about it so much dat me fadder he got to treatin' me wrong, too. So one day I seen de rent money fer a hull mont' layin' on de table an' I needed it an' I took it. I speant it on Delancy street an' had a lot o' fun, but when me fadder foun' me he sent me to de asylum.

"I dunno w'y me step-mudder didn't like to have me sleep in waggins and cellar ways an' like dat. It's more fun dan sleepin' in beds, an' waggins is a good deal better dan cellar ways or any where else, only when you sleeps too long an' wake up where you haf to walk a lot of miles to git back again. Wunst I slept in a milk waggin and woke up down by the ferry an' de feller he didn't treat me right—he trun me out on me face 'n' like to crack me nut.

"It was after I got out of de 'sylum dat I took a horse an' got in de refuge. A feller ast me to hol' de horse and he'd gimme five cents. He kep' me waitin' too long an' I got in an' drove away. Den de feller's daughter she treated me dead wrong. She seen me drivin' by an' she squealed. She made an awful fuss an' w'en I was in front of a p'lice station a copper came out an' pinched me. W'ere was I goin' wit de horse? W'y to de horse market, of course. W'ere should I go to hock de horse but to a place w'ere horses is sold?

"I was in de refuge two years dat time, an' when I got out dey sent me to a farmer to work away out by Rochester. Say he treated me more wrong dan anybody else." Here the boy seemed at the point of collapse as he contemplated his wrongs. "I hat to git up at tree—four o'clock in de mornin' an' go out wit a lantern in de dark an' water de horses an' cows an' clean de stables An' den I had to help milk an' dat made me han's tired. An' den I hat to work all day an' some in de night. Say dat farmer didn't treat me right, sure. I stayed dere twp months. I couldn't git away fer I couldn't git me han's on no money nor nothin'. After two months, dough, he gimme seven dollars an' a half an' say, I come to New York as soon as I could. How did I get here? I met a man in de road an' he was comin' here an' he said we'd be partners on de journey an' we come on a freight train. It took 'n' awful time an' we rode tru de woods an' over mountings, but finally we got to some ferry cross de river an' den we was all right.

"But I got in de refuge agin. Some other boys was disorderly an' der Gerry men caught me, an' I hat to do time agin. I hat to learn to write at der refuge den, an' I wrote me fadder a letter an' ast him to git me a job where I could earn enough money so I needn't take any. He got me a job wit a tailor on Clinton street named Cohen, but he didn't treat me right at all. He wouldn't gimme but a dollar seventy fi' a week 'n' den one day he sent me to take a coat home to a customer—a red-headed boy—I don't remember his name—he said 'w'y don't you hock der coat 'n' we'll spend de money.' Dat boy was to blame fer dat, but after I hocked de coat dey caught me and locked me up, an' I hat to do six monts' time here 'cause I was gittin' too big fer de refuge. Dey's a lot of bad boys up dere an' dey told me how to do a lot o' bad tings. After I got out o' here dat time I got a job in a shoe factory all by myself, but dey didn't treat me right dere no more dan anywhere else. One day I seen some spoons in de window next door an' de same red-headed feller dat tole me to hock de coat he said I'd better take de spoons. He'd gimme 50 cents, he said, if I would, an' so I took 'em. Den dey caught me an' now I'm doin' time agin, but dey didn't do not'in' at all to de red-headed boy.

"I wouldn't be in trouble at all if folks would only treat me right an' nobody wouldn't tell me to do bad tings. I'll keep away from dat red-headed boy sure w'en I git out next time an' say, mister, you tell me fadder to be certain to pay me fine er I'll haf to stay here most a hull year longer.

"Was I ever in wid a gang? Not much of a one. Dey's a gang I know down on Clinton street, but dere's only half a dozen in it an' I can't tink of deir names. No; I ain't never been called de king of de gang as I know of."

This last in answer to questions I put because of the title the boy had been given on Clinton street. In that locality the boys who look as if they might be gang members declare with many asservations that they never heard of Mueller, but the tailor, Cohen, remembers him well enough, and when I asked about the boy, speedily exhausted his scanty knowledge of English expletives in trying to express himself.

The boy's father, who formerly lived near Clinton street but who moved uptown to Ninety-eighth street a year or two ago to get away from his son's reputation, is a little, dragged-out looking man, who combines the cigar maker's trade with the occupation of housekeeper or janitor of a 25 flat front, five story tenement that shelters 115 individuals. His wife, the "stepmudder," is nearly as frail as he, but their young children are healthy and lively as crickets. The eldest of the brood is seven or eight years of age and all seem normal.

Both the father and the stepmother have been kept in a turmoil for years by "the court people" over the boy, and have about given him up.

"Till my boy come five years old," said Mueller in his defective English, "people like him. He don't do nossing bad. Then I got to be a widow and have to move all the time. I put the boy out to board and all the time the people say 'that boy be no good.' I work days and have to leave him with strangers all but nights. Sometings go wrong with him. I don't make him be bad, but he do nossing good. By and bye I get married again but my wife she can't do nossing with him. He take whatever he can find everywhere and I have to send him first to the institute and then to the asylum. Then he get in the refuge twice and I get him out the second time by getting him a job with Cohen, the Clinton street tailors. Mabbe he give the boy too much power when he send him out with the coat—I don't know. Anyways he's bad all through now. I don't earn much money. I get nine dollars a week at my trade when I have plenty work but for years I average only $6.50. I don't know how we live if we didn't get rent free. We have five children now and I done all I can by that boy in the past—I do nossing by him any more. Since he was six years old he been home only six months. He don't drink none and if he smokes I don't know it. I got no more to say."

The boy himself says he smokes cigarettes whenever he can get his hands on them but mourns the difficulty that stands in the way of frequent indulgence.

It is agreed by all who know him that he does not drink. Taken altogether he is a most discouraging product of modern civilization, and if he is not the worst boy in New York he is certainly on the lowest level—there are none worse or weaker.

OSBORN SPENCER

Curious Dwelling for Ants.

One of the strangest members of the vegetable kingdom, and one which of late years become quite common as a green-house plant, is the Myrmecodia tuberosa. The plant was first sent to Europe in 1811 by Dr. Collingwood, from Malacca. Its stem is tuberous and everywhere covered with thorns. In its native country every plant is constantly inhabited by thousands of ants of the great family of myrmica, and it is on that account that the plant was given its scientific name of Myrmecodia. The ants pierce the tuberous stems in all directions and coat the galleries thus formed with an insect cement that is of suprising durability. In fact, it is so strong that when a branch or plant dies it will rot away, leaving the cement galleries intact, the whole then having the appearance of a beautifully ramified specimen of seaweed.

This Cat Gets Drunk.

Among the most cherished possessions of Miss Frances Willard is her Angora cat, Toots. Toots once bore the more dignified name of Gladstone, but England's Grand Old Man happened to take a stand on the prohibition question that did not meet with Miss Willard's approval, so she re-christened the cat. Toots has habits which must try the temperance reformer, for he gets intoxicated occasionally, though with Miss Willard for a mistress "rum" is naturally not the cause of his crime. The perfume of English violets makes him as maudlin as ever fiery liquid did a human being, and carnations, too, are as bad as strong drink in his case.

CUPID'S BILL OF FARE.

Newly-Wedded Couple Leave It in a Chicago Eating House.

If Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Kaberlah will return an elegantly engraved document containing sundry references to soup, entrees and desserts to a certain Madison street restaurant they will, if the Chicago Tribune tells the truth, be given in exchange another document fully as handsome, covered with cooing doves and lovers' knots, and clasped hands, and such things, and signed by a preacher and two witnesses.

Owing to the fact that love was still suffering from defective eyesight, Mr. Kaberlah and his blushing companion made a little mistake after dinner which made some confusion. It was manifestly annoying to a guest at the restaurant to pick up the document that Mr. Kaberlah left and say to the waiter:

"BRING ME SOME BLISS."

"Bring me some bliss, a couple of hearts, and half a turtle dove fried."

As for Mr. Kaberlah's friends they will be horrified when he innocently hands them his marriage certificate and they read:

"Clam chowder and shell-fish always in season. Complain of any inattention of waiter. Wine list on the last page."

But as soon as Mr. Kaberlah discovers he has exchanged his marriage certificate for a restaurant bill of fare it is probable he will make an immediate exchange.

Late diners at the restaurant were highly edified when they picked up a new-looking menu card and read:

There is a bliss beyond all that the minstrel has told
When two that are linked in one heavenly tie,
With heart never changing and brow never cold,
Love on through all ills and love on till they die.

Now that was discouraging for a real hungry man. Some of the guests thought the verselet was thrown in for embellishment until they read on the next page:

"It is not good for man to live alone."
"I will make an helpmeet for him."
"In sickness and in health."
"To love and to cherish."
"Till death do us part."
"According to God's holy ordinance."
"And thereto I pledge thee my troth."

On the front page of the booklet was a couple of turtle doves engaged in cooing, 25 coos a minute, and it was only on the last page that a hint was thrown out that the dovelets on the booklet were cooing their satisfaction over the marriage of Mr. Kaberlah.

Finally a waiter, who had been sent by sarcastic and hungry diners twice to the kitchen with orders for "turtle dove tongue with bliss sauce" got an idea something was wrong, and appealed to the manager, who took possession of the new bill of fare, and gave it to the cashier to put in the strong box until it should be called for.

Boone County Has Produced a Lamb with Eight Legs.

Here is a lamb with eight legs. It is a Missouri product and lives and "gambols on the green" on the farm of Smith D. Comas, of Boone county.

With legs of lamb and mutton in demand in the city at good round prices for fat, juicy meat, a lamb with eight legs is not to be despised. This is the first lamb cast by the freak's dam and she made such a success that Mr. Co-

Put His Skill to Account.

A novel method of perforating iron plates is reported from Salt Lake City. The city is being supplied with electricity for lighting and power generated 14 miles away in the Big Cottonwood canyon. It was found necessary, for the purpose of pipe connections, to cut four 48-inch openings in the seven-foot penstock, the plates of which were half an inch thick. The workmen began to cut with cape chisels, but the progress made was too exasperatingly slow for the engineer of the works, R. M. Jones, who is known throughout the west as the "cowboy engineer." Mr. Jones took up his rifle and, using steel bullets cased with copper, shot a line of holes through the plates from a distance of about 30 feet. The intervening edges were afterward easily cut out and in a very short time the job was finished.

BLAINE'S NEGLECTED GRAVE.

No Monument Marks the Statesman's Last Resting Place.

Probably no American who has died within the last decade was the object of the admiration and affection of the American people to the degree that it was bestowed upon the late James G. Blaine, and yet even here in the capital city almost no one seems to have any idea of the resting place of his ashes. The immortal genius of statesmanship and those other qualities that made him the idol of his party will be long cherished in the minds and hearts of men, but his final resting place is practically unknown and unhonored, even by those who rendered him the most enthusiastic homage during his lifetime.

Over in Georgetown, which, although a part of the city of Washington, still retains its ancient name, there is beautiful Oak Hill cemetery. The name conveys a literal idea of the place. On a hillside of sloping green, falling away to the waters of Rock creek and shaded by the spreading branches of huge oaks, are the tombs of many men famous in the history of the country. The cemetery is the foundation of W. W. Corcoran, who established the Corcoran art gallery, and whose fortune was freely spent in practical philanthropy in Washington. Oak Hill cemetery is controlled by a corporation whose rules are somewhat rigid, and smoking is forbidden within its boundaries. It is kept in order by a force of a dozen or more gardeners, who are constantly at work upon its walks, lawns, flower beds and shrubbery. As might be imagined, it is a somewhat aristocratic place of final repose, and wealth and family name are pre-requisites to the purchase of a lot.

It is said that during Mr. Blaine's residence in Washington it was his frequent habit to take a stroll through beautiful Oak Hill, and that here he could throw off the burdens of affairs of state when they became too oppressive. On one of these occasions he observed a large hickory tree whose top had been snapped squarely off in the storm. The trunk was still sound, and up to the break the tree was beautiful and symmetrical. Mr. Blaine is said to have remarked to the companion of his walk that the tree was a fitting emblem of his life, a sturdy and luxurious growth up to a certain point, and then a square break. Later he purchased the lot which includes the tree, and there he was buried. At the foot stands the customary small marble marker with the initials, "J. G. B." At the head is the hickory tree and nothing else. And thus it happens that no stately monument with glowing inscription marks the grave of this great and illustrious man. By his side are buried his eldest son, Walker Blaine, whose death was such a tremendous blow to the father, who in later years had come to lean so heavily on his first born, and his daughter, Mrs. Coppinger. Their graves are marked with white, inconspicuous marble stones, containing nothing but the names and appropriate dates.—Washington Cor. St. Paul Pioneer Press.

The Tree of Knowledge.

A trial was recently made in Austria to decide in how short a space of time living trees could be converted into newspapers. At Elsenthal, on April 17, at 7:35 in the morning, three trees were sawn down at 9:34 the wood, having been stripped of bark, cut up and converted into pulp, became paper, and passed from the factory to the press, from whence the first printed and folded copy was issued at ten o'clock. So that in 145 minutes the tree had become newspapers. The age of miracles is not past.—Westminster Gazette.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? SPAIN HARD PUSHED

The Philippine Islands Revolt Assumes Serious Proportions.

GERMANS LEADERS OF THE UPRISING

The Three Friends Sails Away with Another Filibustering Expedition—The Laurada Not Wrecked—Her Captain, However, Arrested.

Madrid, Sept. 4.—An official dispatch from Manila, capital of the Philippine islands, announces that 2,000 insurgents have collected at Cavite. The troops have routed 500 insurgents at Baccore, killing fourteen of them and capturing eighteen. Reinforcements have been summoned from Nue Vaeciga. Signs of insurrection are apparent at Bulacan, Pampanga and Batangas. Rumors are current here to the effect that the leaders of the uprising in the Philippine islands are Germans who comprise the executive of a secret society which is alleged to be resoponsible for the whole trouble. It is further stated that a pamphlet hostile to Spain, which has been circulated among the inhabitants of the Philippine islands, was printed in Germany. In the chamber of deputies the Carlists made a vigorous attack upon the lack of foresight of Gen. Blanco, captain-general of the Philippine islands, expressing opinion that he is as fully deserving of censure as was Gen. Calleja, the former captain-general of Cuba, in the course which the latter adopted previous to the insurrection in Cuba and after outbreaks had occurred in that island.

The new cabinet official gave all a hearty handshake, which was accompanied by a pleasant word. This morning the clerks and other employes were presented.

ESCAPE OF DREYFUS

No Official News in France Denying the Report.

MAY BE IN AMERICA AT PRESENT

The Betrayer of Military Secrets Said To Have Been Helped To Get Out of Guiana Fortress by His Wife.

Paris, Sept. 4.—The colonial office has issued a weak denial of the reported escape of Captain Alfred Dreyfus from the Isle du Grand Salut, to which place he was taken to serve a life sentence and degradation for selling plans of French fortifications, mobilization schemes, etc., to a foreign government. It is admitted at the colonial office, however, that nothing has been received to contradict the statement of Captain Hunter of the British steamship Nonpareil, telegraphed from Newport, Monmouthshire. In an interview, Captain Hunter is quoted as saying that Captain Dreyfus escaped on board an American schooner, with the help of his wife, who at the urgent request of the prisoner, had received permission from the government to join him at his place of imprisonment. Mme. Dreyfus was always a firm believer in the innocence of her husband, and when she reached Cayenne the French authorities there offered her the use of a steam launch to take her to the Grand Salut island, where her husband's prison was situated, but she declined, saying that she wished to become accustomed to the climate before going to the island. Thereupon, the steam launch left Cayenne. According to Capt. Hunter, Mme. Dreyfus must have lost no time in perfecting plans for her husband's escape, or else she must have had assistance from persons who had reached Cayenne some time before her, for the same night, he says, an American schooner, with Mme. Dreyfus on board, appeared off Grand Salut island, sent a boat ashore, and brought off not only the prisoner, but several men who had been detailed to guard him, apparently proving that everything was arranged for the escape before the prisoner's wife reached Cayenne. Capt. Hunter said that the schooner then left the north coast, heading in a northerly direction, and it is believed that Capt. Dreyfus and his wife eventually reached the United States.

Funeral of Professor Fowler.

West Orange, N. J., Sept. 4.—The funeral of Prof. Lorenzo Niles Fowler, the phrenologist, who died after a severe illness late Wednesday night, will take place to-morrow. Prof. Fowler was well known both in this country and England through his lectures, his books and the many well known men whose heads he examined. He was born at Cohocton, N. Y., June 27, 1811, and went to Amherst in 1832. There he, his brother Orson, and his classmate Henry Ward Beecher, became interested in phrenology.

Money in Circulation.

Washington, Sept. 4.—The treasury circulation statement shows that on September 1 all kinds of money in the United States, outside of what is held in the treasury, aggregated $1,539,169,634, or $21.48 per capita on an estimated population of 71,645,000. As compared with September 1, 1895, the circulation shows a decrease of $64,413,394. During the month of August, however, the circulation shows an increase of $24,266,492, made up largely from the treasury's loss of gold.

Thomas H. Keller and J. J. Kenney make a great team under any circumstances, but especially when mounted on the new Hunter tandem. Yesterday they rode from Baker's Hotel, Metuchen, to the Revere House, in twenty-three minutes, which considering the circumstances, is excellent time.

AROUND THE BASES.

Plainfield Athletic Club against Y. M. C. A., Saturday 4:15 p. m., Y. M. C. A. grounds.

The team of old Crescents which Captain Cornwell will line up against the Y. M. C. A. team on Labor Day morning are likely to put a much better article of ball than a large number of the teams that have been played here, and that Captain McLaughlin is aware of this is taken for granted, for he has allowed Captain Cornwell to play none but old members of the Crescents, with the exception of the battery which is to be a professional one. The positions and batting order of the old timers will be: Cornwell, ss., Paasch, c., Geo. Cadmus, 2b, Keller, 1b., Demarest, lf., William Cadmus, rf., Walz, cf., Doane, 3b., McKee, p. "Chappy" Lyman will umpire the game and the supreme lodge of old and well-seasoned cranks will be in attendance to root for the old timers.

will, after all, prove the great attraction. From all appearances, the parade is going to be something wonderful. Every day brings in reports of new details regarding the different clubs and decorated wheels. The Plainfield Business College has organized a club for the occasion and about forty members will turn out, almost all in costume or with decorated wheels.

The Vim Bicycle Club, of Newark, is making a big effort. The members will appear in uniform and will be accompanied by a band on bicycles from Newark. Two of the military organizations of Brooklyn and New York have promised to come and several more are considering the matter.

The Crescent Wheelmen will turn out and over 100 men are expected to be in line from that club.

The individual decorations are being kept secret, but various rumors have leaked out. One is about a regular steam yacht, which one of the members of the Scott Press Works Cyclers, who will turn out over sixty strong, has arranged on his bicycle.

The Jersey Cycle Academy has been secured and here wheels may be checked for a small sum and a lunch secured. This will be of great benefit for the visiting wheelmen, as they will then have some place where they may leave their wheels in safety and see the parade.

Their First Run.

Dunellen's new fire department had a chance to show what it is made of this morning, and they did it with great credit to themselves. It was at 11:15 that fire was discovered in the house occupied by John Hubbard on the outskirts of the village. The alarm was given and the fire laddies scurried in great numbers to the headquarters, and with great excitement and incidental clanging of bells hurried to the scene of the conflagration. But before they arrived there, which was a fifteen minutes run, two or three of the members, who were near at hand, had extinguished the flames. The loss was about $100.

Signed the Pledge for a Year.

A slight error was made yesterday in reporting that Patrick Kiely, of Sreiner place was taken to Somerville. The commitment papers were made out, and Constable Steward was on hand ready to take the prisoner to Somerville, when Mr. Kiely's son, William Kiely, offered to withdraw the charges. Mr. Kiely then signed the pledge for one year, which means that if he taste, touches, or handles liquor, he is liable to be arrested and committed to jail. Judge Thomas accordingly released the man on the above condition.

J. Phelan, of Brooklyn, is a guest at the home of J. A. Blatz, of Somerset street.

Miss Florence Smith, of Brooklyn, is visiting the Misses Cuming, of Putnam avenue.

Francis J. Blatz, of Somerset street, left this afternoon for Clinton, Mass. He will return on Tuesday.

Mrs. D. W. Rogers and Miss Beulah Rogers, of West Second street, have gone to Patchogue, L. I., for a visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Pierson and Miss Bunting, of Second place, are camping in the Adirondacks. They will remain until October 1st.

Mrs. J. Violan and daughter, of New York, have arrived in Plainfield and will remain as the guests of Mrs. J. A. Blatz, of Somerset street, until Tuesday.

Miss Susan Glass, assistant principal of the North Plainfield High School, arrived here from her home at Ypsilani, Mich., last night and is stopping temporarily at the Revere House.

Simon Spring, of the Victor Wheelmen, rode ten miles yesterday afternoon in twenty-seven minutes, unpaced, and says he can do it at any time in twenty-five minutes if pacemakers can be had.

Mrs. T. M. Merlette, of Bound Brook, Miss Nettie Davis, of New Brunswick, Harry Hand, of San Jose, Ill., and D. C. Linbarger, of Elizabeth, have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Linbarger, of Somerset street, for a few days past.

Theories of cure may be discussed at length by physicians, but the sufferers want quick relief; and One Minute Cough Cure will give it to them. A safe cure for children. It is "the only harmless remedy that produces immediate results." For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

WIND, RAIN, LIGHTNING

ture caught fire in consequence. Before the flames were extinguished a large hole was burned in the curtain. The lightning also caused trouble with the borough fire alarm wires, and after the storm it was discovered that there was a ground somewhere in the western part of the borough. Julius Stahl and Thomas McGann at once started out in search of the trouble and they tested a large majority of the boxes before they could locate the trouble. In chief Fairchild's house the electric fluid played a lively tune around the indicator, but no damage resulted. Mr. Fairchild has decided to have a lightning safety arrangement placed on the apparatus. In Washington Park nearly all of the telephones were thrown out of use, but the trouble was soon repaired and this morning the telephones were all right.

Quite a quantity of drift wood was deposited in the gutter and on the sidewalk at the corner of East Front street and Watchung avenue during the storm. This morning nearly half a cord of wood was found there.

Fleischmann's barns and hay barracks at Millstone near Bound Brook, were struck by lightning and burned to the ground last evening. The loss is said to be very heavy.

One large hickory tree standing at the base of the mountain, near Westervelt avenue, in North Plainfield was struck bp a bolt of lightning last evening, and split from top to bottom.

The break in the fire alarm wire in the borough was found on Sycamore avenue, between Willow and Mercer avenues. It was repaired this morning.

It was thought during the storm that Trinity Reformed church on West Second street was struck, as the shock was distinctly felt by the neighbors but no damage was done. Chief T. O. Doane says that the electricity probably utilized the complete system of lightning rods that protect the church. A severe shock was also felt at the meat market of Ulrich and Blatz on West Front street.

A barn in the vicinity of South Plainfield was struck by lightning last night and burned to the ground. The light could plainly be seen from this city.

Mrs. George Whitlock, of 214 West Second street, went to look out of a side window in her house, during the storm when she was stunned by a flash of lightning. Mrs. Whitlock was so overcome by the shock that she fell directly into the arms of her son, who stood by her side when the flash came. Today she has partially recovered from the shock.

SMALL, BUT IMPORTANT

MANY LITTLE THINGS ATTENDED TO FOR THE BOROUGH'S WELFARE.

New Sidewalks Ordered Laid—One Man Threatens to Shoot Salt Into Anyone Touching His Dilapidated Sidewalk.

In the main the business transacted at the regular meeting of the Borough Council, last evening, was of a small but important nature, and all of the members were present except Mr. Peck, who was detained at home by illness. The clerk's monthly financial report was presented as follows:

	Balance.	Deficit.
Borough	$ 467.81
Fire Department		$54.92
Lights	222.43
Roads	548.37
Poor		77.74
	$1,238.61	$132.66
	132.66
Total balance	$1,105.95

The clerk also reported that $131.73 had been collected as fines, licenses, etc.

Warren Engine Company notified the Council that Alonzo Brokaw and J. Sheppard had been elected to membership, and the matter was referred to the proper committee.

A. E. Faber and others asked that Grove street, beyond Greenbrook road, also Howard street, be repaired and put in good condition. Jonathan Clawson and others asked that Brook avenue, from Westervelt to Sandford avenues, be macadamized. They stated that $75 had been subscribed as the property owners' share of the work. The Crescent Wheelmen petitioned for the privilege of stretching a banner across Somerset street to advertise their race meet, to be held the latter part of September. This petition was granted, and the others were referred to the street committee.

The usual batch of claims were presented and in the regular order was paid.

Mr. Woolston, for the street committee, reported that Westervelt avenue and the continuation of Mercer avenue had been macadamized. Mr. Valiant offered a resolution that J. Higgins and S. Rosenfeld be confirmed as members of Warren Engine Company, which was so ordered. The same councilman offered a resolution, which was adopted, that exemption papers be granted to the following persons who have served seven years in the fire department: J. J. Stahl, Eugene Pope, J. P. Emmons, W. C. Smith, Geo. Schlereth, Wm Emmons, L. B. Woolston, J. F. Buckle and Peter A. Emmons. Mr. Valiant offered another resolution that the four fire hydrants recently located on Harrison street be accepted. It was so ordered, as was also the resolution that a loan of $1,000 be negotiated and charged to the light account.

Mr. Lounsbury offered a similar resolution, which was adopted, that the Council negotiate a loan of $1,000, the same to be charged to the borough account. Another resolution by Mr. Lounsbury provided that a warrant drawn for the sale of taxes be granted to Collector Spencer

Mr. Valiant objected to the payment of Wm. T. Kirk's bill amounting to $117, as he was not sure that everything was satisfactory in connection with the work on the fire bell and tower, and then the bill included a charge of $7 for cleaning a cesspool to allow for the erection of the tower. The bill was withheld for investigation.

Mr. Woolston offered a resolution that the Council negotiate a loan of $1,000, the same to be charged to the road account. It was so ordered. Another resolution was offered by Mr. Woolston that L. N. Coddington's petition to have Coddington avenue accepted by the borough be granted; also that the petition of J. W. Mundy and others for a crosswalk on Grand street. Both of the above petitions were granted. Mr. Woolston offered resolutions to the effect that Rose Verdon, Ada M. Grant, J. A. Biatz, of Somerset street, and Gustave Sutterlein and Mr. Smith, of Greenbrook road, having been duly notified to lay walks in front of their property and failing to do so, that the borough put down the walks and effect a lien on the property for the amount. The resolutions were adopted. Councilman MacLaughlin voted no. The latter thought that some of the people were not able to pay for the laying of walks and they should be considered. Mr. Woolston stated that Mr. Sutterlein had said he would not put down a walk and if anyone tried to do so in front of his place he would shoot them full of salt. The Councilman thought it was time something was done in regard to sidewalks.

Mr. Lounsbury offered a resolution that the street committee be authorized to advertise the Watchung avenue property for sale, and that the best price possible be secured for the

FELL TWENTY FEET.

Frank Conshee, of Pearl street Thrown from a Tree,—Probably Fatally Injured.

Frank Conshee, an old and respected resident of Pearl street, North Plainfield, met with an accident yesterday afternoon which may prove fatal. Drs. Clawson and Ziglio attended the injured man and did all in their power to alleviate his suffering.

"Frank," as he was familiarly known, was sawing off limbs on a black walnut tree, near his home preparatory to having a building moved from the premises, and the erection of another one thereon, when the limb he was sawing, a good sized tree in itself, snapped off without a moment's warning. The limb struck the ladder and the unfortunate man was thrown to the ground. Mr. Conshee was picked up in an unconcious state and carried to his home, half a block away, on a stretcher. There he lay in a comatose state for several hours, and finally rallied. During the evening he was occasionaly in a stupor and when the two physicians arrived he was scarely conscious.

Mr. Conshee will be 69 years old in October.

Dr. Clawson, one of the attending physician, this morning reports Frank Conshee in a critical condition. If inflamation sets in, the doctor says, paralysis will in all probability follow and death will soon result. His advanced age is so much against him that the chance for recovering are slight.

Vicious Dogs Running Loose.

There were two cases in Westfield recently of children being bitten by dogs. Alexander Simpson, aged ten, was bitten by a bulldog belonging to W. J. Bogert. His clothing was torn and he was scratched, but his skin was not broken. George LaMatty, aged thirteen, was badly bitten on his leg by a dog belonging to an Italian living on South Broad street. Dr. Kinch dressed the bite. The assessor reports 208 dogs in the township and of these twelve have been registered according to law. At the next meeting of the township committee they will be asked to take some measures for the protection of children from vicious dogs.

Wrecked By a Trolley Turnout.

Miss M. Elizabeth Gavin, of the West End Farm, Columbia avenue, and a party of lady friends were driving from East Front street into Watchung avenue at 10 o'clock last evening, when the left hind wheel caught in the curve of the track, completely demolishing it. Fortunately none of the occupants of the vehicle were injured, but the party was obliged to remain in the cool atmosphere for an hour or more before relief came in the shape of a new wheel.

Harvest Festival.

Tonight at 8 o'clock in the Salvation Army Hall, West Second street, a "Harvest Home" will be held, preceded by a Harvesters' March at 7:15. Tomorrow special meetings will be held all day, Adjutant Albright and Ensign Blackburn, of New York, will lead. At 3:30 a camp meeting will be held in the City Park. Monday at 3:30 and 8 p. m., ice cream and cake, also thanksgiving sale.

Few More Shares Needed.

The Co-operative Association held a special meeting last evening at the store, corner Central avenue and Second street. Over forty members were present. The need of the association for more money was stated. With a few more shares taken the store can be opened for business this month. A special meeting for ladies will soon be held.

Music to be a Feature.

At the Y. M. C. A. meeting at 4:15 p. m. tomorrow, A. C. LaBoyteaux will report the addresses delivered at the conference for Christians workers held at North field in August. New music used at the conference will be rendered by a choir of ladies and gentlemen.

It Never Does.

The assured success of Plainfield's bicycle carnival proves that if New Brunswick were to undertake a similar project it could be made just as great a scenic and social triumph. New Brunswick can outdo Plainfield in anything if it only will.—Times.

A Pink and Green Tea.

A pink and green tea party will be held on the lawn adjoining the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, on West Fourth street, on the afternoon and evening of Labor Day. The proceeds are for the benefit of the church and it should be well patronized.

Dismissed the Complaint.

Eppie Wilson was brought before City Judge DeMeza this morning in the city court on the charge of being disorderly and riding a horse on the sidewalk. He pleaded not guilty, and after hearing the testimony, the Judge dismissed the complaint.

THE PASSING CARNIVAL!

The City And Borough in Gala Attire For The Occasion- Visitors From all Over the State Present.

Carnival Day is here and the weather is delightful, a trifle chilly perhaps, but the warm sun will make the afternoon delightful. Even last night the first installment of the crowd appeared and this morning the crowd came in a steady stream. Each train had a party of pleasure seekers aboard, some with wheels and others without.

The bicycle headquarters at the Jersey Cycle Academy was the centre of the throng of cyclists. A large banner, stretched across the street, told of its whereabouts. Grand Marshal Martin and Marshal Timpson were at work all the morning at their headquarters at the Revere House, directing and arranging.

Some of the decorating was done yesterday afternoon but everybody is hard at work this morning preparing their decorations.

The city is fairly alive with visitors and everthing points to a grand parade and carnival this afternoon.

The parade will start at 3:30 o'clock and all cyclists are requested to be in line at least a quarter of an hour before that time.

The line of march will be as follows:

The line of march will be as follows: From the corner of Park avenue and West Eighth street, to Crescent avenue, to Watchung avenue, to East Fifth street, to Richmond street, to LaGrande avenue, to Franklin place, (reviewing stand) to Putnam avenue, to Hillside avenue, to Watchung avenue, to East Seventh street, to West Seventh street, to Plainfield avenue, to West Fifth street, to Park avenue, to North avenue, to Watchung avenue, to East Front street, to West Front street, to Grove street, to Park Place, to Duer street, to Craig place, to Somerset street, to Jackson avenue, to Westervelt avenue, to Fairview avenue, to Linden avenue, to Grove street, to Rockview avenue, to Washington avenue, to West Front street, to Grant avenue, to West Seventh street, to Plainfield avenue, to West Eighth street, to Madison avenue, to West Fifth street, to Park avenue, to East Ninth street, and countermarch on Park avenue to East Sixth street, to Watchung avenue, to Crescent avenue, and disband in the square in front of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

For the last time before the Carnival, the general committee met last evening at the Board of Trade rooms. There was not much to be done, and after the reports in which everything was reported to be ready for the Carnival, a general discussion was held.

The committee badges were distributed, and Grand Marshal Martin notified the Marshals that they could obtain their sashes and the badges for their aides, by applying at the headquarters of the committee, at the Revere House, today.

The entertainment committee reported that the Jersey Cycle Acadamy would be ready for the occasion. J. L. Wiseman will have charge of the checking of the wheels, and John King, of the "midnight lunch wagon" fame, will look after the lunch.

The final report of the finance committee was a pleasant surprise, as the committee has been doing excellent work since the last meeting The committee adjourned to meet again at the call of the chairman.

INSANITY LED HIM TO STEAL.

Assistant Postmaster Who Embezzled $2,500 Discharged From Custody.

George B. Jenkins, formerly assistant postmaster at Short Hills, who was committed to the jail in Newark by United States Commissioner Whitehead for embezzling about $2,500 of the money of his office, is insane, and yesterday he was turned over to the care of his friends to be taken to an asylum in New York State. Jenkins was examined this week by a commission of physicians who pronounced him insane, and yesterday District Attorney Rice in New Brunswick received an order from Attorney-General Harmon to have him discharged from custody. It appears that the malady developed while Jenkins was in office, and that he was under the delusion that the Government owed him money. Jenkins is thirty three years old, and was sent to jail in July. Most of the money taken has been recovered.

Settled Out of Court.

The case of Opdyke against William Demler, William Bicknell, George Mobus and Justice Spier has been settled out of court. The summons was returnable at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, before Justice Austin and a jury at the Mt. Bethel Hotel. The action was brought in tort for the keeping of a bogus stand at the Union picnic, held at Washington rock, August 12th. By the settlement the fact that the defendants were wrong in principle is well established. Their expression of sorrow for the transgression had much to do with the settlement.

Dead Dog Causes a Lawsuit.

John F Crist, Borough Marshal of Roselle, is to have a suit on his hands as a result of his late dog-killing expedition. Among the animals killed on Friday was a valuable fox terrier belonging to Edward Stevens, past district deputy and past chancellor of the Knights of Pythias. The animal was accompanying Mr. Stevens's sister-in-law to the postoffice, and was a special pet of the family. Mr. Stevens has retained a lawyer to bring a suit for exemplary damages at once against Marshal Crist.

A Change in the High School.

There will be one change in the regular staff of teachers at the Plainfield High School this year. Lyman R. Allen, who has had charge of the science department for the last two years, will not return. In his place, there will be A. L. Knowlton, of Massachusetts. He brings excellent recommendations and is the graduate of several of the New England educational institutions.

Seized Unpaid-For Wheels.

The Weatherby Bicycle Company, of Elizabeth, has seized fifty wheels which it sold to customers on the instalment plan last spring. The terms were $5 a month and a small deposit. The company sold 200 wheels. The lawyer yesterday employed half a dozen constables to gather in the wheels.

LEFT THE CHILDREN AT HOME.

And Then Mrs. Hensey Goes to the Store and Much Damage Results.

While John Hensey's mother from Netherwood was in town yesterday laying in a stock of groceries and provisions for Sunday and Labor Day, two children were left to wander about the place. One of the children, a young lad, gained entrance to the place through a cellar window and then let his sisters in through an upper sky-light. John then turned the hose on two females and a coterie of children who were nearby, and after he had got through with the hose, which by the way, was attached to a faucet in the sink, the water continued to flow until the sink overflowed, and flooded two floors in the building. The damage will not exceed $100, but the inconvience caused by pulling down the walls and replacing them will be great.

A New Trolley Line.

Papers have been signed organizing the Elizabeth and Rahway Traction Company, and the consent of Franklin Post and Mr. Zeigler, the largest property-holders in Linden, to lay tracks through Elizabeth avenue, Linden, has been secured. All the property owned by these gentlemen, which amounts to nearly 1,000 acres, will be cut into building lots. Articles of incorporation of the company will, it is said, be filed in the County Clerk's office in a few days. It is expected that the new line will be built before winter and be operated between Elizabeth and Rahway, connecting with the Union and Middlesex County Traction Company for Woodbridge, Seawaren, and Boynton Beach. The power, it is expected, will be furnished by the Subarban Electric Company of Elizabeth.

Searching for an Old Corner-Stone.

City Surveyor Meyer, of Elizabeth, will try to unearth the original corner-stone of the College of New Jersey, which will soon celebrate its 150th anniversary. The present location of the building is a matter of uncertainty. Mr. Meyer, however, knows more about the old landmarks in Elizabeth than probably any other man in the city. He has been searching for the site of the old college and thinks he has discovered it. The corner-stone may contain interesting records.

Holy Cross Church Services Again.

The church of the Holy Cross having been newly carpeted and some interior repairs made will open again for divine service on Sunday night. Morning prayer, sermon and the Holy Communion at 11 a. m. On the second Sunday of the month the Sunday school will resume and afternoon service will be held.

What Causes the Delay.

The delay in the work of macadamizing Mountain avenue is due to the fact that the State Supervisor of Roads is obliged to go over the road, and there is also a considerable amount of detail work yet to be done before work can be started.

FAINTED ON THE ROAD.

A Well-Dressed Stranger Overcome While Returning to New York.

The residents of Woodland avenue, near South avenue, were surprised last evening to see a man stagger and fall in the middle of the roadway. Kind hands soon carried him to a place of safety and he finally recovered sufficiently to tell who and what he was.

He refused to give his name, but said that he was from New York. He formerly occupied a responsible position in a large dry goods house in New York and commanded a large salary. During the recent financial depression he lost his position. His funds dwindled away rapidly and an attack of enlargement of the heart made hard work impossible. Yesterday he came out to get a position but, when he reached here, he found that some one had been before him. He had barely enough money to pay his fare to Plainfield and, tired and discouraged, he started to walk back. The effort was too much, however, and he fainted.

The residents of Woodland avenue gathered together and raised a purse. The stranger was sent to Dr. Long and when he recovered sufficiently he was sent home on the train.

FIGHTING IN PARADISE ALLEY.

Two Young Fellows Disagree and Come to Blows.

Special Officer Dennis Carney has a hard time keeping order on Paradise Alley, so he says, and this morning one of the residents of that famous thoroughfare, James Harden, and a young man from West Fourth street, who has the name of Thos. Sheridan, were arraigned before City Judge De Meza for fighting. Carney says that Sheridan is one of the fighting men of the alley, while he gives Harden a fairly good reputation.

The testimony was somewhat contradictory and very amusing in some cases, but it was evident that Sheridan went to Harden's house and asked what time it was. A quarrel followed in which several blows were struck and Sheridan had his lip badly cut. They were arrested and the trial came off this morning. Charles J. McNabb represented Harden and entered a plea of not guilty. The Judge decided, after hearing the evidence that both men were guilty, and fined each $3.

Died in the Hospital.

The death of Walter N. Mague, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman C. Mague, of Prescott place, occurred at Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday afternoon. Mr. Mague had been ill for some time with typhoid fever and when taken to the hospital, less than a week ago, he was in an unconscious and dying condition. He passed away calm and peacefully. Mr. Mague was a young man with a promising future. He was a machinist by trade and worked in the local machine shops. He was well known and had a large number of friends and acquaintances, whose sorrow is mingled with that of the bereaved family. Some time ago Mr. Mague was married and he leaves a young wife. The decedent was a member of Hope chapel, also Somerset Council. J. O. U. A. M. The funeral will be held Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock from Hope Chapel.

Suspended Sentence on Monahan.

The trouble in the Monahan family on West Fourth street, has come to an end, at least so Michael Monahan says. He was brought in the city court this morning upon the charge of being disorderly. The complaint, as has been told in The Daily Press, was made by his wife. Ex-Judge W. A Coddington appeared for Monahan and entered a plea non vult. Monahan seemed to be a respectable man and had a good reference from Street Commissioner Meeker. The Judge suspended sentence.

They'll All See the Parade.

The following cases were brought before Judge DeMeza this morning, and in every case sentence was suspended with a warning: Henry Van-Ness, charged by Isabella Skinner with being disorderly and breaking locks at her home; Spencer Clicknor, disorderly and using profane language; Lewis Green, colored, throwing stones and hitting a son of Mrs. Kline, by mistake. All were instructed to behave themselves and thus save future trouble.

Union Services.

The union services of the First and Grace Methodist churches will be continued tomorrow. In the morning at the Front street church, in the evening at Grace church.

GREAT INTEREST SHOWN

THE DEMOCRATIC PRIMARIES WERE WELL ATTENDED IN ALL WARDS.

It Was Expected That There Would be a Fight Made by the Gold Men, But Free Silver Men Were Elected All Over.

The Democratic primaries were attended last night by a large number of voters than has been recorded in several years before. It was expected that there would be a fight between those loyal to Bryan and Sewall and the ones who are opposed to the free silver sentiment. However, the free silver men had everything their own way, and elected delegates in all the wards pledged to the Chicago ticket: The results were as follows:

FIRST WARD.

The First ward primary organized by electing John Rafferty chairman, and Michael DeCourcy secretary. The name of John F. McIntyre was presented as the delegate to represent the ward at the State convention to be held at Trenton Wednesday, Sept. 9th, and he was unanimously chosen. The following resolution, endorsing the candidacy of Bryan and Sewall, was presented and adopted:

"Resolved, That we heartily endorse the candidates of the Democratic party, William J. Bryan and Arthur Sewall, and also the Chicago platform, believing that the election of the above candidates would in a great measure relieve wage-earners, (which is and always has been the first object of the Democratic party,) and that object attained would tend to an era of prosperity such as this country has never seen before."

SECOND WARD.

Democrats in the Second ward assembled in the Bryant School building last evening to name the delegate to the State convention. The meeting was called to order by Hon. James. E. Martine, and he was subsequently made chairman. Joseph Vandervoort was the secretary and John Ross, the judge. Frank Vosseller was chosen as delegate and empowered to fill his own vacancy. The following resolution was passed without dissent:

"Resolved, That we, the Democrats of the Second ward, in primary assembled, do most cordially endorse the nomination of Bryan and Sewall, and do hereby pledge our earnest efforts to advance their election. We hold that the platform adopted at Chicago is truly Democratic, and when enforced will relieve the toiling masses and advance general prosperity."

THIRD WARD.

The Third ward primary meeting last evening was held at the Revere House, on Park avenue. The meeting was called to order precisely at 8:15 by F. M. Bacon, who was afterwards made chairman with Frank Frank McInerney as secretary. The meeting was then opened for discussion before the nominations. Colonel Deitrich who was present arose and in a few well-chosen remarks told those present that at last he had come over to the Democratic party to help them fight on the currency question. "For fifty long years" the Colonel said, "I have been voting the other way but this time I am going to vote for Bryan and Sewall, and will stand by them." After the discussion was over the nominating of a delegate to attend the State Convention was next in order, E. F. Birmingham being chosen as the delegate. The meeting was largely attended, and everything pertaining to the nominations passed off quietly. Some enthusiasm was shown during Colonel Deitrich's few remarks.

FOURTH WARD.

The Fourth ward primary was held in Reform Hall, and the attendance was fair. The officers of the primary were M. R. Flynn, chairman; T. A. McCarthy, secretary; Wilbur F. Berrell, judge and P. Blimm, inspector. There was little or no contention for the honors and the delegates selected were M. R. Flynn and E. J. McCue. The delegates were authorized and empowered to fill vacancies, and the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That we, the Democratic voters of the Fourth ward in primary assembled, do heartily and cordially endorse the nomination of Bryan and Sewall and the platform adopted at the Chicago convention."

Change of Trains to Long Branch.

Long Branch passengers from here are requested to notice a change which will go into effect on Monday next. The through cars heretofore ran on the 10:27 a m. and 2:07 p. m. trains from here to Long Branch, will be taken off, and passengers will be obliged to change at Elizabeth or the 'Port.

The whole system is drained and undermined by indolent ulcers and open sores. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve speedily heals them. It is the best pile cure known. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

GALLAGHER INSANE

Sad Homecoming of the Released Irish Prisoner.

THE RECEPTION PARTY DISAPPOINTED

His Brother and Sisters Break Down When the True Condition of the Unfortunate Man Is Revealed to Them at New York Quarantine.

New York, Sept. 5.—Dr. Thomas Gallagher, the Irish-American who was released last week after an incarceration for thirteen years in Chatham and Portland prisons as a political offender against English laws, arrived last eveng on board the Ametican line steamship St. Paul. The St. Paul was met at quarantine by a number of representatives of the different Irish societies under the leadership of Gen. O'Beirne. These societies with Dr. Gallagher's two brothers, James and Daniel, his sisters Agnes and Rose of Buffalo and other members of the family were on board the Pennsylvania Railroad company's ferry boat Annex No. 4 which was hired for the occasion. A band was also on board, and it was intended to take Dr. Gallagher off at Quarantine and bring him up in the annex boat, where speech-making and general jollification were to have taken place. However, owing to the rumor that Dr. Gallagher's mind had been seriously affected by his imprisonment, it was thought advisable that his brothers and Gen. O'Bierne should go board the St. Paul and find out if Dr. Gallagher was able to meet the people who had gathered to welcome him.

A Sad Scene.

The three men were taken on the St. Paul by the health officer, while the annex lay to at Quarantine dock. It was a sad scene when Daniel Gallagher returned in the health officers' boat without his brother. Those on board at once guessed that the rumors as to the doctor's mental condition were well founded. His sisters and other female relatives broke down under the strain and Daniel Gallagher sat down and cried bitterly. The band played very softly the "Last Rose of Summer" and to its mournful strains the party, who had started down the bay full of joy and hope, slowly steamed up after the St. Paul. The annex overtook the steamship before she was docked, but under the circumstances the party were not allowed to land until Gen. O'Bierne and Mr. Gallagher had taken the doctor off the ship. Arrangements have been made to have the doctor taken to to a sanitarium on Long Island, where his friends hope to see him restored to health.

Feared That He Is Hopelessly Insane.

It is feared that Dr. Gallagher is hopelessly insane. When the St. Paul reached her pier the unfortunate man was met by his two brothers and two sisters. There was a pitiable scene witnessed on the pier when the released prisoner failed to recognize one of his sisters. She rushed to him and wanted to embrace him. He looked at her in apparent astonishment and seemed annoyed at her interfering with him. "I do not know you," he said. "I don't want to have anything to do with you." Neither would he talk nor have anything else to do with anyone except to two men to whom he took a sudden liking when they greeted him on the steamer. They were Victor H. Harrison, who is connected with the passenger department of the American line, and W. J. Calnon, a Jersey City alderman, who is also connected with the steamship company. The doctor ignored the members of the reception committee entirely and walked up and down the pier between his newly made friends. Now and then he would grow excited as they talked together during their promenade. Two policemen kept the crowd on the pier from getting too close to the new arrival, as he seemed to lose his temper when interrupted in his walk. He was attired in a close-fitting gray suit, the coat of which was buttoned tightly. He also wore a sort of a gray bicycle cap. About his neck was a large white silk handkerchief, which concealed his collar and necktie.

A Joyful Meeting.

After his baggage had been examined and taken down to the foot of the pier Mr. Harrison suggested to Dr. Gallagher that he better descend and board the boat. At the head of the stairway leading to the pier proper three women came rushing up, their faces beaming with joy. One of them was a married sister of the doctor. One of her companions was her daughter, the other was Mrs. Chapelle, the president of the Woman's Relief board of the G. A. R. Mother and daughter stretched out their arms to the surrounded man, who had not noticed them until they had pushed their way through the crowd, and stood in front of him in welcoming attitudes. Those who witnessed the meeting and who had witnessed the doctor's previous failure to recognize his other sister expected to see another scene. But strange to say there came a gleam of recognition into the man's eyes. When one after another his neice and sister placed their arms about his neck and kissed him he returned both the embrace and kiss. The recognition filled the hearts of his many friends with new hope. Some expressed the belief that his mind would yet be as clear as ever. However, the general impression was that his mind would be impaired until his death.

Complains of His Treatment in Prison.

When the delegation boarded the steamer at Quarantine Dr. Gallagher became excited during the greetings extended and began to swear about the manner in which he had been treated. He got so worked up that he was placed in a room with an attendant by order of Dr. McBride. It is said that during his lucid moments Dr. Gallagher told some of his fellow passengers how he was treated in prison. He said keepers jumped upon his body and half starved him. It is true that several of his ribs are broken. During the trip across the ocean opiates had to be frequently given to him by Dr. McBride. He was more violent yesterday than at any time during the voyage. Dr. McBride says that his patient is suffering from religious mania. He thinks some times that he is a priest.

AMERICAN LEGION OF HONOR.

Action in the Boston Courts Regarding Application for a Receiver.

Boston, Sept. 6.—John Haskell Butler, counsel for the supreme council of the American Legion of Honor, appeared in the supreme court yesterday before Judge Allen in relation to the bill in equity which has been filed by Benjamin Cohen of Baltimore against the order, asking that a receiver be appointed for it, and asked that there be issued against the plaintiff an order to make service upon the defendant. Judge Allen intimated that the defendant might itself file an answer at once irrespective of any summons and afterwards move for a speedy hearing, so Mr. Butler did not further urge his motion, but decided to act at once upon the intimation which the court made. The plaintiff complains that the guarantee fund of the order, which, he says, amounts to $500,000, is not invested in stable securities. This, defendant says, is false, as $400,000 of this amount is invested in municipal bonds of places within this commonwealth and $100,000 of it is secured by ample real estate investments.

LABRADOR FISHERIES.

Considerable Improvement Shown and the Situation Not So Bad as Apprehended.

St. John, N. F., Sept. 5.—News from the Labrador fishery shows considerable improvement, though there is little probability that the season's total catch will reach the average. Operations on several parts of the coast have been hampered by severe storms, and the prospects for fishing have been so bad at several points that the fishing craft have abandoned their voyages and are returning home. Admiral Erskine, on board the British flagship Crescent, is here inspecting the fishery protection squadron, which comprises the Cordelia, Mohawk and Buzzard, under the command of Commodore Bourke.

Three Schooners Captured.

Washington, Sept. 5.—Capt. Schoonmaker, chief of the revenue cutter service, has received a telegram stating that the revenue cutter Perry, Capt. Smith, had captured three schooners, one American and two British, sealing in prohibited area in Behring sea. The schooners were the Ainok and Beatrice, British, and the Joseph C. Swan, American. The two former were turned over to the commander of the British warship Pheasant at Unalaska, and the latter went to her home port in the United States for trial.

Prof. Schmidt is familiar with all the Semitic languages and dialects, besides twenty-four other languages, many of which he speaks.

Long Island Railroad's New President.

New York, Sept. 5.—At a meeting of the executive committee of the directors of the Long Island Railroad company held in Long Island City it was unanimously voted to recommend to the directors of the road the name of W. Favorable action will be taken on this recommendation by the board at their next regular meeting, which will be held on Tuesday, the 8th instant.

PORTRAIT PAINTING.

Great Advance Made by Sixteenth-Century Artists.

The modern practice of having portraits of individuals seems to have sprung up naturally enough with the popularity of easel pictures, and this again was much influenced by the introduction of oil painting. Whether Antonello of Messina really acquired the art from the Van Eycks or from Lucas, of Leyden, as some have conjectured, is very doubtful, but it was certainly he who introduced the new art process into Venice, whence it spread all over Italy.

We have now come to the full development of the art of painting that sprang up toward the close of the 15th century and which was chiefly embodied in four great men, Leonardo, Raphael, Michael Angelo and Titian. All of those were great portrait painters in the true sense of the term, with the exception of Michael Angelo, who seldom condescended to easel pictures and who never worked in oil.

The great advance made by the 16th-century painters over the pre-Raphaelites was in the much-fuller utilization of the resources of chiaroscuro. Up to this time the colors used were mostly clear and light, and only so much shading was introduced as was necessary to give relief to the figures. The value of shadow in itself was hardly appreciated; in fact, the whole conception of painting was to show everything as far as possible in a full light.

The great innovator in this matter was Leonardo. Being, as he was, as much a man of science as painter, the problems of light and shade interested him in both capacities, and he investigated them in something of the modern spirit. By the aid of the knowledge thus acquired he succeeded in giving to his figures a roundness and a relief that had been hitherto unknown. In fact, he carried it so far that they are sometimes overmodeled.—Nineteenth Century.

"Oom Paul" Kruger.

President Kruger, who came from Cape Colony as a boy of ten in the great trek of 1836, has, since he reached manhood, been conspicuous in the military adventures and civil troubles of the country. To the natural shrewdness and tenacity of his character these years of active and changeful life have added a great experience of men and a perfect coolness in emergencies. He is keen, vigilant, astute, and, above all, resolute, and he represents so faithfully the dominant feelings and the inbred habits of the Boer people that he has been able to acquire a surprising influence over them and to exert over the assembly a practical authority far in excess of the very limited powers which the constitution of the republic permits to the president.—James Bryce, M. P., in Century.

The Alps Under Foot.

The mystery is gone from the Alps—none but climbers know how completely. Every mountain and point in view of even third-rate importance has been ascended, most by many routes. Almost every gap between two peaks has been traversed as a pass. The publications of some dozen mountaineering societies have recorded these countless expeditions in rows of volumes of appalling length. Of late years vigorous attempts have been made to coordinate this mass of material in the form of climbers' guides, dealing with particular districts, wherein every peak and pass is dealt with in strict geographical succession and every different route and all the variations of each route are set forth, with references to the volumes in which they have been described at length by their discoverers. Nearly half the Alps has been treated in this manner, but the work has taken ten years, and, of course, the whole requires periodical revision.—Scribner's.

"If all drugs were thrown into the sea it would be better for men and worse for the fishes."

Yet for the only drug which is at once a medicine and a food we are indebted to one of those same fishes. Dr. Holmes was hasty. "No known drug," says a high English authority (Dr. A. E. Bridger), "except cod-liver oil, has power to generate any force within the human body. The stimulants and tonics waste force and create weakness." Thus we see why of Cod-liver Oil with hypophosphites has, for twenty years, been the chief dependence of physicians in all bronchial and lung diseases. Scott's Emulsion acts strictly on the lines of modern medical practice. It does not stimulate, like alcohol and quinine, or stupefy, like opium and the bromides. It nourishes, strengthens and upbuilds the system. Being a true food (digested and absorbed in cases wherein other food only clogs the digestive organs, ferments, and poisons the blood), Scott's Emulsion arrests wasting, forms new flesh and tissue, revives the natural appetite and cures disease, conferring more life. For consumption, bronchitis, depleted blood, scrofula, etc., it excels all other remedies or forms of treatment.

THE SENTIMENTAL DRUMMER.

And the Sweet Little Maid'en He Met on the Train.

She was a pretty, sweet looking girl, and she took a seat just in front of Colby, in the parlor car. He had seen her upon the platform of the station before she got aboard. A young man had held her hand in his and looked sadly into her eyes. Colby thought they might perhaps be lovers. He traveled a great deal and he generally contrived to strike up an acquaintanceship with persons to whom he took a fancy, no matter what the circumstances happened to be.

The girl had not been upon the train for an hour or more, when Colby picked up a newspaper that somebody had left lying near her seat.

"May I look at it?" he asked.

She said it didn't belong to her, but the ice was broken, and they were soon chatting quite familiarly.

She had never traveled alone before, she said, and that was her future husband whom she had left at the station. She had been visiting his parents, who were the wealthiest people in the little town back there, and very proud. She was an orphan. She lived with her aunt, and Charlie's people rather looked down upon her because she did not have money.

Colby felt indignant at them, and told her that if Charlie didn't teach them that a good, sweet girl was worth more than all the riches in the world, he was no true man.

Colby flattered himself that he was too much a man of the world to be easily worried over the affairs of other people, but this girl's frankness touched him, and he felt a jealous pang when he thought of Charlie's good fortune, and his own loneliness. He had often said that he would never marry while he was on the road, and he never felt just like settling down, anyway. But this sweet, confiding creature sent a new feeling through him. He told himself that if she would be likely to prefer him to Charlie and his uninviting parents, he would ask her to be his little wife, and they would have a modest home somewhere, and he would be willing to give up the world and its allurements forever. What these fancies might have led him to can never be known, for the sweet little maiden suddenly began gathering up her belongings, as they neared a station which the conductor announced as "Brmooth."

"Yes," she said to Colby, "here is where I get off. Some day I hope we may meet again. You have made my ride a very pleasant one, and it made me so happy to confide in you."

He tried to tell her how she had caused the current of his thoughts of ... But before he had finished she was upon the platform waving him an adieu as the train pulled away.

Half an hour later Colby came out of dreamland to feel for his watch. It wasn't in his pocket, and while hunting for it he became aware of the fact that his wallet, which contained several hundred dollars, was gone, too.

Then he sat and scratched his head for a long time, and finally he decided that he would never believe in appearances again.—Cleveland News and Herald.

ABOUT THE SPOON.

The Fork Has Taken Its Place Wherever Possible.

The spoon is a time-honored utensil, but of late seems to be growing in disfavor except in its very proper kingdom of liquids. Perhaps its aristocratic standing has been a little injured by the mushroom crop of inartistic souvenir spoons, which are supposed by dealers to be the great incentive to travel. To eat with a spoon anything that can be eaten with a fork is distasteful to those who are sensitive to the niceties of life. Besides, it gives an air of elegance to one's table manners, and it is at the table that one exhibits most unconsciously one's breeding or the lack of it, says a writer in Illustrated American. It is a positive embarrassment to be given a spoon for eating some dish which one is accustomed to eating with a fork. If spoons and forks be laid for dessert—the spoon to be invariably of dessert size—there can be no opportunity for embarrassment.

While on the subject of spoons let us plead for small ones for eggs served a la coque. Waiters at hotels have a reprehensible way of bringing one's eggs broken into the bottom of a tall glass or egg cup, tumbled together in an unappetizing fashion, all daintiness and beauty gone. Into this unattractive substance one is expected to throw salt, pepper, paprika, butter and any other condiments, and to eat voraciously. Contrast this with the perfect oval form of an unbroken egg, stood upright in a holder which conceals but little of its symmetry, the shell a pale biscuit color, and dull with unglossed freshness. The eater cracks off delicately the apex of the oval with a small spoon, with bowl of just the sulphur mar its color on the moment. Milk white and pale yellow are the contents thus discovered, which are delicately sprinkled with salt and pepper and eaten little by little from the natural cup which holds them. This is the only way to eat a soft-boiled egg.—Philadelphia Press.

LI HUNG HAPPY NOW

The Old Viceroy Feels at Home in Washington.

AMONG A NATION'S ADVISERS AGAIN

He Calls on Carlisle and Is Amazed and Gratified at the Secretary's Knowledge of the Chinese System of Tariff and Finance.

Washington, Sept. 5.—Li Hung Chang seems to be enjoying his visit to Washington even more than he did his stay in New York. This is probably due to the feeling that he is among the chief officials of the nation, or, more properly speaking, at this period of the season, at their headquarters. The viceroy's visit to the Chinese legation yesterday afternoon was concluded with an elaborate Chinese luncheon, to which only the following sat down: Earl Li and Minister Yang Yu, the viceroy's two sons, Lord Li and Viscount Li, and his two chief secretaries, Lo Feng Luh and Yu. During the luncheon it was decided that, notwithstanding his willingness, Minister Yu should not accompany the vice-regal party to Niagara, but should send two of his legation attaches as substitutes. Li Hung Chang then chose the secretary of the legation H. W. Hoo and the translator M. Y Chung, who are the most popular celestials in Washington, to have the honor of accompanying him. A little after noon and before the others had finished their repast, the viceroy announced that he would sleep, and two minutes later he was wrapped in profound slumber on a big divan. Although Li was due at 1 o'clock back at the hotel where all the suite and the United States army escorts were anxiously awaiting his signal for lunch, he slept soundly until twenty minutes past the hour when he was hurriedly presented to the ladies and children of the legation, and then driven directly to the Arlington. Here he disappeared from public view until 3 o'clock, when he had an appointment to go to the top of the Washington monument. At that hour, Major-Gen. Miles, accompanied by his young son, and Gen. Breck, Gen. Ruggles, Gen. Greeley, Surgeon Gen. Sternberg, Col. Gilmore, Capt. Davis and Capt. Heyl, of his staff, called to pay their respects. They spent fifteen minutes with the viceroy, who took a violent fancy to the son of Gen. Miles and plied him with questions about his school and what he expected to become as a man. He asked Gen. Miles how old he was, and when the general told him he had served with Grant, the viceroy became deeply interested and asked numerous questions about Grant's army life.

Won by Carlisle.

After this interview ex-Secretary Foster took the viceroy, Lord Li and Dr. Mark to call on Secretary Carlisle at the latter's residence. Mrs. Carlisle and the wife of Chief Justice Fuller received the party. This visit turned out to be the most important of the day, and resulted in the complete demolition of the afternoon programme. The viceroy spent over an hour in the discussion of finance and tariff with Secretary Carlisle. He was amazed and gratified with the secretary's knowledge of the Chinese systems China contemplates a change in her tariff system, which is now said to be anything but uniform. Secretary Carlisle had a copy of the present Chinese customs schedules before him, and the two distinguished financiers went closely into the details of the matter. The viceroy declared that Carlisle would be a great man in China if he went there. When the discussion had continued until half-past 4 o'clock the viceroy entered his carriage and drove to the houses of Secretary Lamont, Gen. Miles and Secretary Foster, where he left his card. He then returned to to the Arlington, but was too tired to visit the Washington monument although steam had been kept up after hours to take the party in the elevator to the top. To-day he will visit the capitol and start this evening for Niagara Falls.

THE ANNUAL CANARD.

Yesterday's Story About the President Probably a Stock Market Invention.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., Sept. 5.—The president went to Falmouth yesterday and in company with Secretary Olney spent the day fresh water fishing in one of the ponds there. Accordingly there is no truth in the report, which originated in the west, that some terrible calamity had befallen the president. Once every year since the president has been here similar reports have been circulated, and in every instance they have come from different points. It is believed here that these false reports are made solely to effect the stock and money markets

Failure of a Large Western Bank.

Washington, Sept. 5.—Acting Comptroller Coffin is advised of the failure of the First National bank of Montana, one of the largest banks in the west, ex-Gov. Hauser being its president. The liabilities are stated at $3,458,000. Bank Examiner Flynn has been placed in charge of the bank. The failure was due to the inability of the officers to realize on the assets.

Dry Goods Market Active.

New York, Sept. 5.—There has been quite a large amount of business transacted in the dry goods market in the way of store trade this week, and demand coming to hand through mail and wire orders has been considerable, and in several directions is reported to have contained single orders for larger quantities than purchasers have lately been in the habit of buying.

WINDING UP THE BABY.

Ingenious Contrivances to Amuse the Children in Swedish Families.

The people of Sweden, mainly on account of their isolated position from the rest of Europe, still retain many of their peculiarities in dress and habits, particularly among the peasantry, and perhaps more so in the country of Dalecarlia, on the shores of Lake Siljan, than in any other part of the country.

As you travel through this country you begin to get a little bewildered at the stereotyped editions of men and boys that you meet at the railroads, for they seem to be dressed all alike in their white sheepskin coats—the fur of the coat toward the body and the smooth, white skin on the outside. Besides this, they wear leather aprons, knee breeches, long stockings and low shoes.

The girls and women are also dressed alike in similar sheepskin coats, only much shorter, in addition to which they wear dark skirts, ornamented in front with bright-colored striped aprons. On their heads they wear jaunty little red caps and on the feet low shoes, with the heel almost under the middle of the foot. The mother puts the little one in a kind of basket or sack and slings it on her shoulder, after strapping it firmly so that it shall not drop out while the mother is walking along or performing some kind of farm labor in the fields.

But if you want to see the real trial of a Swedish baby you must follow me into a Dalecarlia farmhouse. As you enter the workroom, that is, into the eating and sleeping-room, your attention is instantly drawn to the great double bed in the corner of the room, for it is not a bedstead that you can move from place to place, but a solid fixture, forming a part of the framework of the house, with posts at the corners and a wooden shelf on top. From the shelf hang down snow-white towlings, embroidered with bright-colored yarn, making a very artistic and pretty effect against the natural woodwork on the bed and walls. From the shelf hangs a short, stout strap or cord, terminating in a stirrup-shaped handle that is used to take hold of when rising in the morning to hoist yourself up in a sitting position.

After you have feasted your eyes on this aesthetic piece of bedroom furniture you notice something like a small meal sack, surmounted by a chubby little head, with blue eyes and flaxen hair, stuck down in an upright position between the bedding and the side of the bed. You call the mother's attention to it as she sits by her hand loom, or spinnning-wheel, and she says: "Oh, yes, that is the baby, and it is about time I wound it up." In your astonishment you venture to ask if it is customary to wind up babies in Sweden as we wind up clocks, to keep them in regular order for a week's time, when she will answer you with a smile:

'Oh, no, not just the same, for we wind our babies oftener, generally three or more times a day, and if you have time I will show you how we do it."

She then proceeds to take the baby from the bed and commences to unwind it—that is, to unfasten one end of a long linen band, about six or eight inches wide, and gradually to release it, either by turning the baby over or by passing the band around the baby as it is being gradually unwound. When fully released it is given the freedom of its legs, arms and body for a short time, and, after being washed and fed, she proceeds to wind it up again with a fresh linen band. Commencing at the feet, the mother winds it tightly in a spiral manner upward to the armpits, and sometimes the arms are also laid close to the body, and the linen band passed round and round toward the feet again, and so on, until one is made nearly as stiff as a board, and put away either on the bed or between it and the bedding in an upright position, as when we first discovered it. The process is continued until the child is from ten to twelve months old, and it is the universal custom in Sweden among all classes of people, from the lowest to the highest. Why do the Swedish women keep up to this very day this peculiar method of winding up their infants? Ask them and they will tell you it is for the purpose of making the children grow up tall and straight-limbed, and to prevent them from being hunchbacked or bowlegged, as well as to prevent their feet from turning inward, and, as a matter of fact, there seem to be fewer deformed people in Sweden than in some other countries where this practice of winding the babies is not in use. Whether or not the results are always as anticipated is uncertain, but for all that you can never prevail upon a Swedish mother to give up her daily practice of winding up the baby.—Household.

Maj. McKinley Addresses a Pennsylvania Delegation.

TO SPEAK AGAIN THIS AFTERNOON

Wm. J. Bryan and Party Leaders Meet in Conference at Chicago—Important Business Transacted—Line of Battle Mapped Out.

Canton, O., Sept. 5.—Maj. McKinley this morning met and addressed the Beaver county, Pa., delegation, which had come to Canton to assure him of their fealty to republican principles. Late this afternoon he will deliver another address to the Pittsburg labor delegation. Maj. McKinley's first intention, to receive the two Pennsylvanias at one time and make but one speech, was necessarily changed, owing to the size of each of the contingents. Two more delegations have wired to Major McKinley asking him if he could receive them. The commercial travelers of Pittsburg and vicinity have asked to come on the 19th inst., and the republican clubs of New Albany have notified Maj. McKinley that they have arranged to come that day. An effort will be made to arrange another date for the traveling men, so that they may have the day to themselves. Among Maj. McKinley's callers yesterday was Col. W. A. Stambaugh of Kansas, who is making a few republican speeches in this state. He says the republicans and gold democrats have a hard fight on in Kansas, but that if they work diligently and intelligently they will carry the state for McKinley by more than 10,000. Editor L. P. Hunt of Mankato, Minn., was another caller. He assured Maj. McKinley that the state will be in the republican column in November. Primrose and West, the minstrel men, paid a visit to the republican nominee yesterday afternoon. They told a number of amusing stories and invited Maj. McKinley to attend their performance.

BYRAN'S CAMPAIGN.

Important Conference in Chicago—Vigorous Fight To Be Made in Several States.

Chicago, Sept. 5.—With the arrival of William J. Bryan in Chicago the campaign on the part of the democrats opens in the west in earnest. An important conference was in session last night at the Auditorium annex, attended by the nominee and the following members of the national committee: Senator Jones, D. J. Campau of Michigan, G. A. Hines and Gov. Altgeld of Illinois, Gov. Stone of Missouri, Major McConville of Ohio, Johnson of Kansas, Wall of Wisconson, and Secretary Walsh of Iowa. While the leaders of the party were not inclined to talk for publication, or to say what was done at the meeting, it somehow leaked out that it was the most important conference which had so far been held. It was decided that a vigorous campaign is to be inugurated in this state and also in the state of Ohio, Indiana and Michigan. Bryan left for Milwaukee to-day, where he will make two speeches, returning to this city to-night. To-morrow the candidate will remain quietly at his hotel. Monday he will address the Building Trades' council and members of trades unions at Sharpshooters' park.

Politics Mixed in Kentucky.

Chicago, Sept. 5.—Senator J. S. C. Blackburn, the leader of the silver forces in Kentucky, who is in Chicago to consult with Chairman Jones and the big men of the democracy, speaking of the Indianapolis ticket, said: "By the nomination of Gen. Buckner Kentucky politics becomes the most complicated of any state in the union. Of course, Kentucky will be found for Bryan in November, but the local conditions in my state are complicated by the Indianapolis ticket, and I am going home in order to master all the details."

Gen. Buckner's Return Home.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 5.—When Gen. Buckner reached his hotel here on his return from the Indianapolis convention, a great crowd greeted him. Everybody wanted to shake hands with him, and he was called on for a speech. One man yelled for Bryan, and the crowd put him out of the hotel lobby. Gen. Buckner thanked the crowd for its welcome and then retired to his apartments. The southern delegates then proceeded to serenade the newspapers.

James Kerr To Stump Pennsylvania.

Washington, Sept. 5.—The congressional democratic campaign committee announces that Hon. James Kerr will take the stump in Pennsylvania, beginning at Clearfield.

Arkansas Election.

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 5.—The Arkansas state election takes place on next Monday and will be one of the hottest political contests that has occurred in this state since reconstruction. There are four tickets in the field—democratic, republican, populist and prohibition.

Gold Men's Headquarters.

Indianapolis, Sept. 5.—Chairman W. D. Bynum of the national committee of the gold democrats announces that the headquarters will be in Chicago, with a branch in New York.

Prohibition Nomination.

Gloversville, N. Y., Sept. 5.—The prohibition assembly district convention of Fulton and Hamilton counties, held at Johnstown yesterday afternoon, nominated George C. Hartman of Breadalbin for member of assembly.

Assemblymen Alida Renominated.

Utica, N. Y., Sept. 5.—The Chenango county republicans unanimously renominated assemblyman Jotham G. Alida yesterday.

Sent it to His Mother in Germany

Mr. Jacob Esbensen, who is in the employ of the Chicago Lumber Co., at DesMoines, Iowa, says: "I have just sent some medicine back to my mother in the old country, that I know from personal use to be the best medicine in the world for rheumatism, having used it in my family for several years. It is called Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It always does the work." 50 cent, bottles for sale by T. S. Armstrong druggist.

In a recent letter to the manufacturers Mr. W. F. Benjamin, editor of the Spectator, Rushford, N. Y., says: "It may be a pleasure to you to know the high esteem in which Chamberlain's medicines are held by the people of your own state, where they must be best known. An aunt of mine, who resides at Dexter, Iowa, was about to visit me a few years since, and before leaving home wrote me, asking if they were sold here, stating if they were not she would bring a quantity with her, as she did not like to be without them." The medicines referred to are Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds and croup; Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, pains in the side and chest, and Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for bowel complaints. These medicines have been in constant use in Iowa for almost a quarter of a century. The people have learned that they are articles of great worth and merit, and unequaled by any other. They are for sale here by T. S. Armstrong druggist.

Autumnal.

The summer's throbbing chant is done,
And mute the choral antiphon;
The birds have left the shivering pines
To flit among the trellised vines.
But still the man accounted wise
And needing treatment of his eyes.
To Collier's goes, assured he'll share
The skillfullest attention there.

Dear, could the light come back again
That never was on land, nor sea;
But only in youth's dreaming brain
As all life's pure ideals be,
Would you take willing hands, with me
To walk once more, through sun and dew,
By mead and meadow, tower and tree—
In that old world we loved—and knew?

Would you cross over months and years
By milestones long, long left behind,
Back to that time of April tears
And April smiles—the breathing wind
Warm with May's promise? Could you find
The leafy footway through the wood?
Would your white hands the branches bind,
Your glad eyes seek me, where I stood?

How fair it was, the sylvan scene!
Dim vistas through the forest space
Throbbing with light—translucent—green,
The young buds bursting from the sprays,
And the sweet vision of your grace!
Soft eyes, soft hair, half childhood's mirth,
Half woman's passion in your face—
Too warm for heaven—too pure for earth!

If, by some spell that poet hath,
If, by some fairy's magic chart,
We two might find that dear lost path,
Would you turn back from busy mart
And life's wild rush and whirl, apart,
To love's first kisses, dreams and sighs?
I would turn back with you, sweetheart,
Yes, from the gates of Paradise!

CAMPAIGN BANNERS.

How the Most Elaborate Designs Are Rushed Through at Railroad Speed—It Is a Regular Business.

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

Already the campaign banner is swinging mid air across the avenues and adorning the various political headquarters. Very few people, as they gaze on these works of art, have any idea of their manufacture — simply knowing that they appear after the selection of the candidates for presidential honors, and associating them with fireworks, brass bands and oratory.

The making of campaign banners is, however, an extensive business—several firms devoting themselves exclusively to their manufacture. It is true that banners are sometimes gotten up by sign painters and the small shops that spring up for the occasion, but they are not to be classed with the banners turned out by the regular factories. A visit to one of these establishments reveals some interesting facts.

On the cheap banners only the names and sentiments of the candidates appear, but the large and costly ones have the portraits of both nominees painted in ovals, separated by fanciful designs. Shields, eagles and figures of liberty are the most popular. The emblems are wonderfully and fearlessly gotten up, the eagle performing feats that would tax a contortionist—airily balanced on a shield, his talons filled with enormous bundles of arrows, a pennant expressing his political opinions floating gracefully from his beak; or with a shield suspended from his neck he takes his wild flight across the rising sun. The Goddess of Liberty and other designs are executed in an equally striking manner.

The first-class campaign banner is the product of the combined efforts of three men—the portrait painter, the sign painter and the sailmaker. In making the banner the work is divided up. The painting, which is done on sized muslin, may be accomplished in two ways. If the man is an expert, he takes a large circle of pasteboard, having the features cut out, and traces the general outline and size of the head, using a photograph to finish the portrait from.

But the usual method is by the use of stencils, each stencil being for a different color. The large pieces of muslin, tacked on boards, are ranged in a row around the room, and men with pots of paint pass from one to the other with great rapidity. Painter No. 1 lays in the hair, No. 2 follows with the flesh tint, No. 3 puts on the shirt and collar, and No. 4 the coat; thus the foundation is laid in for the artist, who comes along with his huge palette and completes the portrait.

Meanwhile, the sign painters, perched on stools and boxes, are putting on long strips of muslin "The People's Choice" and other equally flattering sentiments. The sailmakers cut a roll of square meshed net into the different banner sizes, binding them with a thick rope covered with canvas.

No stencils are used for the emblems. They are spontaneous bursts of the artist's imagination. He can indulge his taste in eagles as fierce and warlike as he pleases, and Liberties as defiant. This is not all. A banner once painted is not a loss, even if it remains on the firm's hands. As the artist remarked, "putting on or taking off a mustache or beard, rearranging hair, an extra touch of fat or lean as the case requires is a small matter, accomplished by a few strokes of the brush." The sign painter is equally handy at altering the political mottoes.

The banner takes some days to dry, and a week to finish. A section is placed paint downward on the floor and the net put over it. The same design is arranged on top, and the sailmaker, sitting on the floor sailor fashion, sews it all together. Then the banner is ready to be raised with cheers and a flare of red fire

Cats That Became Wild.

When the lighthouse was built on Goat island, in the Pacific ocean, 20 years ago, the first keeper took a number of cats to cheer him in his loneliness. The island at that time was the home of countless birds and myraids of quail. The cats soon found that they could get a living by hunting, and they began absenting themselves from home. They returned at long intervals for a year or two, and then stayed away all the time. They multiplied rapidly, grew larger and fiercer and have become a nuisance. They have almost exterminated the quail, and other birds are becoming scarce. Efforts to destroy them by shooting or poison have failed and they continue to increase.

Dancing Skeletons Killed Him.

A remarkable cause of death from fright was the case of the Dutch painter Poutrain. He was at work in his studio, where there was a number of death's heads and skeletons, when he happened to fall asleep. During his sleep there was a slight shock of earthquake, and when he woke up suddenly he saw the skeletons and skulls dancing around in the greatest confusion. He at once became panic-stricken, and rushed across the room and threw himself out of the window on the pavement below. He died in a few days after, not from injuries received in the fall, but from the nervous shock given by the dancing skeletons, though the cause of the festivity was explained to him.

Unknown Weeds.

Soil brought up from a depth of 326 feet in one of the Belgian mines is said to have grown weeds unknown to the botanists.

AN ILLUSION.

Do you know that the sight of your face,
Though I see you each of the seven,
Can transfigure the commonest place
Into something that seems to be Heaven?

Do you know that the sound of your voice,
When you utter a brief salutation,
Bids the stars of the morning rejoice
As they did at the dawn of creation?

Do you know that the clasp of your hand,
In a purely conventional greeting,
Makes this earth a mysterious land
Where the fairies are holding a meeting?

Do you know that the ways you pass by,
When the stream of the traffic is flowing,
Are like the ladders which lead to the sky,
Whereon angels are coming and going?

Do you know that your yea or your nay
Lays its clasp on my soul like a fetter?
Whilst regarding myself I can say
That I know that I ought to know better.

TESTING OF ANTHONY.

BY LEWIS W. SMITH.

THERE were three weeks yet before commencement and in that time much could be done by hard practice; but what would that avail when Leon March would be sure to practice harder? Leon might not get the prize; there were three other competitors besides Anthony himself; but the chances were all in Leon's favor. Anthony jumped up and strode about his room angrily, as he thought of the foolish persistence with which Leon kept to himself and to his violin, foregoing the pleasures of the other boys and living only in his music. Why could he not be interested in the other things that appeal to the right-minded boy in general? How could one have any chance at all with a boy who didn't care for football or baseball or any other outdoor sport? It was so unnatural in a lad in his 17th year that his fellow students at the academy had given up trying to understand him, and had for him only that feeling of irritation that all of us have when we come into close contact with a thing altogether anomalous and beyond our fathoming. When he first saw him at prayers Anthony had conceived a liking for him; but as all his attempts at friendliness with him were one by one met coldly or repulsed, that early feeling had grown into something that was not dislike, but had yet all its bitterness.

Anthony began again the oft-repeated process of looking over his music, not yet decided as to which among his solos he should play at the great concert. While again balancing in his mind the merits of two compositions between which his decision wavered, there was a knock at the door; and, in answer to his shouted invitation to come in, Roy Willett opened the door and poked his head in before entering.

"Perhaps I can stand it if you're only looking at the music and not playing," he said, as he pushed the door wider and came in. Anthony tossed the music over on the table with just a show of vexation in his manner. "I am tired enough of it to be glad you've come. What's the use in trying for that miserable prize when we all know that Leon will get it? I don't call it a fair show for the rest of us. We have something else to do, and can't be practicing all the time, as he is."

"You haven't heard about his violin, have you?"

"No; unless you mean that old story about his singing it to sleep."

Roy laughed, not at the story, but at the startled questioning on Anthony's face.

"I am afraid that he will cry it to sleep to-night, and himself, too. This afternoon he broke a hole in the back of it, and you can hardly call it a violin any longer. He wants to give up entering the contest, but Mandel won't hear of it. The rest of us have good violins, and it will be our fault if some one of us does not get the prize."

"After all, that's hardly fair," said Anthony, a sudden sympathy for his rival springing to life in his heart.

"It simply gives us an even chance with him," said Roy; "the disadvantages have all been ours so far, but now he's getting his share. That's all there is to it."

"And what have been our disadvantages?" said Anthony, with a guilty

"AFTER ALL, THAT'S HARDLY FAIR."

consciousness of having had the same feeling himself. Roy settled himself back lazily in his chair before answering.

"Oh, we haven't been given the natural abilities that we ought to have, and, besides that, we weren't born to spend all our time bending over a violin, as he does."

"No," said Anthony; "I am sure we were not. Even Mandel himself would agree to so much."

"It strikes me that if one does not inherit a capacity for work he ought certainly to be given its equivalent in some sort of good luck; and lo and behold! the gods are as wise in the matter as I am. Here comes the good fortune that is our portion."

"But even with that lucky chance to help you, you will still have to work hard. If you do not, I am sure to beat you."

"You forget that you can't play any," said Roy, lightly; and the boys laughed before drawing out the chessboard, to forget their musical incapacities in exercising their brains over the intricate maneuvers of knights and queens and bishops.

That night Anthony could not escape the remembrance that he had another violin which he was not using, stored away in the little closet adjoining his sleeping-room. There was no reason at all why he should not let Leon have it until after the concert, save that by so doing he would be increasing his rival's chance for the prize. Leon could not afford to get a new violin, he knew that well enough; and of what use would the old one be with a hole punched in its back? Of course Leon deserved the prize, just as Roy of right had the honor of being captain of the ball club. Still it was none of his affair if he broke his violin. It was not a thing for which he should make reparation; and why should he trouble himself about one who had always repulsed his kindnesses, or at least had never invited them? He would be quite sure of the prize himself if—but Anthony could never bring himself to think of his being a party to Leon's failure. The old violin in his closet seemed to send out a lament because the music in its heart had been so long unvoiced. He could fancy that the spirits of those who in long-gone days had played upon it were waiting to whisper in its moving tones the joys and sorrows of a vanished time. And then—but Anthony would not think about it any more. He turned his thoughts resolutely to the next day's Virgil reading, a topic simulating his fancy so lightly that he soon forgot it all in sleep.

It was three days later when Anthony went into Prof. Mandel's room before the latter had finished the lesson he was giving Leon. Both teacher and pupil were aggravated by the dull tones of the cracked violin; and at last Mandel handed Leon his own instrument, upon which no pupil had ever before been permitted to play. Anthony sat down and listened for the remainder of the lesson hour. At first his heart sank within him; he could not so much as dream of being able to play like that. Then gradually the music came over him with all its power. He wondered how so slight a form, so thin and etherealized a face, should have for its soul so much strength and mastery. Directly he forgot to think about this, and by the time Leon had finished he knew what he should do. The shy boy hardly understood him when he told him that he had an old violin of good quality, to the use of which he was welcome for the rest of the term; but Anthony himself played better that afternoon than he had for weeks.

Anthony did not enter the contest for the prize. His father would be disappointed, he knew; but he had not the heart to bring his fumbling with the bow into comparison with Leon's mastery of his instrument. Roy laughed at him, and even upbraided him a little for lending his violin; but Roy's laughter and upbraiding were alike harmless.

But after the concert, when the prize had been awarded, Leon's mother came to him without an introduction.

"I do not know how to thank you," she said, and her voice was not so steady as it might have been, "Leon has written me about you. Your giving him the violin was more to him than the prize."

Afterward, when they had gone to his room together, Anthony told his father why he had not played and with whose instrument it was that Leon had won. His father seemed to be thinking of other things, only nodding his head slowly to show that he was listening. Then at the conclusion he spoke as from a distance, his eyes looking into a time of which Anthony knew not.

"Your uncle used to play that same Fantasia on the old violin years ago, when we were boys together. I can see him dropping his head over the strings now. He used to linger over that Adagio until it seemed the melting tones were angel voices calling; and even the Andante's pain of human longing barely seemed to bring him back to earth. It is no wonder that your friend played well to-night."

Anthony was not thinking now of the possibility of having to meet his father's displeasure.—N. Y. Independent.

CALVE PRAISES AMERICA.

Says She Would Prefer It to Any Country But Her Own.

Mme. Calve is as loyal to the Americans when she is in Paris as they are to her when she is in New York, says Harper's Weekly. She has been talking to a Parisian reporter about L'Amerique, and assures him that it is an enchanted and dreamlike country, to which, if she were not French, she would wish to belong. She brags handsomely to her countrymen about our villes magnifiques, with avenues as wide as the Champs Elysees, bordered with structures two or three times as high as the buildings in Paris, and brilliant with electric lights. Even more warmly she praises the remarkable development of our artistic instincts, which encourages artists to give full swing to their true temperaments and to interpret the masters according to their own ideals. Melba, it seems, has told a Parisian interviewer that after singing in opera in America she hardly dares risk herself on a Parisian stage. Calve says she sympathizes with her, and, fond as she is of the Parisian public, looks forward with trepidation to appearing before it again.

Sudden Interest.

"Sir," said the citizen, "the car I rode home on last night was so crowded that people, myself among them, had to hang on by their eyelids, so to speak."

The street railway magnate went on writing.

"So crowded, in fact, that the conductor was unable to collect all the fares."

The magnate's pen dropped to the floor. "What was the number of that car?" he asked, eagerly.—Indianapolis Journal.

Queer Arrangements Seen in Other Parts of the World.

Until quite recently the postal system in Persia was very loosely conducted. It was under the superintendence of a minister of posts, who, however, does not work the system himself. Each road is farmed to some merchant or wealthy person, who pays a certain sum to the minister for the privilege, and makes as much money out of the business as he can.

On the south coast of Patagonia is the most remarkable postal service in the world. Close to the post is a large sign post with the inscription: "Post Office." Attached by chains to the foot of the sign post is a strong chest, which has served as a post office, master, clerk, all in one, for many years. The ships passing through the Magellan straits send a boat to the shore to fetch any letters that may be addressed to their places of call, and at the same time to leave any letters they may wish to have taken in other directions.

In a small group of islands off the south coast of Iceland the islanders have a bottle post, which depends mainly on the wind. When the wind blows from the south they put their letters into a well-corked bottle. To insure delivery, a plug of tobacco or a cigar is put inside, and people on the mainland are usually on the lookout for and ready to deliver the letters so dispatched, in return for the inclosed remuneration.

Peculiarities of Holland.

Certain scientists say that Mars is like Holland. Its inhabitants appear to have drained the whole of its surface as a measure of protection against encroaching waters, which threaten an invasion when summer's heat melts the polar ice and snow.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? OVATION TO PALMER.

Grand Greeting to the Indianapolis Nominee on His Return Home.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 5.—An informal but hearty reception was given United States senator John M. Palmer on his return home from Indianapolis. Although the reception was under the auspices of the local sound money democratic club it was non-partisan in its nature. Senator and Mrs. Palmer were met at Illopolis by a committee of citizens of all parties. As the nominee stepped from the train he was showered with roses thrown by the ladies on the platform and the compliment was acknowledged by him. The party were taken in two carriages drawn by four magnificent black horses and followed by about 1,000 citizens marching behind the watch factory band, proceeded to Gen. Palmer's residence, where state senator N. P. Shumway in a few appropriate words welcomed the nominee in the name of his neighbors and congratulated him upon his nomination. Gen. Palmer responded very briefly, saying that he felt that this demonstration in his honor was a purely non-partisan expression of neighborly regard, and not even his nomination at Indianapolis was so pleasing to him. After a hearty three cheers the crowd dispersed.

IMITATING OUR SYSTEM.

England Reforming Her Consular Service and Germany Preparing To Do So.

Washington, Sept. 5.—Thos. Ewing Moore, United States commercial agent at Weimar, has called the attention of the department of state to the fact that the British government has taken steps to supplement its consular service by the appointment of commercial attaches. So far two of these attaches have been appointed, one at Berlin, whose field of duty comprises Germany, the Netherlands and Scandinavia, and one at Madrid for Spain and Portugal. The duties of these officials are to relieve the consuls of the work of introducing British goods into foreign markets, and the beginning of this service has been noted with alarm by England's greatest trade competitor, Germany, where the press has already begun an agitation looking to the reform of the German consular service to meet England's action, involving a special education and preparation of young men for a consular career. It is demanded that the consular officers be men commercially and technically trained or else supplied with specially trained assistants. Mr. Moore attributes this agitation both in Great Britain and Germany for a remodeling of their consular service to a perception of the excellent results attending the development by the United States of a system of special consular reports upon matters calculated to benefit American producers and merchants. He suggests, however, that the improvement of the British and German consular service will involve a corresponding betterment of our own service, if we are to retain and extend our present trade and he quotes concisely from the views expresed in German trade papers touching the valuable services which may be expected from the employment of even a limited number of capable commercial attaches who might visit all parts of the country to which they are sent and promptly inform our merchants of every trade opening.

Running Battle in Cuba.

Benigno Hernandez Acosta, a prisoner of war, was shot at the Cabana fortress yesterday, and Anastasio Sardias Sola will executed to-day.

RIFLE CHAMPIONSHIP

New York Captures the Military Prize at Sea Girt.

ALL CREDIT DUE TO SERGT. DOLAN

Hard Pressed, However, By Private Austin of the Georgia Volunteers—Most Exciting Match Ever Shot on the Jersey Association Grounds.

Sea Girt, N. J., Sept. 5.—By three points only New York won the President's match yesterday, deciding the military championship of the United States, and Sergeant Dolan of the Twelfth New York is the rifleman to whom all the credit is due. He was hard pressed for first place by Private Austin of the First infantry, Georgia volunteers. The match was one of the most exciting that has ever taken place on the grounds of the New Jersey Rifle association. It was not the prize of $50 in cash that induced thirty-two of the best rifle shots in the country to enter, but the honor of winning the championship of the United States was what they were after. The first stage of the match was confined to the 200 and 300-yard ranges. The five having the best scores were alone qualified to enter the second stage, where the shooting was done on the 500 and 600-yard targets. The successful ones were Lieut. F. C. Wilson and Private Austin of Georgia, Lieut. Young of Company A, Engineers' corps of the District of Columbia, and Sergeants Huddleson and Dolan of the Twelfth New York. Wilson made the high score of 92 points out of a possible 100 on the two short ranges. This score, however, did not count in the last stage. On the 500 yard range Wilson, Austin, Dolan and Huddleson each made 47 out of a possible 50, while Young fell short of expectations with 38. This small score did not deter him from trying his luck on the longest range, although it was plain to be seen he had no chance of winning. When the five men went to the butts to shoot the final round excitement was at fever heat. It was expected by the southerners that Wilson would win, as he is considered to be the best all-round shot on the ranges, but for some reason or other he shot poorly and retired with only 39, or a total of 86 in the last stage. With Wilson out of it, the Georgians pinned their faith and their hopes on Private Austin. A three in his score, however, put him behind. Dolan took his time in shooting and could not be rattled. He tried to make a clean score of 50, but was unsuccessful, and the best he could do was 45. This put him three points ahead of Austin, however, and the match was his.

SOCIAL SCIENTISTS.

Papers Read at the Closing Session of the Congress at Saratoga.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 5.—The concluding sessions of the Social Science association were devoted to the discussion of papers relating to social economy. F. B. Sanborn of Concord, Mass., read one prepared by S. N. D. North of Brookline, Mass., on "The New Industrial Education in England and Massachusetts." Mrs. Florence Kelley of Chicago spoke on "The Working Boy," and Joseph Lee of Brookline on "The Necessity for Trade Schools." The concluding paper was by S. D. Dutton of Brookline, Mass., on "Education as Related to Vocation." A debate on the trade school question followed. It was opened by C. W. Birtwell of Boston and continued by Z. R. Brockway of the Elmira State Reformatory and others. It is proposed to have the association meet here in 1897, in connection with the Saratoga summer schools.

Carries No Ultimatum.

No opposition was made to the application for the receivership. The company only recently resumed after having been in the hands of a receiver.

William Townly, driver of the Alert hose carriage, rode over to Trenton on his wheel Thursday, and visited the fire department there. He also went through the state prison, and saw Gilbert Thomson, alias "Tip the Bootblack," who inquired after his Plainfield friends. His appearance was the same as ever.

Preparations for the big national circuit meet of the Cresent Wheelmen on September 26, are steadily progressing, and everything points toward success. Entries are now being received in a steady stream, and the entry list for the meet will probably far surpass that of any previous one. All of the well known professionals will line up at the tape and some great races are sure to result. The regular crowd of circuit chasers will follow the circuit here and then the throng of amateur riders of this state will be attracted by the handsome prizes that have been offered.

There will be several interesting entertainments in the metropolitan district on Labor Day, but the championship bicycle races are to be held at Manhattan Beach on that day promise to break records in point of attendance and in general interest. The meet will be the annual fall State championships of the New York State Division of the League of American Wheelmen, held under the auspices of the South Brooklyn. There will be eight contests in all, including four State championships. In the quarter and two mile championships all the fastest riders in the State will take part, and some splendid sport is assured. The police championship and messenger boys' races are filling rapidly, and these two contests alone are sure to attract a large crowd.

AROUND THE BASES.

"Tee Kay" at last hopes to accomplish the defeat of the Y. M. C. A. team. In anticipation of the same he has secured as strong a representation of "Old Timers" as possible and, with the help of some extraordinary battery, feels assured of victory. Among his collection of "Has Beens" will shine forth the ever winning smile of Georgie Cadmus, one of the best catchers Plainfield ever had. We all remember journeying away out Park avenue, where the Fleming mansion now stands, to see George catch, and then again Will Cadmus will play. Do you remember how he used to toss them in to George? Real sorry they are not to act as battery once more. The youngsters, it seems, have not been caught napping, and so will present as strong a team as possible. Following will be the batting order of the Y. M. C. A. team, and fielding positions only of the "Has Beens:"

Y. M. C. A.	"HAS BEENS" or CRESCENTS.

same. It was so ordered. Another resolution by Mr. Lounsbury was adopted. It provided for the renewed for sixty days of the fire department note for $1,160,10. Mr. MacLaughlin offered a resolution that a warrant for $200 be drawn in favor of F. C. Dunham, on account, for his services in connection with the opening of Watchung avenue. It was so ordered. Mr. Schutt offered a resolution that collector Spencer's action be confirmed in paying the monthly pay roll amounting to $245.48. It was so ordered. The petition of Justice Mattison asking for the privilege of using the borough court room was refused. Mr. Lounsbury in reporting on the matter said that the committee did not think it wise to give anyone but the borough magistrate the privilege of the court room as the latter was the only Justice having charge of the Marshals and if outside Justices were given the previlege it would necessitate the jail being open and anyone could have easy access to prisoners if any were locked in the cells. The report was received and the Council commenced in the committees report. Counsel Charles A. Reed stated that all but four pieces of property along the Watchung avenue extension had been purchased and paid for. The four remaining properties would be secured in a few days. He said that in four weeks time the street ought to be vacated and then the work could progress rapidly.

Mr. Woolston offered a resolution that the street committee be authorized to give permits to move buildings off the proposed extension. It was so ordered. The Council then went into executive session to examine the assessor's map, after which they adjourned.

THEATRICAL.

For an evening of enjoyment see "The White Crook Mammoth Spectacular Company, which will be the attraction at Music Hall next Tuesday evening. Manager Rush has secured the fairest soubrettes, the funniest comedians, the champion dancers and the sweetest singers, forming the strongest combination ever offered the amusement-loving public. Each and every act is richly costumed as one bordering on extravaganza, while the scenery is beautiful in its adaption of each special feature. Novelty upon novelty will follow each other in rapid succession, and the entertainment in its entirety presents many innovations. Among the many artists are such well-known names as: Gertrude Frey, the charming soprano; Anthony and West, original Milanese minstrels; Baisly and Henderson, comedy sketch artists; John H. Kerr, the king of comedy; Truehart and Kennedy, eccentric knockabout comedians; Sam Green, monologue artist; and others as excellent will be seen with this first-class organization, which cannot be out-rivalled in any feature.

The Standard Theatre, in New York decorated with flowers and refurnished, made its debut as a varity house on Saturday night. The star of the evening was Loie Fuller. Her dances were extremely effective, especially the fire dance. The Nichols Sisters, negro songs and dances, were excellent. Other contributors of the evening were Mme. Alma, who balanced herself on a globe; Nina Diva and Zelma Rawlston with budgets of songs; Hodges and Launchmere with imitations and ballads. The sketch in which Fred Hallen and Mollie Fuller appeared was the real novelty in the bill. The house seemed to enjoy it immensely. The new proprietors have spared no paints to make the theatre attractive and it ought to stand an excellent chance of making a success.

Peter Doringer, of Duer street, has recently purchased a Waverly.

Banner Raising Tonight.

The Republican banner will be raised this evening if the weather is at all favorable. The principal speaker will be Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer, who was granted permission by the wardens of the church to speak. All arrangements have been made for a successful opening of the campaign, though the banner will be swung without the name of William McKinley. The heavy wind caused the name to be removed, and there is not now time enough to have the difficulty fixed.

RAIN SPOILED THE DAY.

TORRENTS FELL JUST AS THE BICYCLE PARADE WAS TO START.

An Immense Crowd Was Present and Went Away Disappointed—Decorations of All Kinds Were Predominant.

Plainfield now knows how to break a drought. All that is necessary is to have a parade or a banner raising; at least, so circumstances would suggest, For the last three years almost any thing in the line of a parade has been either prevented or brought to an untimely end by a general downpour.

Last Saturday, the climax was reached when the Daylight Bicycle Carnival had to be postponed on account of a drenching rain that soaked paraders and spectators alike for twenty minutes before the time set for the parade to start. The first drops sent the unattached riders hurrying for shelter. Some of the clubs also scattered but the Crescent Wheelmen, of this city, and Vim Bicycle Club, of Newark, were the heroes of the occassion and remained fast at their post of duty while the fast increasing rain played havoc with their natty uniforms, until it was announced that the parade had been postponed. Then they, too, departed and left the trimuphant rain in sole possession.

It was really too bad that all the efforts expended to make the Carnival a success, not only by the general committee, but by all the participants, should come to naught. Of course, the Carnival was only postponed, but it will necessitate lots more trouble to prepare for it again.

It was wonderful the way the people came from all the surrounding country. In the morning, the coasting contest was held on Watchung avenue hill and about thirty cyclists participated. Each one made several attempts, however. The strong wind from the southeast aided the coasters and the contest depended more on the luck of the contestant in receiving a strong wind than on the easy running qualities of his wheel. The latter, however, had something to do with it. As was told in Saturday's Press, the contest was finally won by Olaf Sangstad, of this city. He rode a Spalding and coasted 3,326 feet, or nearly two-thirds of a mile. He almost reached Franklin Place, F. Richard Stevens, of Park avenue, was second, about thirty feet behind. He rode a Cleveland Swell Special. Until the last of the contest, it was thought that Walter Long, of Park avenue, was going to win. He finished three rods, however, about five feet behind Steven's mark. He rode a Union. Baron Ernest T. Hand, of Westfield, was fourth and G. F. Boyce, of Passiac, fifth.

Among the other local riders that entered the contest were H. J. Martin, Jr., Laurens H. VanBuren, A. D. Thompson, Jr., Roy Phillips, S. C. Crane, F. L. C. Martin, and Albert Price Simmonds. N. R. Titsworth acted as referee, J. Hervey Doane as starter and J. Casper Kirker as clerk of the cource. Titsworth's aides at the finish were Frank Rogers, F. J. Pope and C. B. Morse. Quite a number of spectators witnessed the contest.

All the morning the visitors arrived by train, awheel or in carriages, wagons and all sorts of turn outs. At the North avenue station, S. P. T. Wilbur's genial smile welcomed the strangers to Plainfield and he directed all to the coasting contest or bicycle headquarters as they cared to go. Two hours before the time set for the parade to begin, 3:30 o'clock, there was a steady procession going toward the corner of Park avenue and Eighth street, in which decorated wheels and fancy costumes were very much in evidence. At three o'clock the Independent Fife and Drum Corps and the Plainfield Cornet Band marched up Park avenue and took possession of their stages on West Eight street. Ten minutes after that the rain began to fall. By that time only two clubs had taken their regular positions, the rest were either parading around the streets or were on their way to the rendezvous. The Crescent Wheelmen were there, all in long white duck pants, the regular blue uniformed coats and white caps, and they made an excellent showing. The Vim Bicycle Club showed up well, although all their number did arrive before the rain began. The handsome uniform sweaters looked very neat. Two little girls, dressed in the uniform of the club, were the mascots, and there was also in line a triplet, and two tandems. A uniformed bugle corps headed the club and furnished music for them.

Among the other clubs present were the "Famous Six" of Somerville, with their escorts, the Alis football team, in football suits, red sweaters, and

STOLE COSTLY JEWELS.

A PLAINFIELD COLORED COUPLE LOOT AN EAST ORANGE HOUSE.

The Husband Found at His Father's House in This City—Missing Money Found on His Person—Taken To Orange.

Although they have been married only about six months, the wedded life of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Phillips, colored, has been an exciting one, and Saturday night they managed to get implicated in a burglary at Orange that is likely to prove rather disastrous for them.

Perhaps the readers of The Daily Press will remember the little adventure Phillips had the night of his marriage, how he was arrested for stealing a ten dollar bill from a woman at the City Hotel and how it took the biggest kind of hustling on the part of his friends to get him out of jail in time for the ceremony.

Last Saturday night, the home of Mr. Robinson, a wealthy resident of Orange, was robbed of some jewelry valued at several hundred dollars. Mrs. Phillips was employed in the household as a servant and the evidence pointed very strongly at her and her husband. She was arrested Sunday, but he skipped early that morning and disappeared.

The Orange police authorities discovered his disappearance Sunday night and early yesterday morning telephoned to Plainfield, knowing this to be his former home. Sergeant Kiely received the message and decided to make a call at the home of Phillips' father, on Central avenue, in the rear of Reform Hall. Accompanied by Patrolmen Vanderweg and Flannagan, the Sergeant gained entrance on some pretext and there found the missing man. A hasty search did not reveal any of the stolen property, but when Phillips was carefully searched at the lockup eight gold rings and one silver one, valued from $10 to $75 each, were found in his possession which corresponded with those described in the telephone dispatch.

Phillips submitted quietly to arrest and the subsequent search. He further admitted having pawned some of the most valuable of the stolen articles, and these, it is believed, can be recovered.

Yesterday a detective came up from Orange and took the prisoner back with him, where both Phillips and his wife are now locked up awaiting the action of the Grand Jury.

STRUCK BY A BLUE LINER

A DUNELLEN MAN FOUND DEAD ON THE TRACKS.

It is Supposed That Carl Fred Enander Was Struck by a Royal Blue Line and Was Not Found For Several Hours.

Carl Fred Enander, aged 55 years and three months, met a tragic death at Dunellen some time during Sunday night. His mangled remains were found literally cut to pieces about one hundred yards east of the station, and the only means of identication were portions of his clothing, a letter and a grey tuft of hair which still remained on the chin. The body was disemboweled, and the face was entirely torn away.

The crew on John McCall's train which leaves Dunellen soon after 5 o'clock were drilling their cars preparatory to starting out on their early morning run when the lifeless body was found lying between the two tracks. Particles of flesh and bone were strewn along the track for a considerable distance, and it was necessary to place them in a small box for removal.

Just how the accident occurred is not yet, and probably never will be, fully known. Mr. Enander left his home on First street early in the evening to call on a friend in the Todd house, south of the station. He left there about 9:45 o'clock on the way home and the supposition is that he did not notice the approach of the eastbound Washington Blue Line flyer which arrives in this city at 9:56, and being caught up by the cowcatcher was hurled in the air and falling some distance ahead was ground to pieces on the rails. The engineer could not have seen the man approach for no warning signal was sounded and the train sped on its way.

Decedent leaves a widow and five children, three sons and two daughters. One of the sons, E. H. Enander, is in the plumbing business on Park avenue, this city. He was of Swedish parentage and located at Dunellen some twenty years ago. He was known as a man of strict business principles, and he had many friends.

Undertaker Walter G. Runyon took charge of the remains, and they will be buried from the house tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

AN OLD FRIEND DEAD.

Chauncey Roll, Known by Many Plainfielders, Passes Away.

Chancellor Roll, an old and respected resident of this city, died at the home of his sister, Mrs. G. W. Felch, at Madison, N. J., on Saturday, aged seventy-six years. He was born near here in 1820 and the greater part of his life had been spent in this vicinity. Decedent was peculiar in some ways but he was good natured and talkative to all. He was familiarly known on the street as "Uncle Chauncey," and was a regular attendant of the Friends meeting on Watchung avenue, where he could be seen nearly every first day, occupying the same seat. For many years past he had lived a retired life, he and his sister having amassed enough to live on comfortably for the balance of their days.

At the time of his death he was part owner in two valuable pieces of real estate on Watchung avenue, between Front and Second streets, and he had other real estate interests near Madison. He was unmarried, and was an uncle of Mrs. W. L. Force and Mrs. J. H. Force. The funeral took place from the home of his sister at Madison, yesterday.

Fell and Cut His Head.

John Ryback, of Philadelphia, sustained injuries Sunday morning about 2 o'clock which detains him at the hospital. He attempted to catch the 2:14 train to New York and missed it. He then walked down the stone steps at the Watchung avenue bridge, and in doing so he made a misstep and fell quite a distance to the sidewalk. Patrolman Vanderweg learned of the affair and secured a cab which conveyed the injured man to the hospital. An examination showed that Ryback had a deep cut in the forehead and several bruises about the body. He is now improving nicely.

THEY MAKE NO APOLOGY.

INSTEAD BOROUGH OFFICIALS WILL BRING SUIT AGAINST MR. SERRELL.

He Wrote What Seemed to be an Impertinent Letter and Now he Gets a Curt Reply and Will Defend a Suit.

The North Plainfield Board of Health dealt summarily last night with the case of L. W. Serrell, a member of the city Board of Health, who, it is charged, maintains a nuisance against public health by running a sewer from one of his houses on Plainfield avenue to Green brook.

Two weeks ago, it will be remembered, Inspectors Pangborn and Weaver, of both borough and city, made a joint investigation and declared, by the aid of that famous colored fluid of Inspector Pangborn, that Mr. Serrell was maintaining a nuisance in violation of the ordinances of this city, which, as a member of the Board of Health, he is sworn to enforce. The Press published the news in the case and Mr. Serrell waxed wroth and wrote a bitter reply in which he belittled the efforts of the North Plainfield officials in their work of suppressing the pollution of Green brook and intimated that it was a conspiracy on the part of his enemies to put him in an embarrassing position before the public.

It seems that at the same time he wrote the letter for publication he also penned a private epistle to the North Plainfield officials insisting that they had no right to take any such proceedings as they had, and virtually demanded that they make an apology to him. This letter was read at the meeting of the Board last night. It caused quite a sensation and on first thought it was suggested that a letter be written and published explaining the whole subject. Further consideration, however, on the part of the members brought about the conclusion that the letter of Mr. Serrell's was highly impertinent. The secretary was authorized to simply acknowledge the receipt of it, without comment of any kind, and this morning the answer was mailed to him. Then the matter of investigation made by the inspectors was taken up and on the evidence all ready secured in the case, Borough Counsel Reed was instructed to immediately commence suit against Mr. Serrell under the law of 1893 relative to the pollution of public streams. It provides that for a conviction a fine of $1,000 or two years imprisonment, or both. The suit will probably be brought in Circuit court. The following sections from the ordiances of the Plainfield Board of Health, of which Mr. Serrell is a member, were quoted to show that he had expressly violated the ordinances, and admitted by himself in his published letter:

"No person shall throw, cast, place or deposit or allow to flow or run into any stream, cistern or well any dead animal, putrid meat, garbage, offal, manure, compost or any foul or offensive substance whatever."

"The casting, throwing, draining or discharging, or causing to be cast, thrown, drained or discharged into any public street, highway gutter, alley or other public place or private grounds, within said city, any slops, kitchen water, laundry water, sewage, waste water, swill or filth, shall be deemed and hereby declared to be a nuisance."

BULLETS WHIZZED BY.

Charles Routhenhousen Narrowly Escaped Having His Sight Ruined.

Charles Routhenhousen, the candy maker, of Westervelt avenue, nearly lost an eye, yesterday afternoon. He was sitting on his front stoop, entertaining his children when a charge of buck shot whizzed past his head and embedded itself in the weather boards nearby. Two indiscreet youths had been in the woods hunting for squirrels during the afternoon, and meeting with no success, stopped near his house and sent a valley of shot at a lot of green chestnut burs on a tree near by. The young gunners shot wide of their mark, and came within an ace of sending Mr. Routhenhousen into the hereafter. The latter immediately walked over and notified the borough marshals, but as he is not absolutely positive of identifying the shooters, no firrests have as yet been made.

NO SUCH WORD AS FAIL.

ANOTHER ATTEMPT TO BE MADE FOR A BICYCLE PARADE.

The General Committee Met This Morning and Decided to Have the Carnival Saturday Afternoon of This Week.

Next Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock is the time set when the Daylight Bicycle Carnival, which was postponed from last Saturday on account of rain, is to be held. All the arrangements for the parade, including the line of march, will be the same and there is no doubt but that the affair will be as successful as it started to be until the rain fell or even more so. Last Saturday every station along the line was crowded with people coming to take part in or watch the bicycle parade and, should the weather be fine next Saturday, the crowd will be greater.

The same list of valuable prizes will be offered and every effort will made to make the postponed affair even better than originally planned. After seeing the extensive decorations last Saturday quite a number signified their intention of also competing for the prizes. The special prizes for Jersey clubs only, besides those open to all, will give the smaller clubs from the State, whether uniformed or not, a good chance to carry away a trophy of the carnival.

The individual prizes will make plenty of exciting competition, as they are valuable and well worth trying for. A meeting of the general committee will be held tonight to complete the arrangements.

NORTH PLAINFIELD INSTRUCTORS.

Will it Rain Again on Thursday?

The Republican Executive Committee have decided upon Thursday evening of this week for the unfurling of the McKinley and Hobart banner. Should the night prove stormy, then the banner will be unfurled at any rate, and the political meeting will be held either in the Republican Association rooms or the rink.

VETS WENT TO DEFEAT

BUT IN DOING THIS THEY PROVIDED SOME GOOD BASEBALL.

A Distinguished Crowd Present to Greet the Old Timers as They Whisked About the Diamond—Detailed Score.

The anxiously-waited for baseball game between the old Crescents and the Y. M. C. A. teams came off yesterday morning and the fierce contest started promptly at 10 o'clock before a large and august assemblage of people, including the fair sex, who were very much in evidence. Each team was well fortified and a mighty struggle was the result.

Captain George Cornwell together with his old veterans arrived at the grounds somewhere near 8 o'clock, it is said, and from that time until 10 o'clock they practiced. Those who saw them say that professionals never played better. Tee Kay, who held down first base, put lots of ginger into his team, and they really acted like colts. He has a wonderful habit of surprising the public and where he brought forth his phenomenal battery, the ground fairly gave way. Even the Y. M. C. A. boys were timid and they could be seen standing in groups, talking in an undertone about the contest. When City Clerk MacMurray appeared in the field as umpire the youngsters were subjected to another fright, for it was understood that "Chappy" Lyman had been paid to stay away, while the genial recorder of city affairs had been offered inducements to favor the veterans.

Below will be found the individual record of each player and the score in full:

SUMMARY.

Earned runs, Y. M. C. A., 3; Veterans, 0. Two-base hits, Dennis, W. MacLaughlin, Hoffman, Keller. Stolen bases, Y. M. C. A., 3; Veterans, 2. Double plays, Hoffman to W. MacLaughlin. Base on balls, Y. M. C. A., 1; Veterans, 5. Bases on hit by pitched balls, Townley, Cornwell. Struck out, by W. MacLoughlin, 8; by J. MacLaughlin, 1; by McGee, 5. Passed balls, Dennis, 4; Paasch, 3. Left on bases, Y. M. C. A., 5; Veterans, 9. Time of game, two hours. Umpire, J. T. MacMurray.

Well, the game started with the Y. M. C. A. team at the bat, and when the old-timers took their positions everyone looked as though the earth and all its contents was their personal property. The first inning netted three runs for the youngsters and they all felt proud. The other half of the inning resulted in two runs for the veterans. This gave them an air of self-importance and they would hardly recognize their most intimate friends. They yelled themselves hoarse in their attempt to rattle the youngsters. During the balance of the game they only got four runs, making a total of six. The Y. M. C. A. team rolled up a score of ten runs, and the veterans could not overcome the lead though at times it looked dubious. The latter team had one of the greatest quartette of infielders to be found anywhere. Just think of such players as Tee Kay, George Cadmus, George Cornwell and Hervey Doane. Why they looked as natural and played as lively as they did years ago when they were the reigning favorites. In the field was William Cadmus, "Chick" Demarest and Walz, all distinguished players of "Ye Olden Time." "Chick" gave the cranks a sample of his best work yesterday and out of three chances he accepted them all. The other two had very little to do, but their playing was superb. The battery, McGee and Paasch, hired for the occasion put up a good article of ball, but not quite good enough to win. One of the great features was the two-bagger by Tee Kay, and how the crowd cheered him. Several brilliant plays were made during the contest, which set the cranks wild with delight. George Cadmus caught a hot liner in his left hand, which was the best play in the game. Another fine play was made by Geo. Hoffman at shortstop. He ran a long distance and caught a very difficult fly. The Y. M. C. A. boys played a great game. W. MacLaughlin, who pitched five innings, held the old-timers down in good shape. The rest of the game was pitched by J. MacLaughlin. Chauncey Burt played right field for one inning while the

SILVER PARTY NOTIFICATION TO-NIGHT

Left for Nebraska Immediately at the Conclusion of His Speech at the Labor Day Picnic in Chicago Last Night.

Chicago, Sept. 8.—The celebration of Labor Day by Chicago's workingmen centered mainly in the meeting addressed by William J. Bryan at Sharpshooter's park, a wooded pleasure ground situated at an inconvenient distance from the city. The day was all that could be desired in point of weather. Mr. Bryan spoke from a permanent platform with a shell-shaped canopy, and long before the meeting began it was crowded with prominent members of labor unions, a number of them accompanied by their families. The crowd began to gather about noon, and those who came early sought positions close to the front of the stand. Many men and boys climbed trees overlooking the platform and were able to see and hear the better from their exalted positions. Occassionally the limb of a tree broke and added to the fun and excitement of the occasion. Other men climbed to the roof of the stand and lying flat on their stomachs peered over the edge on those below like so many human squirrels. The crowd was not as great as had been expected by the promoters of the event. Just before Mr. Byran entered the park about 6,000 people were clustered around the central point of interest, but after the appearance of the nominee three or four thousand more entered the grounds and waited to catch a glimpse of the speaker or stood on the outskirts of the audience endeavoring to hear what he said. The charge of 25 cents for admission probably served to decrease the attendance. This has always been the custom at the Labor Day celebrations in Sharpshooters' park, but Mr. Bryan did not know of it or he would have declined to speak unless with the assurance that no entrance free would be charged. Immediately after he had concluded Mr. Bryan resumed his journey west. He will reach Lincoln, Neb., this afternoon and will be notified of his nomination by the silver party in the evening.

WINE AT COMMUNION.

The Raines Law Not Intended to Effect Any Church Service.

Albany, Sept. 8.—Deputy State Excise Commissioner Clement has just answered an interesting communication from the district attorney of one of the counties of the state. The district attorney had written to the department that certain complaints had been made to him as the prosecuting officer of the county that all of the churches of a certain city in the county had been using fermented wine at communion service, as the complainants allege, contrary to the provisions of the Raines law. They had asked the district attorney therefor to bring the matter before the grand jury, but he wanted light on the subject from the state excise department. His own opinion was that a church might be considered in the nature of a club, and was, therefore, exempt from the license provisions of the law. In his reply to the inquiry, Deputy Commissioner Clement points out the absurdity of the claims raised against the churches in question, and holds that the legislature had no intention of making the law effective as to communion services in churches.

CRASHED INTO THE DOCK.

Three People Seriously Injured and a Ferryboat Damaged at Jersey City.

New York, Sept. 8.—Last evening the ferryboat John G. McCullough of the Erie Railway line, while entering her slip on the Jersey City side, became unmanageable and crashed into the dock with great violence. As it was a holiday, the passengers were few in number, which was a fortunate circumstance. The boat broke down the dock bridge and had her guard rails shattered. Nicholas Wiss of Jersey City had his legs smashed; Elsie Hoffman, a child, of Paterson, was badly injured, and an unknown man was badly hurt about the head. All three were taken out of the debris in an unconscious condition and removed to hospitals. It is thought that Wiss and the Hoffman girl will recover.

Not a Candidate for Governor.

Troy, N. Y., Sept. 8.—In an interview published here county judge Lewis Griffith declares emphatically that he has not been and will not be a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor. Judge Griffith says that after January 1 he will devote himself entirely to his legal practice. The judge says he has not seen Senator Murphy for a year and has not had communication with him either directly or indirectly relative to the nomination.

Farm House and Outbuildings Burned.

Towanda, Pa., Sept. 8.—The house, barn and outbuildings on the Patrick farm, in Wysox, the property of John C. Piollett, were burned last evening. The loss, which will amount to $10,000, is partically covered by insurance.

She Died for Love.

Sharon, Pa., Sept. 8.—Maggie Reardon, aged 21 years, shot herself in the street yesterday, dying instantly. She had quarrelled with her lover, Mike Lee.

DUE ONLY TO THEIR CONDITION.

Sir Matthew Ridley Tells Why the Irish Prisoners Were Released.

London, Sept. 8.—The adverse comments by leading unionists, including the Marquis of Londonderry, on the action of the government in releasing Daly, Gallagher and other Irishmen, who were sentenced to life imprisonment for treason-felony, have called forth a letter from Sir Matthew White Ridley, the home secretary, in which he declares that the release of the prisoners was due solely to the medical reports submitted to him regarding their condition.

Attacked by the Thunderer.

London, Sept. 8.—The Times to-day attacks the letter of the home secretary, and demands that he publish the medical reports on which he says the release of the prisoners was based. The paper declares that even if the men were mentally affected they ought to have been detained as criminal lunatics.

Dr. Gallagher Taken to an Asylum.

New York, Sept. 8.—Dr. Thomas Gallagher, the Irish-American, who arrived in this city on Friday last from England, was transferred last night from the Hotel Savoy to the sanitarium at Amityville, L. I., known as "The Long Island Home."

Rich Men Violate Fish Law.

Montreal, Sept. 8.—The warden of the Provincial Fish and Game club yesterday caught four wealthy residents of New York on a train from St. Faustin to Montreal with 400 pounds of fish taken in Lake Bullrush, St. Faustin. They had no fishing license, and the warden took one of them, Capt. Hugh R. Carden of New York, into custody. He furnished security and was released pending an inquiry. The captain then left for New York. He is reputed to be a millionaire and a member of a number of New York swell clubs.

Too Expensive To Operate.

Rockville, Conn., Sept. 8.—Officers of the Rockville and Ellington Street Railway company announce that they will not build an electric railroad from Rockville to Talcottville through Vernon Centre, as the route is not feasible and is too costly to operate. The company will build only over the Burke Hill route. A local company will now be organized to build through Vernon Centre. It is claimed that $100,000 of local capital is already pledged.

Smithsonian Institute Fifty Years Old.

Washington, Sept. 8.—Yesterday was the fiftieth anniversary of the Smithsonian institute and the first time in fifty years that there has been no annual meeting of the board of regents. The omission was due to the absence from the United States of Secretary Langley and the death Sunday evening of Dr. George Brown Goode, the acting executive officer of this greatest of scientific establishments in the United States.

Bicycle Hill-Climbing Contest.

Orange, N. J., Sept. 8.—The bicycle hill-climbing contest under the auspices of the Manhattan Athletic club of New York city, which took place yesterday on Eagle Rock hill, was won by A. Michael of the Iroquois wheelmen, time, 4 minutes, 53 seconds. Thomas Dunn of the Yonkers Bicycle club, second, time, 5 minutes, 8 seconds, and Warren Lyon of Montclair, third, in 5 minutes, 14 seconds. There were twenty starters.

World's Standing-Jump Record Broken.

Hartford, Sept. 8.—In the Knights of Columbus field day events at Charter Oak park yesterday, P. J. Griffin of this city jumped 12 feet in a standing back jump, beating the world's record of 11 feet 2 inches. He also jumped 11 feet 2 inches in three standing jumps. John C. Long of this city scored seventeen points in the world's all-around heavy professional events and won the gold medal.

Accidentally Shot.

Newburgh, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Sterling M. Thorpe was accidently shot in the abdomen yesterday afternoon by Robert Rainy, both aged about 18 years. It is not known how serious Thorpe's wound is. Rainy was arrested and was held in $500 bail to appear for examination on next Monday.

British Imports and Exports.

London, Sept. 8.—The board of trade returns for August show that imports decreased £2,110,000 and exports decreased £180,000 during the month, as compared with the corresponding month of 1895.

TOO LENIENT.

Officers Constituting a Recent Court-Martial in Texas Reprimanded.

Washington, Sept. 8.—Gen. Bliss, commanding the department of Texas, in special orders just received at the war department, severely reprimands the officers constituting the court-martial which recently tried a private at Fort Bliss and found him guilty of lying to his commanding officer, furnishing money to a soldier whom he knew was about to desert by buying certain articles of clothing from him, and failing to report to the proper authority the intended desertion of a fellow soldier of which he was aware, in violation of the articles of war. He was sentenced to forfeit $15 of his pay, the court adding that it was "thus lenient on account of the previous good character and short service of the accused." Gen. Bliss endorsed the case as approved, in order that the culprit might not escape all punishment, but he strongly characterized the sentence as inadequate and called attention to the fact that the duty of the court was to proportion the punishment to the offense, and then, if it saw fit, to make a recommendation for clemency for the reasons stated.

Tinted Sandwiches.

Although tea tables no longer decorate the drawing-room when not in use tables are daintier than ever. Being made of light wood or bamboo they are readily lifted into the presence of the hostess by the parlor-maid or the butler when required in the drawing-room. Now that every one has collected everything in silver to thus dispense hospitality, they are now further tempted to consign their silver appointments to the dining-room and to begin a collection of Dresden china. Everything for this purpose is now made in this ware and they are most beautiful and tempting, from the large tray, hot-water kettle, caddie, strainer and candlesticks, to the tea-pot, sugar-bowl, cream-pitcher, cups, saucers and small dishes for sandwiches, bonbons, almonds, etc. Speaking of sandwiches reminds me that they are in the line of progression as well, for they are now made of colored bread, pink, green, violet, etc., to harmonize with their surroundings, cut in crescent shape and otherwise, and spread with various delicious fillings.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Not Negotiable.

Rhymester—True, sir, I have not much ready money, but I own $30,000 worth of personal property.

Her Father—In what shape is this property?

Rhymester—In manuscript poems.—Bay City Chat.

Jubilees.

Jubilee, according to the Jewish definition, denotes every 50th year, being that following the revolution of seven weeks of years, at which time all the slaves were made free, and all lands reverted to their ancient owners. The jubilees were not observed after the Babylonish captivity.

"Why is it?" "O, simply because Hood's Sarsaparilla has more real curative merit than any medicine I ever sold."

All that glitters isn't gold, as Reuben found when he examined his gold brick. When one is tempted to stray away from Collier's they find themselves in the same predicament as Rueben. When you want reliable, fine goods in the jewelry line you will find the same standard always as Collier has been selling you for 29 years. Every new design in jewelry, and set and unset jewels of the purest water will be sold at a low margin.

M'KINLEY VERY BUSY

Endeavoring To Catch Up with Accumulated Correspondence.

TWO WEEKS BEHIND IN THE WORK.

Sept. 11 the Date Fixed for the Visit of Gov. Bushnell and Staff—Thomas B. Reed To Be Asked To Speak at Canton.

Canton, O., Sept. 8.—Maj. McKinley was working quietly at home this morning. He is trying to catch up with his correspondence, but finds it a matter of grave difficulty, as he is two weeks behind with some of it, owing to the great demand made on his time by callers. Word has been received fixing September 11 as the date for the call of Gov. Bushnell and staff on Major McKinley. Gov. Bushnell has not yet called on the nominee and the event is looked forward to with some interest by Ohio politicians. Following the big republican meeting, which is advertised here for the 18th inst., will probably be two other large meetings, at one of which it is proposed to ask Hon. Thomas B. Reed of Maine to speak.

Delegations Expected.

Several delegations asked for dates in this morning's mail. Among those expecting to come to Canton soon is another large delegation of women from Cleveland. Major McKinley had a number of callers last evening. Among them were J. G. Johnson of Montana, Representative S. B. Harris of Ohio, Col. Fisher of Denver, Wilbur F. Wakeman of New York, Col. R. B. Brown of Zanesville and Hon. J. M. Ickes of Newark, Ohio. The Republican club of Oil City, Pa., has telegraphed that they will be here to call on Major McKinley Sept. 24. A number of Ohio editors arrived last night to attend the meeting of the State Editorial association. Major McKinley will address the editors this afternoon.

PLOT TO BREAK JAIL.

A Revolver and Saws Found in the Cells of the Murderers of a Girl.

Cincinnati, Sept. 8.—A negro prisoner named Walker was searched Sunday night by a turnkey in the Covington jail and a thirty-eight calibre revolver was found in his pocket. Walker occupied a cell adjoining the ones in which Jackson and Walling, the Pearl Bryan murderers, are confined. The jailor suspected a plot to break jail and yesterday ordered the cells searched. In Walling's cell half a dozen saws were found. Both Jackson and Walling protest their innocence, but the jail officials think the plot was to have been carried out early some morning, when only two men would be on guard. A search of Jackson's cell to-day disclosed two fine steel saws hidden between the sole and linipg of an extra pair of tan shoes which belonged to the prisoner. The revolver found in Walker's pocket was positively identified as one owned by Walling before his arrest. A rigid investigation will be made as to how it got into Walker's possession.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS REVOLT.

Rebels, 1,000 Strong, Enter a Capital and Take the Governor Prisoner.

Madrid, Sept. 8.—A dispatch to the Imparcial from Hong Kong says that 1,000 rebels entered the town of San Isidro, capital of the province of Nueva Ecija, island of Luzon, the principal island of the Philippine group, and took prisoners the governor, his secretary, and a priest. The rebels were led by Santollano, a half-breed. The election for members of the councils-general of Madrid and the other provinces, which were held Sunday, resulted in most cases in the success of the government candidates. In Barcelona the election resulted in a riot, during which the voting urns were smashed. Knives and revolvers were used by the rioters, and three persons were seriously wounded.

Camden's New Armory.

Camden, N. J., Sept. 8.—Gov. Griggs yesterday afternoon laid the corner stone of the new Sixth regiment armory in this city. He was accompanied by his staff and several department officers. The governor laid the stone with an engraved silver trowel. His address was brief. He referred to the necessity and value of the national guard and paid a compliment to the Sixth regiment. The armory will be ready for occupancy by May 1 next. The state appropriated $148,000 for the building, and $15,000 additional will be required to furnish it.

A Child Convict.

Jackson, Miss., Sept. 7.—The youngest and smallest convict ever received at Jackson is Hattie Reicord, a Holly Springs negress, 9 years of age, who arrived at the penitentiary last night. She was nursing for her sister and had charge of two babies. The elder, 2 years old, kept crying, when Hattie picked up an axe and split its head open. She is utterly indifferent and does not seem to appreciate her situation.

Mrs. Maybrick Critically Ill.

London, Sept. 8. — Mrs. Florence Maybrick, who is confined in Woking prison under a sentence of life imprisonment for poisoning her husband, James Maybrick, is critically ill and the chances are decidedly against her recovery.

Connecticut Gold Democrats.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 8.—A meeting of the executive committee of the gold democrats of the state has been called for to-morrow afternoon in this city. The principal business, it is said, will be to select an electoral ticket of nine.

R. F. HARRIOTT DEAD.

Stricken With Paralysis and Unable to Rally From the Shock.

Randolph F. Harriott, an old and respected resident of this city, died at his home on Watchung avenne at 11:45 o'clock yesterday morning, aged sixty-seven years. He had been an invalid from paralysis for the past six years, but his condition was not considered dangerous until about eight hours previous to his death. He passed away surrounded by kind and loving members of the family. The funeral will take place from the house on Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman will officiate, and interment will be made in the family plot in Hillside cemetery.

Decedent was born in New York on May 11th, 1829, and came to Plainfield over forty years ago. His father bought the property known as the Johnston place on East Front street, where the family remained for some years, and then returned to New York. Later they returned to Plainfield and took up their residence on East Front street, on the land through which Sandford avenue now runs.

For the past ten years the decedent has lived a retired life, but for many years previous to that he was in the real-estate business in New York City, where he had large real estate interests. Besides the widow, three daughters and one son survive him.

Poor Financial Management.

Rev. P. S. Gibson, president of the New York and New Jersey Pilot, a newspaper, went to New York yesterday to look after his interests in the publication. Rev. Mr. Taylor, editor-in-chief, it is said, did not conduct the affairs of the periodical on a sound financial basis, and it was found necessary to suspend publication for a time, at least. Rev. J. H. Carter, of Newark, has been appointed the new editor, and it is thought within a week or so The Pilot will again be issued.

Shooting at a Wooden Eagle.

The annual king shoot of the Independent Gun Club was held on the club grounds yesterday. The object of the shoot was to try the skill of the members. A wooden eagle was mounted on a high pole and the shooters blazed away at it for money prizes. The prizes were awarded to G. Reubert, W. Barry and C. W. Krausse. The latter was crowned king and received a gold medal. Mrs. Rummell won the gold medal for target shooting.

Increased the Borough Coffers.

Archie Davis and George Sacer, of the borough, and George Menire, of Fanwood, were arested in the borough by Marshal Hansen, between Saturday and Monday, for being drunk and disorderly. The three were arraigned before Justice Crosley yesterday. Davis was fined $10, and the other two $5 each, which sums were paid.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Winifred Sprague, daughter of Mrs. G. A. Sprague, of Putnam avenue, to Clarence L. Murphy, one of Plainfield's well known successful young lawyers.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation, can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

THEATRICAL.

The attraction at Music Hall for tonight will be Ed. F. Rush's mammoth spectacular production of the "White Crook," with its wealth of picturesque and fascinating stage pictures which never fails to excite enthusiasm, its bevy of pretty girls, catchy music and bright costumes. The staging of the piece is made a strong feature and the several spectacular stage pictures which largely contribute to making the "White Crook" an effective and brilliant performance. Mr. Rush has surrounded himself by a staff of merry makers and laughter is continuous throughout the performance. The show is full of musical and terpsichorean specialties, in the names of such well known artists as Gertrude Frey, the charming soprano; Anthony and West, the original milinese minstrels; Baisly and Henderson, comedy sketch artists; John H. Kerr, the king of melody; Truehart and Kennedy, eccentric knockabout comedians; Sam Green, monologue artist are seen and heard. Don't fail to see the "White Crooks" at the Island of Hindoo Hoodoo, for a good big laugh.

Sent it to His Mother in Germany

Mr. Jacob Esbensen, who is in the employ of the Chicago Lumber Co., at DesMoines, Iowa, says: "I have just sent some medicine back to my mother in the old country, that I know from personal use to be the best medicine in the world for rheumatism, having used it in my family for several years. It is called Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It always does the work." 50 cent, bottles for sale by T. S. Armstrong druggist.

In a recent letter to the manufacturers Mr. W. F. Benjamin, editor of the Spectator, Rushford, N. Y., says: "It may be a pleasure to you to know the high esteem in which Chamberlain's medicines are held by the people of your own state, where they must be best known. An aunt of mine, who resides at Dexter, Iowa, was about to visit me a few years since, and before leaving home wrote me, asking if they were sold here, stating if they were not she would bring a quantity with her, as she did not like to be without them." The medicines referred to are Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds and croup; Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, pains in the side and chest, and Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for bowel complaints. These medicines have been in constant use in Iowa for almost a quarter of a century. The people have learned that they are articles of great worth and merit, and unequaled by any other. They are for sale here by T. S. Armstrong druggist.

—Street Commissioner Emmons, of the borough, is entitled to the thanks of the public for abolishing that "stub your toe" curbing and crosswalk on the corner of Somerset street and Park place. It's a grand improvement, Mr. Emmons.

—The rain had a deteriorating effect upon the bicycle dealers and livery stable keepers hereabouts on Sunday. Had the weather been clear there probably would not have been enough carriages and wheels to supply the demand. As it was there was little or no business in either line.

—Probably the largest number of wheels ever seen at the North Avenue station at any one time was on Saturday. All the approaches and passageways were blocked, and in fact it was with much difficulty that foot passengers could get into the waiting rooms at all. Only a limited number of wheels were allowed in each car and many women were drenched to the skin waiting for an opportunity to put their bicycles aboard.

RAIN SPOILED THE DAY.

campaign hats and the Plainfield Business College Club. The Y. M. C. A. cyclers were just starting when the rain came and quite a number of out of town clubs just reached this city as the rain did and rushed for shelter at once.

There were decorated wheels innumerable, "Wandering Willies" and "New Women" were there in profusion, while Japanese, Chinese, "LiHung Chang's," Germans, dudes, and rustics wheeled from every direction. Some of the fancy costumes were very handsome, especially those of the ladies and young girls. There was one tandem from Rahway that was literally covered with flowers. The floats were very good but the threatening rain kept many away. Olaf Saugstad had a platform arranged over the top of his Punnett Companion and two little children, in fancy costumes, grouped upon it. It was handsomely decorated. The Central Mills had an appropriately decorated wheel. L. W. Randolph's business float was a handsome Venetian bower arranged on a wheel riden by Percy V. Wheeler, dressed as a knight in court costume. "Manager" William Sweeney and Herbert Rockfellow, dressed in large white duck pants, coats of the same material and tall silk hats, made a great hit on the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Co's Punnett Companion.

The marshals were early on the scene and looked very finein white duck knickerbockers, dark coats, and white caps and their handsome red and gold sashes. Grand Marshal Martin made quite a noticeable figure with his gold fringed white sash, and costume similar to the marshals. His headquarters were at the Revere House and there the chief interest centred.

When the time for starting had arrived and the rain was falling heavily, Chairman J. F. MacDonald called a meeting of the general committee and it was decided to postpone the parade. Another meeting of the committee will be held at once to determine the date.

The hearts of the older baseball cranks were made glad yesterday to see "Buck" Bass, of baseball fame, appear on the diamond and enjoy a short practice with the Veterans. "Buck" used to play first base for the old Athletic Club team, and was a great favorite.

BEFORE THE CADI.

Punishment Meted Out to Offenders of Peace and Morals.

While everybody were taking a vacation yesterday, City Judge DeMeza was kept busy dispensing justice among the crowd of offenders that the police run in on Saturday afternoon and evening.

Louis Moon, Augustus Vaugalin and William Lane, all colored, were arraigned for scrapping in Paradise Alley and being drunk and disorderly. Moon and Lane were arrested in the alley by Roundsman Frederickson and Patrolman Totten, while Patrolman Vanderweg captured Vaugalin on East Second street after a severe struggle. Vaugalin has just been released after serving a term in State Prison. He was fined $25 and given sixty days in jail. Moon went to jail for thirty days and Lane was fined $10.

Isaac Apgar was disorderly and used indecent and profane language on West Front street. He was fined $3.

Stephen Murphy, one of a party who were implicated in a "scrap" at Netherwood some time ago, was fined $10. The others were tried at the time.

Sentence was suspended on Stephen Harrison who pleaded guilty to the charge of being drunk and disorderly.

This morning, the Judge pronounced sentence on two prisoners. David Van Haughton was found yesterday paralyzed drunk by Patrolman McCue. He paid his $3 fine.

Frank Otte paid $5 for acting in a disorderly manner on Front street yesterday.

Scholars Out in Force.

The fall term in the Plainfield public schools began this morning. The time was spent in distributing the books and arranging the pupils. The attendance was unusually large and everybody seemed glad to get back to work. In the High School, the lower classes were larger than ever before. In the senior class, however, the small number of young men was especially noticeable; the class is quite large, however.

—There was an unusually large number of guests at Mountain Park Inn yesterday.

PHENOMENAL BOY DIVER

Leaped from a Height of Ninety Feet to Win a Quarter.

Always Plunges Head-Foremost—Would Not Fear to Dive from Brooklyn Bridge—Thinks It Great Fun to Drop Through the Air.

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

The most daring boy diver in the world is to be found in New York.

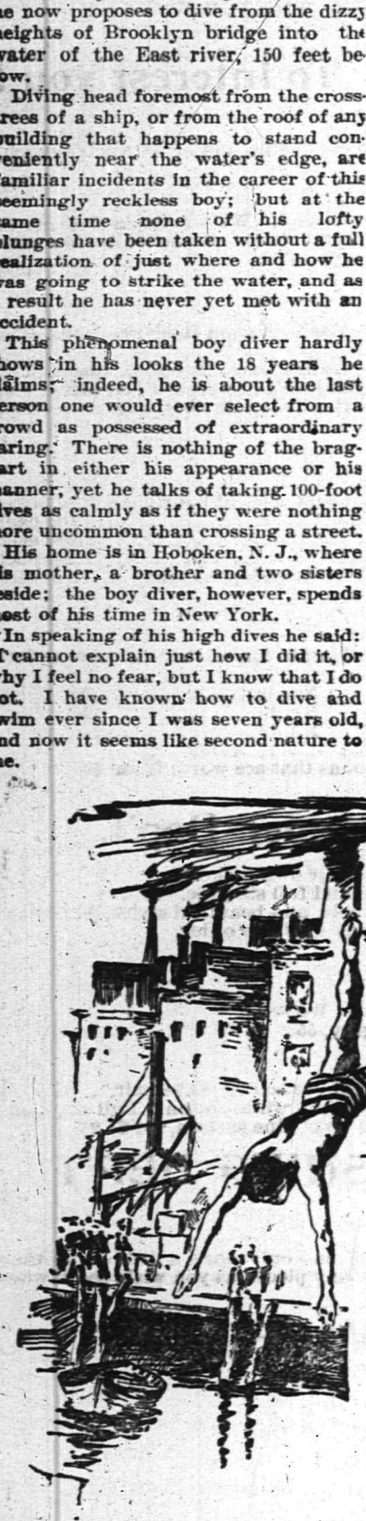
Having already made a number of headlong plunges which would make an ordinary man turn pale with fear he now proposes to dive from the dizzy heights of Brooklyn bridge into the water of the East river, 150 feet below.

Diving head foremost from the cross-trees of a ship, or from the roof of any building that happens to stand conveniently near the water's edge, are familiar incidents in the career of this seemingly reckless boy; but at the same time none of his lofty plunges have been taken without a full realization of just where and how he was going to strike the water, and as a result he has never yet met with an accident.

This phenomenal boy diver hardly shows in his looks the 18 years he claims; indeed, he is about the last person one would ever select from a crowd as possessed of extraordinary daring. There is nothing of the braggart in either his appearance or his manner, yet he talks of taking 100-foot dives as calmly as if they were nothing more uncommon than crossing a street.

His home is in Hoboken, N. J., where his mother, a brother and two sisters reside; the boy diver, however, spends most of his time in New York.

In speaking of his high dives he said: "I cannot explain just how I did it, or why I feel no fear, but I know that I do not. I have known how to dive and swim ever since I was seven years old, and now it seems like second nature to me.



PLUNGING FROM A HEIGHT OF NINETY FEET TO EARN A QUARTER

"How did I learn? In the simplest and most natural way in the world. When I was a child, my father took me down on the dock one day and threw me overboard, clothes and all. Naturally I was frightened, but he only laughed at me when I called for help, and said: 'Swim or drown.' It is quite needless to say that I did not drown, for somehow, when I struck out, as I had seen other boys do, I found that I could swim, and I have been swimming more or less ever since."

The latest dive which young Brunck has taken was one which, when it was suggested, seemed almost suicidal. He, with some companions, was swimming at the foot of Seventh street, Hoboken, when some one told him that he did not dare dive from the roof of the four-story Rockwell plaster mill, which is built on the dock. Brunck hesitated for a moment; then one of his companions said: "Go on, Louis, I will give you a quarter to take the header."

The roof of the building is 90 feet above the water, which at that point is only eight feet deep. Brunck was soon standing on the ridge pole of the building. He waited a moment, and then raising his hands above his head, leaped out into space, and shot downward.

Not once did he change his position, but struck the water hands and head foremost, sending the spray dashing high on either side of him. In a few seconds he appeared at the surface, about 50 feet from where he struck the water, and swimming to the landing at the foot of the dock promptly demanded the quarter due him for the jump.

When asked how it felt to take a dive from such a height as 100 feet, he said: "It is an odd sort of feeling. There is an exhilaration caused by the sudden rush through the air, and while I know that I am only in the air for a few seconds, in that time I can do a lot of thinking, and I am always wondering how I shall strike the water. I know that if I turn while in the air and strike in the wrong position the chances of my getting ashore are small; but nothing of that kind has ever happened yet.

"I should not be afraid to dive from the Brooklyn bridge, but I would not attempt to jump feet first, as the others have done. I feel safer and can control myself better in the air when I go down head first. As nearly as I can describe my sensations while shooting through the air, I feel much as one does when an elevator suddenly drops—only much more so—and now I actually enjoy the sensation. I certainly should not fear to take a header either from the Brooklyn or the Poughkeepsie bridge, and you need not be surprised if you hear of my doing so."

This boy who talks so calmly of throwing himself head first through 150 feet of space comes of a family of natural swimmers and divers, his father having been an expert at both, while his brother almost daily takes a noonday dip from the cross tree of some ship lying along the Hoboken docks.

THE MENDACITY OF VANITY.

Method Adopted by a Drummer to Settle a Disputed Point.

A Star reporter was contending the point that however vain a person might be, especially a woman, her vanity was not strong enough to destroy her sense of truthfulness. The opposite side was defended by a New York traveling man, commonly known as a "drummer," and he was not only a stylish fellow, but he had the nerve that is sometimes ascribed to that peripatetic fraternity.

"Come with me," he said, "and I'll prove my point."

It was about 11 o'clock in the morning and the conversation was occurring in an office on F street.

"How?" inquired the reporter.

"I'll show you how if you'll come with me."

The writer agreed to the proposition and the drummer escorted him to a dry goods store where women congregate and led him inside. They moved about the place for 15 or 20 minutes, the writer asking for an explanation of the strange maneuvers every time he had a chance and getting no satisfactory answers. Finally the drummer overheard a lady tell a clerk she wanted her packages sent down to the train in time for her to get them there and carry them home with her. The next minute, as she turned away, he rushed up to her with his hand extended, and the lady shook hands with him.

"How do you do!" he said in the friendliest way.

"How do you do?" she responded, but with some doubt in her voice.

"I don't believe you remember me," he said, in a hurt tone.

"Your face is quite familiar to me, but I don't quite place you."

"Don't you remember," he explained, "that I met you at the German ambassador's not long ago and also at the dinner dance at Brice's and again at the assembly?"

She hesitated a moment, looking him over as she did so."

"Why, yes," she said, smiling very pleasantly, "I remember you quite well now, but I wasn't expecting to see you, don't you know, and didn't recognize you at first. You know how it is in Washington."

She smiled again and he smiled and chatted with her awhile, then they parted and the drummer came back to the writer and took him out on the street.

"Now, what do you think of it?" he asked.

"Think of what?"

"Of my proof that I was on the right side of the discussion."

"I don't see any proof. You merely met a lady you had met before and recalled yourself to her. There wasn't any proof in that."

"Wasn't there!" and the drummer laughed. "Think a minute. You know I don't know anybody in Washington outside of three or four merchants I sell to here and them only in a business way. I never was at the German ambassador's in my life, or any of those other places I mentioned. I have read of them in the newspapers, that's all. And the lady, why, she doesn't live in this town at all. Didn't you hear her order her packages sent to the train to meet her? I never saw her before. Just the same, when she saw a well-dressed man identifying her as a member of the fashionable set of the capital, and knew the clerks and other women were hearing it, too, she let it go at that and never said a word to correct me. She never was at any of those places any more than I was, but she was too vain to deny it, even though she had to lie to maintain her position. See?"

The writer saw very clearly, but he never would have seen if the proof had not been presented in such unmistakable form.—Washington Star.

Utilizing Bacteria of the Soil.

Experiments have been carried on in Germany by Drs. Hall, Riegel, Nothe and others, with the view of ascertaining how the bacteria of the soil may be rendered useful. Herr Nothe has succeeded in cultivating these bacteria on a large scale, and he is convinced that the sowing of the bacteria necessary for the assimilation of nitrogen and the successful cultivation of leguminous plants will make soils which need them more productive, and will do so in a cheaper and more convenient way than the method of inoculating suitable earth, devised some years ago.

WINNING IN FAVOR.

Labor Day Coming To Rank Among Our Big Holidays.

New York, Sept. 8.—That Labor Day is coming to rank with the other four great popular holidays in point of popular interest, the demonstrations in this city yesterday attested, and dispatches from all parts of the country show that the day was more generally observed than at any time heretofore. In this city business was generally suspended, banks closed, and besides the big parades the day was given up to out-door sports.

Pleasant Day at Hartford.

Hartford, Sept. 8.—Labor Day was observed here as general holday, beautiful weather adding to the day's general observances. All business was suspended in the building and manufacturing trades, the banks and insurance offices were closed and the retail stores closed at noon. Sixteen organizations participated in the parade. There were about 2,000 men in line, which was reviewed by Mayor Preston and the city government.

Generally Observed at Boston.

Boston, Sept. 8.—Labor Day was celebrated here somewhat more extensively than usual. The weather was clear and cool, and the procession was the largest ever seen here on a similar occasion. The day was observed in various other ways, chiefly out-door sports, picnics, etc.

Philadelphia Celebrated.

Philadelphia, Sept. 8.—Although Saturday was the legal Labor Day in this state, the National Labor Day was observed here, exchanges, banks, etc., being closed. Three thousand members of trades unions headed by a contingent of the socialistic labor party paraded. They marched to a local park where Frank Gessner of Pittsburg and others made address.

No Holiday at Pittsburg Yesterday.

Pittsburg, Sept. 7.—The National Labor Day was not celebrated in this city yesterday. Banks and exchanges were open as usual. The state labor day was observed Saturday.

Big Event at Watertown.

Watertown, N. Y., Sept. 8.—The Union Labor organization of the entire Black River Valley celebrated Labor Day in Watertown and several excursions from Canada added to the crowd.

Watson Speaks at Dallas.

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 8.—Tom Watson of Georgia addressed 5,000 persons at the Labor Day celebration at the state fair grounds. He devoted most of his time to personal attacks on Mr. Sewall, the democratic candidate for vice-president. He declared that he would not retire from the race in Sewall's favor. "If Bryan wins," he said, "it must be as Bryan and Watson. If Bryan is defeated he can blame Sewall."

Big Parades at Toronto.

Toronto, Sept. 8.—The parade of the labor organizations here in celebration of Labor Day was the greatest in the history of organized labor in this country. There were several thousand men in line.

Labor Day at Montreal.

Montreal, Sept. 8.—Labor Day was observed here as a legal holiday. The weather was pleasant. The workingmen's societies met on the Champ de Mars and then paraded through the principal streets to the east end of the city to the exhibition grounds, where a whole round of sports, speech making, dancing, etc., was gone through.

PROBABLY FATALLY BURNED.

Three Men Surrounded by Blazing Sawdust in a Mill at Worcester.

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 8.—John Scanlon, James Shea and James Daly, employed at the Rice & Griffin sash and blind shop in this city, were badly and perhaps fatally burned yesterday afternoon by blazing sawdust. Scanlon and Daly were shovelling the tinder-like material into the furnace in the boiler room and Shea was in a small box-like room on the fourth floor shovelling the dust down a shute to the men below. A back draught caused the ignition of the sawdust as the men were shovelling it, and quick as flash they were surrounded with flames. Almost as suddenly the blaze flashed up the shute, so that Shea at the top was as badly burned as the men below. The fire department was called out and the fire in the building was extinguished. The three injured men are now at the city hospital.

SPOILED THE SPEECHES.

Disastrous Effect of Foolish Questions Upon Congressional Oratory.

There are times when the question or remark of a persistent interrupter will destroy the effect of a speech and discourage the orator almost to the point of breaking down, says the Troy Times. When Bryan, of Nebraska, in the Fifty-third congress, was in the midst of a rhetorical climax and with arms uplifted was gushing a very familiar line, the house was convulsed by the question of Walker, of Massachusetts: "Who wrote that?" The whole thing was so ridiculous that it was five minutes before Bryan could go on. Here is another: Thomas Bartlett, of Vermont, was renowned for his flights of elaborate rhetorical oratory, and a seat in congress was the special goal of his ambition. When he was elected a story of how he had been silenced by an audience of college boys got around, and on the occasion of the new member's first appearance the house was prepared to receive him in anything but a serious spirit. Rising to indorse a proposition which had just been vigorously attacked he began to declaim impressively: "Sir, were it not for the rules of the house I would pour upon the opponents of this measure the vials of my wrath—" He got no farther. Mr. Polk, of Tennessee, was upon his feet in a moment, moving, with every appearance of eager interest, "that the rules be suspended and the gentleman allowed to pour!" Such a disconcerting burst of laughter followed that the unfortunate orator could only subside wrathfully into silence and his seat.

FORGOT HIS NECKTIE.

Embarrassing Situation of a Young Man Out West.

In these days of cheap neckwear a man is poor indeed who cannot afford a large collection of ties. There is a young man in this city, however, says the Denver Times, who would have willingly paid five times the cost of a cravat, if necessary, a few days ago. He is a genius in his way, and, like most of his tribe, requires a guardian. It was on a bright, warm morning, not long since, that he sauntered from his home just about shopping time, and in his absent-minded way wandered downtown. As he walked along Sixteenth street people gazed at him curiously, and some were ill-bred enough to laugh. Their curiosity was lost upon him, however, for he was far away in reveries of the bright, happy times when editors accept everything that is offered without even asking ambitious young authors to ruthlessly cut manuscript "to satisfy our readers." He wandered into a crowded drug store, and, elbowing his way through the throngs of well-dressed women, asked for his favorite phosphate, and then continued his stroll until he reached the office of the Times. Then some one asked him why he did not dress before coming on the street. He looked up in mild amazement, sought a mirror, and then made a rush for the nearest haberdashery. Since then he has become possessor of a complete collection of ties, and when he sees his sister wearing the choicest specimens, his hand invariably seeks his collar band to see if he has again been neglectful.

MARBLEHEAD BOYS.

Marvelous Depravity with Which They Have Been Charged.

Speaking of boys reminds me, says a writer in the Boston Gazette, of a story which Polly told the other day, when she came up from Marblehead Neck to cheer my malarial gloom. It seems Marblehead boys have the reputation of being the worst in the state, and a worthy minister who went there to fill a vacant pulpit one Sunday had occasion to verify the truth of this, for on his way to church he was unmercifully hooted and stoned. Filled with righteous indignation, the worthy divine remarked from the pulpit in mournful tones upon the depravity manifested by the old town's boys. Some time later he again visited the place, and this time he met with no insults and did not even see a single hoodlum on his churchward walk. Being a just man he desired to praise as well as blame, and so he said that he was truly rejoiced to see that the youth had seen the error of their ways and had turned aside from the path of evildoers. Thereupon arose a small boy in the gallery, who shrieked forth in gleeful malignity: "Don't you believe it. They've just gone down to Barnegat to stone a funeral, and when they come back won't you catch it!"

Delicate Dress Goods.
Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Time of the Transcontinental Relay Bicycle Race.

FROM SAN FRANCISCO TO NEW YORK

The Pouch with the Message Enclosed Delivered to the New York Postmaster Last Evening—Final Dash in the Long and Plucky Race.

New York, Sept. 8.—The transcontinental bicycle relay race, which began in San Francisco at noon on Aug. 25, ended in front of the Journal office on Park row in this city at 3:29:04 1-3 yesterday afternoon. The actual time of the race was 13 days, 25 minutes, 4 1-5 seconds. The pouch which has come across the country contained two letters, one addressed to Postmaster Dayton from the postoffice department in San Francisco, and the other from Col. Schafer, addressed to the major-general in command of the department of the east at Governor's island. S. F. Boffinger received the pouch at Yonkers at 2:23 p. m. and immediately started for Kingsbridge, accompanied by several local riders. At Kingsbridge Fred J. Titus of the Riverside wheelmen, who holds the ten-mile record, received the pouch and, together with O. S. Brandt of the same club, started the last relay of the race. Coming through Kingsbridge they were accompanied by 100 cyclists, while Messrs. Muller and Saunderson, on a tandem geared to 123, started to pace the riders. They had not gone far, however, when the two relay riders left them in the rear. At Washington bridge Brandt's wheel broke down, and he was compelled to borrow one from a member of the party. The route through the city was from Washington bridge down St. Nicholas avenue to the Boulevard, to 72d street, down Broadway to City Hall park and over to the Journal office. All along the line crowds of wheelmen were waiting for the riders to pass, and joined in the party that followed, but they were soon distanced, and when the two riders reached their destination there were only seven followers. On the stand erected at the finish were Postmaster Dayton, A. R. Grant, who had charge of the race and started the first rider at San Francisco, and W. R. Hearst, proprietor of the San Francisco Examiner and New York Journal. The pouch was opened by Postmaster Dayton, while the crowd in front of the stand shouted and cheered. The letter addressed to him was found in a linen envelope which was covered with signatures and postmarks of the postmasters of the cities through which the pouch was carried. The postmaster opened the letter and found that it contained a formal announcement of the rider leaving San Francisco for the purpose of establishing a record. The letter for Governor's island was delivered this morning at 8 o'clock.

HER SEMI-CENTENNIAL.

Grand Celebration and Parade at Manchester, N. H., Yesterday.

Manchester, N. H., Sept. 8.—The city celebrated the semi-centennial of its existence in a royal manner. A feature was the magnificent parade of military and civic bodies, the procession being five miles long with nearly 10,000 men in line. The city was never so beautifully decorated, the principal business streets being a mass of color. Many visiting organizations and crowds of people from all portions of the state were in the city. At the conclusion of the march the grand lodge of Masons accompanied by delegations from the commanderies was escorted to Oak Hill where the corner stone of an observatory to be erected, as provided in the will of the late ex-Gov. James A. Watson, was laid by the grand officers, most worshipful grand master Henry A. Marsh of Nashua officiating. At 4 o'clock Trinity Commandery of this city tendered all the visiting commanderies a banquet in a mammoth tent, plates being laid for 1,200.

Victim of Hiccoughs.

Waterbury, Conn., Sept. 8.—Irene Kaheler, aged 15, of High street, this city, has been a victim of the hiccoughs since July 25. She is at the Waterbury hospital and suffers continually from the paroxysms except when asleep. Physicians have unsuccessfully tried every known remedy. The girl is unable to take food except with the assistance of a stomach pump.

Leader of Dervishes Dead.

Rome, Sept. 8.—The Tribuna publishes a dispatch from Kassala, the town on the edge of the Soudan held by the Italians, announcing the death of the Khalifa, the successor of the Mahdi and the leader of the dervishes, against whom the Anglo-Saxon expedition is now operating. Beyond stating that the Khalifa died at Boga the dispatch gives no details.

Honored by King Leopold for Bravery.

Pittsburg, Sept. 8.—Arthur Schneider, vice-consul of Belgium in this city, yesterday pinned on the lapel of the coat of Victor Adams, a Belgian plate-glass worker of Charleroi, a gold medal conferred by King Leopold for bravery and courage in rescuing five of his countrymen from drowning in the Monongahela river on July 15, 1895.

Li's Tribute to Washington.

Washington, Sept. 8.—The Chinese minister, Yang Yu, accompanied by several members of his legation, visited Mount Vernon yesterday afternoon by special train and deposited upon the tomb of Washington the handsome wreath which Li Hung Chang was prevented by inclement weather Saturday from placing there with his own hands

ARKANSAS ELECTION

Returns So Far Indicate a Republican Vote of 160,000.

A GAIN OVER '94 OF ABOUT 24,000

Democrats Claim the Election of Col. Jones for Governor by 45,000 Plurality—Efforts of the Temperance People Defeated.

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 7.—The election held in Arkansas yesterday was for all state, judicial and county offices, including two-thirds of the legislature which will elect a successor to senator James K. Jones, chairman of the democratic national committee. He has no opposition within his party and his re-election is an assured fact. Returns show that an unusually large vote was polled. The question of licensing saloons was the principal issue in the majority of the counties. Here in Little Rock it was the issue of the day. The prohibitionists or anti-license advocates were defeated. Democrats and republicans had full tickets in the field, while the populists and prohibitionists nominated candidates for governor only. Returns received in this city up to 11 o'clock this morning indicate that the republican vote will exceed 160,000, an increase of 24,000 over 1894. At democratic headquarters the election of Col. Daniel W. Jones the democratic candidate for governor is claimed by 45,000 plurality. Chairman Cooper of the republican committee does not concede the claim, basing his estimates upon reports received late last evening. He says a large percentage of the increased vote was polled by negroes. Of the 203,000 poll tax receipts in this state, 45,000 are held by negroes, 15,000 more than were paid by the negroes two years ago.

Estimate 60,000 Majority for Jones.

Majorities shown for the democrats from official returns so far received if kept up throughout the state will give Jones and the democratic ticket about 60,000 majority. The republicans had a mixed ticket in the field, the opposition being an independent ticket composed of men, a majority of whom are but little known in politics. The populists scratched Files, their candidate for governor, and voted solidly for Jones, as did many of the sound money democrats, who voted at all.

The principal business of the convention was to urge on the United States and the different state and municipal governments the fairness of placing the regular army and naval veterans on an equality with the veterans of the late war. Resolutions looking to this end were adopted, and a committee appointed to carry them into effect.

It was also stated that Mr. Cook would go to the university of Pennsylvania.

AROUND THE BASES.

James T. Scott, in conversation with a Press reporter, said that the story which appeared in The Press recently relative to the wonderful catch of bass made by one of North Plainfield's prominent citizens while at Wolfeboro, N. H., was not altogether in the line of truth. He insists that he caught the fish and not the gentleman referred.

The Plainfield Athletic Club took the celebrated Metuchen Athletic Club into camp yesterday, and after one of the hardest fought games of the season won the game by the score of 13 to 11. The game was almost an errorless one and the brilliant playing of both teams deserve the highest encomium of the base ball fraternity and the spectators in general and was greatly applauded by the large number present. The pitching of Winn and the catching of Errickson of the Plainfield Athletic Club is deserving of special mention. The two-bagger of John Schenck, formerly of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A., and now a member of the Plainfield Athletic Club, received a round of applause that was worthy of note. The score is as follows.

Plainfield A. C.	1	0	4	1	1	3	0	2	1	--13
Metuchen A. C.	0	0	3	2	2	0	1	1	2	--11

LAWN TENNIS.

The club tennis trophy of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, a silver loving cup, has now become the personal property of Carl F. Walz, who has now won it the necessary three times. He won it the third time yesterday when he defeated Henry V Rider, who won the club tournament and thus became challenger.

There were only four entries for the club tournament yesterday and they played on the Watchung avenue courts. The results were as follows:

First Round—H. V. Rider defeated Fred W. Goddard, 4-6, 6 4, 6 1.

G. H. Rider defeated F. K. Fish, Jr., 4-6, 6 4, 6-1.

Final Round—H. V. Rider defeated G. H. Rider, 6-0, 6-0.

Championship Round—C. F. Walz defeated H. V. Rider, 8-6, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

Burt Heinrichs and Heywood Bogert, of this city, have returned from a very successful fishing trip to Staten Island.

Dr. W. E. Stelle, of Park avenue, returned last week from a shooting trip on the New Jersey coast, stopping at Seaside Park and Ortley.

I. D. TenEyck and G. P. Smith drove over to Levi Darby's farm, Saturday, for a day's hunting. Mr. TenEyck with his eagle eye brought down two fine gray squirrels, and "Garry" picked 'em up.

A Political Sermon.

Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, pastor of Monroe Avenue chapel, preached a sermon, Sunday, on the political situation, but it was devoid of partisanship and was filled with good advice for the Christian to act under. His text was "Blessed is the Nation whose God is the Lord."

Town Improvement Association.

The September meeting of the Town Improvement Association will be held on Friday afternoon, September 11th, at the Y. M. C. A. building. The matter of burning leaves in the streets will be discussed, and as this subject so nearly concerns all of the citizens of Plainfield a large attendance is urged.

VETS WENT TO DEFEAT.

team was waiting for Hoffman. From a scientific standpoint the game was a great success and everyone was pleased, except the veterans who wanted to win. Umpire MacMurray played his part well and gave excellent satisfaction on both sides. William Cadmus, whose great pitching in days gone by won him many friends, appeared yesterday as of yore and, as usual, he wanted to be on the coach line. The game brought back many pleasant memories and it will be talked about for many days to come.

In the afternoon at 3 o'clock the Y. M. C. A. team met the Dunellen Athletic Club team in this city and one of the prettiest games of the season was witnessed. The attendance was very good and there was plenty of enthusiasm. It was only by chance that the home team escaped defeat as the visitors put up a good fight and held it to the finish. Both sides had to play hard and the score, 7 to 6 in favor of the home team, was a well fought one throughout. Two umpires were used. Tee Kay and Geo. Cadmus officiated to the satisfaction of all. There was lots of good hitting and fielding and the crowd was kept at a high temperature to the finish. Richardson, for the visitors, made a remarkable catch in the field, as did also McLaughlin at first base. The score of the contest follows:

THEIR SERVICES INTERRUPTED.

Pottersville People Trying to Prosecute a German Singing Society.

A Secret-Service officer has been working with the Law and Order Society of Pottersville not far from this city, for the last two days getting evidence with which to prosecute a German singing society of Newark, which disturbed the last Sabbath in that quiet little town. The society came to Black River Falls Grove with twelve carloads of people and marched through the little hamlet about the time the church services began, headed by a brass band and conveying 200 kegs of beer. The band played, "Just Tell Them That You Saw Me" when the procession passed the church, and the services were stopped.

A bar was set up in the grove, right on the line between Somerset and Morris counties, and ticket-sellers passed among the crowd selling coupons that entitled every bearer to six glasses of beer for twenty-five cents. The dealers could shift their place of business from one county into the other in case of a raid. More than 300 wheelmen were at the grove, and they cut some strange figures in their attempts to ride home. Silent wheels and disabled riders lay along the roadway. The people of Pottersare indignant and some indictments are likely to follow.

MRS. MATTHEW S. QUAY.

Wife of the Great Republican Leader Adds her Testimony to that of Thousands of Others for Paine's Celery Compound.

Among the testimonials received this year by the proprietors of that greatest of all remedies, Paine's celery compound, are found many, as usual, from families of national reputation.

One of these is the following sincere statement that bears the signature of Agnes B. Quay, the wife of the Hon. Matthew S. Quay, United States Senator from Pennsylvania so urgently named for the Presidency at St. Louis.

"Washington, May 15, 1896.

"Messrs. Weels & Richardson,
Burlington, Vt.

"Dear Sirs:—My daughter and I have been using your Paine's Celery Compound this spring with beneficial results.

"Those in an over fatigued condition will find it a gentle stimulant, and an excellent tonic, and I add my testimony to others without reluctance."

The relative merits and efficiency of Paine's celery compound in making people well is clearly shown in the character of the people who today rely on it to cure insomnia, nervous debility, persistent headaches and a run-down condition.

It is the power of rapid repair of the tissues that makes Paine's celery compound the great saver of life that it is. It brings just the needed nutriment to the distracted nerve tissues all over the body and increases the volume of healthy blood so that a breaking down of some vital part is averted. While taking Paine's celery compound there is a general building up of the deep-lying tissues all over the body, and the throwing off of unsound elements that clog and interfere with its healthy activity.

The story of the discovery and unparalled success of Paine's celery compound is the story of a high purpose, steadfastly followed; the reward for the life-long study of the nervous system in health a disease. Prof. Edward E. Phelps' discovery in the labratory of the Dartmouth Medical School proved a monumental work in the art of dealing successfully with many diseases that were up to that time held to be obstinate of cure. Today rheumatism and neuralgia, heart palpitation and nervous dyspepsia are taking in hand by Paine's celery compound with the absolute assurance of freeing the system of them entirely.

In this greatest of remedies there is hope for every person distressed by symtoms of dyspepsia, impure blood, failing vigor or low nervous condition.

VACANCIES FILLED BY THE CITY BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The Question of Finances Considered and It Is the Idea to Issue Bonds Instead of Mortgages—Other Matters Acted On.

The City Board of Education met in regular session in the High School building last evening, with President Dr. J. B. Probasco in the chair. Messrs. Lounsbury, Lovell and Abbott were present when Clerk F. B. Clark read the minutes, and Dr. O. L. Jenkins came in later. The minutes were approved and the regular routine of business was taken up by the presentation of the following claims:

R. H. Galpin, $130.50; S. R. Hope, $4.55; D. W. Littell, $40 and $15; F. A. Dunham, $9; H. B. Smith & Co., $1; J. H. VanWinkle, $1.60; Milton, Bradley & Co., $145.16; Mazury, Young & Co., $18; A. M. Griffin, $123.04; Joseph Kingston, $1.79 and $16.47; W. B. Harris, sundry claims amounting to $30.65; Jos. S. Barrows, $5.63; F. B. Clark, $2; Cortlandt and Wayne Parker, $50; and sundry other bills amounting to $54. These were all ordered paid.

The following claims, sent in late, were ordered paid if found to be correct: G. Q. Packer, $42; E. Lazzi, $418.13; New York Belting and Packing Co., $6.50; Chas. M. Wilson, $66.63; TenEyck & Harris, $1.650.17.

C. P. Carr in a communication asked for the first payment of $250 for services on account as architect on the new school building, and the request was granted.

The City Collector communicated with the Board to the effect that back taxes accruing since 1881, to the extent of $502.02, had been collected and with interest the amount reached a total of $542.93, which had been deposited to the credit of the Board of Education.

Applications for the janitorship of the new Lincoln School building, each with a long list of siguatures recommending the applicants, were received and filed as follows: B. W. Hand, George B. Allen, G. H. Bellis and Isaac S. Lance.

President Probasco made a verbal report on some of the necessary repairs to the several schools which he had casually observed on a tour of inspection.

The matter of macadamizing four feet in the gutters on each side of the Irving School, at Fourth street and Monroe avenue, at a cost of about $5, was left at the discretion of the committee on buildings.

Mr. Lounsbury, from the building committee, had no report to submit, inasmuch as the bills for repairs were not yet all in.

The matter of grading about the Lincoln School was considered at some length, and it was the sense of the board that the work should be done before the cold weather sets in It was stated that fully a foot of dirt would have to be removed from the Second street side of the building, but this could be utilized to advantage in filling in about the grounds. B. W. Hand had agreed to do all the grading for $200. The matter was left to the building committee.

Mr. Lounsbury stated that a petition had been sent to the Council asking for the extension of the water main from Front street to the Lincoln School building, a distance of about 675 feet, so as to furnish city water for the school. The cost per year would average $62.50, and if the city would place a fire hydrant on the corner the cost for school purposes would be $10 less.

The committee on teachers reported that L. R. Allen in the High School, Julia A. Butler in the Franklin School and Mary Allen in the Irving School had declined a reappointment. The following new teachers were announced to fill the several vacancies: A. J. Knowlton, of Bridgewater, Mass., in the High School; Lottie B. Strong, of Gennessee, N. Y., in the Franklin School; Carrie E. Randall, of Easthampton, Mass., in the Irving School; and Kate A. Reemer, of Amsterdam, N. Y., in the Bryant School.

The matter of fencing in the new school was discussed at some length, Mr. Lounsbury favoring a neat iron fence, but the whole matter was left to the building committee with power.

Mr. Lounsbury said he had received a petition from the Street Railway Company asking for permission to extend the line to and pass the new school building on East Second street, but both he and Dr. Jenkins were of the opinion that the Board had no controlling voice in the premises. After a little friendly discussion the president was authorized to sign the petition giving the assent of the Board.

The question of issuing school bonds,

THAT UNRULY TONGUE.

IT CAUSED LOTS OF EXCITEMENT IN THE CITY COURT.

And Finally Landed Its Owner in the County Jail—It Also Made a Great Deal of Trouble in Fairchild's Alley.

There are other distinguished characters in the city court records besides those from "Paradise Alley." This morning, Fairchild's alley, which runs from East Front street beside the old postoffice building, sent one of its liveliest colored residents to the stuffy little court room in the city lockup for trial. And the offender was a woman, and she had a tongue.

Now other woman have tongues and some of them can manipulate them with considerable vigor, but they are not "in it" with Mrs. Lizzie Thompson, for such was the name of the woman from Fairchild's alley. Her tongue was the cause of her arrest. She used it so freely on her neighbors that, at last, Mrs. Leander Brown, a colored resident of the same thoroughfare, decided that Mrs. Thompson had gone too far and appealed to the police. Mrs. Thompson was ordered to appear before Judge DeMeza this morning, and she did so, accompanied by about one-half the female population of the alley.

It was only too evident that she had been brooding over her arrest and was ready for war. From the moment she entered the court room, her tongue began to wag, despite the efforts of Chief Grant and Patrolman McCue. She would subside for a time only to explode with more vehemence soon after. The trouble, she claimed, was over the children but the court had heard enough to realize the cause.

As it was impossible to send the tongue to jail alone, the owner of that unruly member had to go also. When the Judge declared her guilty, she gave him an example of life on Fairchild's alley. The Chief came in for his share of abuse. She was sentenced to pay a fine or $15, and go to jail for forty days. As she was led away to a cell, she shook her fist at Mrs. Brown and yelled. "I'll get even with you when I get out." And then she continued to make life miserable for those in the building by her yells, ejaculations and remarks which she interspersed between the puffs at her pipe.

CELLAR THIEVES IN THE NOTCH.

Eatables Were Evidently the Only Thing They Were After.

Some time during Monday night a sneak thief or thieves got into Geo. Demlers cellar in the Notch, and were helping themselves or himself to bread, cake and sweetmeats, when Mrs. Demler happened to open her eyes and was startled to see the reflection of a lantern outside of her bedroom window. She quietly aroused her husband, but the robbers evidently hearing them moving about in the the room beat a hasty exit through the cellar door, which was afterwards found open.

The same night the cellar of the house on the "Billy" Spencer farm was also entered and cleaned of the eatables. Judging from the looks of the cellar the next morning it would remind one of the song, "After the Ball is Over."

There is no direct clue to the perpetrators of the deeds, but one or more persons living in the neighborhood are suspected.

Country Roads in Bad Shape.

Ex-Chief Marshal Wm. Pangborn drove through Washingtonville and several adjacent villages a few days ago and afterward told a Daily Press representative that the roads around the Valley had suffered terribly from the recent storm. The storm, together with the fact that the breaks in the road had not been opened, will cause an expenditure of several hundred dollars. The township committee has failed to open the breaks as they should do and the roads are now suffering in consequence.

Trade Encouraging.

Edsall reports that trade at the Commercial Palace is very brisk, and from the present encouraging start out for September bids fair to come up to the usual amount. The new fall and winter goods coming in, and the nice cool weather, together with the people coming home from their summer vacations, sets the ball a rolling. All that is needed now is a little confidence and a look on the right side of things, instead of all the time croaking on the dark side to make a genuine business boom.

The whole system is drained and undermined by indolent ulcers and open sores. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve speedily heals them. It is the best pile cure known. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

THE SITUATION IN UNION

JAMES P. LOGAN TALKS WITH THE LEADERS OF BOTH PARTIES.

Foster Voorhees Prophesies a Plurality of 3,000 for McKinley in Union County—Democratic Leaders Confident.

James P. Logan, who is making a canvass of the State for the Newark News, has the following about the political situation in Union county:

"Union county is in good shape," said Senator Foster M. Voorhees, when questioned upon the subject. "Chairman Codding, of the Republican county committee," he continued, "says McKinley will have 2,500 or 3,000 majority in the county, but I think that is too high an estimate. Taking the most conservative view, however, I think we shall carry the county by a large majority. There seems to be little silver sentiment among Republicans, and the Democrats who will not vote for Bryan can be counted by scores. Among the leading Democrats here for sound money are City Comptroller A. B. Carlton, ex-City Treasurer John Whelan, School Commissioner Timpson, S. M. Williams, auditor of the Central Railroad company; Frederick E. Levy, Theodore Tembroke, James Maguire and hosts of others."

"How are the workingmen, Senator?"

"I believe they are for sound money," replied Mr. Voorhees. "At first it was feared that the labor organizations were against us, but I learn that they are not; in fact, the tide is settling our way everywhere."

Ex Speaker Joseph Cross agreed with what Senator Voorhees had said, and thought that there is no fear of any serious free silver defection among Republicans.

Ex-Senator Frederick C. Marsh, chairman of the Democratic committee, was one of New Jersey's delegates to Chicago, and was considered a sound money man. He still disapproves of the Chicago platform, but in the past few days has announced that he will support the ticket. "With my party affiliations and connection with the organization," said Mr. Marsh, "I feel it my duty to support the ticket regularly nominated, however much I may disgrace with the platform."

"Do you find the free silver sentiment very strong in Union County, Senator?" I asked.

"No I do not," was the reply. "I hear that the farmers throughout the country are all for free silver, but for some reason I do not run across them. Maybe it is because they do not come to my office, and I don't go out hunting for them, but at any rate I haven't found any of that overwhelming free silver sentiment we hear so much about."

J. A. Kiernan, a bright young lawyer, is one of the most active workers for Bryan and Sewall. "The silver sentiment is very strong among the workingman," said Mr. Kiernan. "Of course a good many wealthy Democrats and business men are out for gold, but not the great mass of voters. The common people feel that in Bryan and Sewall that they have a ticket which more fully represents them than any they have had a chance of voting for in many years, and I have never seen the rank and file more enthusiastic."

Mr. Kiernan thought that many Republican workingmen and farmers would vote for the Chicago nominees, but admitted that the German vote in Elizabeth would be practically solid for McKinley. He was not very hopeful of carrying the county.

Ex-Assemblyman Timothy Kelly, while an earnest advocate of Bryan and Sewall, thought that the gold Democrats of Union would outnumber the silver Republicans, and that McKinley and Hobart would probably carry the county. He also spoke of enthusiasm displayed among the working classes for the silver ticket.

Jus Newcorn's Court.

The following cases are being considered in Justice Newcorn's court: Lawler against Jones, adjourned to September 16th; Miller against Watts et ux; Watts et ux against Miller, adjourned to September 15th; McVey against Johnson, settled. Summons issued: Thickstun against Kaeding, returnable September 10th; Lawler against Stiglitz, returnable September 21th; Lawler against Chase, returnable September 18th; writ of attachment on contract of A. M. Griffen against George C. Evans.

Accepted an Invitation.

The members of Warren Engine Company met last evening and accepted the invitation extended by the Exempt Firemen's Association to participate in the festivities Saturday, Oct. 3d. The company decided to turn out in full force and have secured the Independent Fife and Drum Corps for the occasion. Much enthusiasm was manifested.

THE LAST OF THE SEASON.

THE FREE OPEN AIR CONCERTS COME TO AN END.

The Last One Was Held Last Night in the Vicinity of the Babcock Building and Was Quite Largely Attended.

The open air concerts are over, that is for this year, and altogether Councilman Frost's scheme of giving the people free music has been very successful. The last of the concerts was held last evening on the southwest corner of Front street and Madison avenue. The attendance was good, but not as large as at previous concerts Perhaps it was too chilly to stand around for an hour or two, for many of the visitors came only for a few moments and then strolled away. There was the usual throng on the sidewalks and the policemen on duty there were kept hustling in their efforts to keep the passage way clear. The cyclists were not out in as large numbers as on previous occasions, and if they were, they left their wheels in some safe place.

It was a cool night, and wraps were in abundance. The sweater was prevelant among the young men, while the light overcoat began to make its appearance among the others.

The Plainfield Cornet Band furnished the music as usual, and the selections were rendered with their usual excellence. The bandstand was a great improvement, but the place itself does not seem as well fitted for an open air concert as the square in front of the Crescent Avenue church, or at the intersection of Franklin place, LaGrande and Putnam avenues. It is evidently not as popular as the crowds at the last three concerts which have been held near the Babcock building, were in no case as large as the crowds at the former concerts held in front of the church.

It is to be hoped that the concerts will be continued next year as they have proved a very popular feature of summer life in Plainfield.

FIFTH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

A Pleasureable Sociable Event Held in the Borough.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wheeler, of Linden avenue, celebrated their fifth wedding anniversary last evening, in a pleasant manner. It was their intention to have all those present who witnessed their marriage, but this was impossible as various reasons kept several away. The evening was passed in a delightful social way, interspersed with excellent vocal and instrumental music, which enlivened the gathering very much. Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler were the recipients of many presents useful in keeping house. At a late hour refreshments were served, after which the guests left for home wishing the host and hostess many years of health and happiness.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler, of Cranford, parents of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Warren C. Squires, parents of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. George C. Squires, Mason and Elsie Squires, Alice and May Squires, Miss Maggie Sheppard, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Whitely, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Walker, Miss Mamie Squires and Isaac Squires.

RETURNED ONLY TO GO AWAY AGAIN

Dan Jones, the Hobo Pays His Semi-Annual Visit to Plainfield.

Dan Jones is in hard luck, at least the average man would consider it so, but maybe this "knight of the road" thinks that the free board overbalances the effect of bad company. Yesterday our friend Jones got out of jail after a stay of 159 days. He had been sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and go to jail for 59 days. As he had no money he paid the fine in time in stead, $1 a day. This morning he came back to Plainfield, as he promised to do when he was locked up. He thinks this a great town to work and the guileless housekeepers, that have hitherto taken care of his bodily wants, are too good friends to be deserted. He has already been arrested twice before and returns to Plainfield immediately on his release. The police found him this morning working his old game and Judge DeMeza repeated the sentence, $100 fine and 59 days in jail. Poor Dan, how the housekeepers will miss him.

Meeting of the Catholic Club.

A regular meeting of the Plainfield Catholic Club was held in the club rooms last evening with President M. Mack in the chair. But little or no business of importance was transacted outside of the regular collection of dues. A special meeting of the club has been called for Friday evening of this week when some important business is to be transacted. The club now has a total of 140 members in good standing on the roll, and it is thought this number will be largely increased during the fall and winter months.

OFFICIALS FOR THE MEET

THE CRESCENT WHEELMEN SELECT THEM FOR THEIR RACES.

The Entries are Coming in Rapidly and Include Many Fast Riders, Both Amateur and Professional—The Prizes

You have no idea of the extent of the reputation of the Crescent Oval as a bicycle track. There is hardly a racer in this part of the country that does not know of its smooth surface. The scientific manner in which it was built make accidents infrequent, and when such a fact is known it is bound to make the track popular. The promoters of the national circuit meet of the Crescent Wheelmen, which is to be held on the Oval on Saturday, Sept. 26th, have not failed to remind the riders of that fact. The entries are coming in surprisingly fast for so long before the meet and everybody is delighted. Ray MacDonald, the young American professional who did so well across the water, has entered, as has also the famous Morgan and Wright team.

The officials have been invited and acceptances have been received from most of them. Those that have been invited thus far are: Referee, Robert Gentle, chief consul of the New Jersey Division of the L. A. W.; judges, Fred C. Keer, president of the Newark Cycle Board of Trade; F. P. Prial, editor of the "Wheel; J. C. Tattersall, secretary-treasurer of the New Jersey Division of the L. A. W.; W. N. Pittman, of New York.

Scorer, Robert A. Meeker, of the Crescent Wheelmen.

Timers, C. E. Vail, of the Crescent Wheelmen, Charles Brown, of the Elizabeth Athletic Cyclers, and Robert Stahl, of New York.

Starter, A. H. Chamberlain, captain of the Union County Roadsters.

Announcer, A. S. Fritts, of the Crescent Wheelmen.

Clerk-of-the-Course, Clarence E. Teel, of the Crescent Wheelmen.

Assistants, N. R. Titsworth, Casper Kirkner and J. H. Rogers, of the Crescent Wheelmen.

S. P. T. Wilbur is the chairman of the prize committee, and that assures excellent prizes. The amatuer prizes will all be diamonds of full value, and the professional prizes will of course be hard cash and gold at that.

SURE TO BE SATURDAY.

The Bicycle Carnival Will Not be Postponed Longer than Saturday.

According to the usual custom, Saturday ought to be a clear day. It is the day to which the Daylight Bicycle Carnival has been postponed and we usually have pleasant weather for the postponement. Let us hope so, at least. The general committee are hoping as hard as possible and expect to arrange suitable terms with "Farmer Dunn."

The committee held a meeting last at the Board of Trade rooms but there was very little to be done. All the arrangements have been completed and the meeting changed into a general discussion of the prospects of the Carnival for Saturday. It seemed to be the opinion of all that while New York might not be represented as numerously as before, the wheelmen of this part of New Jersey will turn out in great masses.

There was some talk of changing the date of the Carnival from next Saturday to September 26th, the date of the national circuit meet of the Crescent Wheelmen. The general sentiment was against this, however, and no effort was made to further postpone the Carnival.

N. R. Titsworth made his report as referee of the coasting match. There were fifty-six entries and the expenses were trifling so that the three leading men will receive excellent prizes for their exertions that morning.

DIFFERED ON FINANCES.

A Lively Debate Between Councilmen Over Committee Appropriations.

During the session of the City Council last evening, Councilmen Ginna and Moore participated in a lively debate regarding the appropriations for the different departments. It was brought out through the opposition made to granting petitions for electric lights.

Mr. Moore claimed that $500 additional had been granted the lights and trees committees, and that the amount had not been used.

Mr. Ginna stated that the alms committee wanted $4,500, but the amount had been reduced to $4,000, and with that sum the committee would have to do the best they could, though it was not enough.

Mr. Dumont finally stated that the street committee alone had received an appropriation of $15,000 and that no appropriation had been made for the lights and trees committee outside of the usual allowance.

MONEY IS GETTING LOW.

COUNCILMEN TALK ABOUT CUTTING CURRENT CITY EXPENSES.

Councilman Ginna Says Economy Must Be Practiced or Else the Appropriations Will Run Short This Year.

Councilman Fisk was the only member absent from the regular September meeting of the City Council, which was held last evening.

After the minutes were read and approved, a petition was received from the Town Improvement Association asking that the Council prohibit the burning of leaves, as it was a menace to health. Mr. Dumont wanted to know what disposition could be made of leaves, except to burn them. Mr. Barrows thought that if it was not a detriment to property, people should be allowed to burn them. The petition was finally referred to the police committee.

J. W. Van Sickle asked for the privilege of erecting an iron frame of gas pipe in front of his meat market, to be used for an awning. The matter was referred to the street committee.

The Plainfield Sanitary Company asked that the petition presented to the Council at the August meeting, asking for a franchise to erect a garbage-disposal plant, be returned to them. It was so ordered and another similar petition was presented. It was referred to the sewer committee with instructions that they consult the Corporation Counsel.

J. E. Martine and others petitioned for an electric light on East Ninth street between Park avenue and Third place. This was referred to the lights and trees committee. A crosswalk was asked for by Thomas Callahan and others to be located on Richmond street at the southeast corner of East Third street. The petition was placed in the hands of the street committee. The Board of Education asked that one two-way hydrant be located at the corner of Berckman and East Second street, and their request was referred to the fire and buildings committee.

All claims were received, audited and ordered paid. The reports of the City Treasurer and Collector were received and filed.

Street Commissioner Meeker reported that he had granted thirty-one sewer permits and had received $31, which amount had been turned over to the proper person.

The Building Inspector reported that fourteen permits had been granted during the past month. W. W. Coriell and a host of other citizens asked the council to repair the town clock, and they, the petitioners, would keep it running and in order. The matter was referred to the finance committee, and Mr. Dumont asked that the City Clerk be requested to learn the cost of repairing the clock and report as early as possible.

In a resolution Mr. Dumont asked that $4,000 be borrowed in anticipation of taxes for the general fund. It was so ordered. Mr. Tolles, from the committee on lights and trees, recommended that the four electric lights asked for to be located on North avenue between Berckman street and Leland avenue, be granted. All voted for the lights except Messrs, Ginna, Dumont, and Frost. Mr. Dumont objected seriously to the additional expense owing to the financial condition of the treasury. He stated that the council was now within a small amount of the limit of the appropriation and the street committee had passed the limit.

Mr. Tolles thought the lights should be granted, as there had been very few lights asked for this year. Mr. Barrows wanted to know if the petition came from the freight house officials. Mr. Tolles informed the inquiring member that it did not. Mr. Ginna thought it unwise to grant the petition on account of the depleted condition of the funds. On a vote the petition was granted, but a similer petition for four lights on South avenue between Leland avenue and Terrill road, was not granted. Messrs, See, Barrows, Dumont, Frost, Serrell, and Westphal voted in the negative. There being no further business council adjourned.

"The Burning of Leaves."

An important meeting of the Town Improvement Association will be held in the Y. M. C. A. hall on Friday, at 4 p. m., when the subject for discussion will be "The Burning of Leaves." This is considered an important subject just at this season, when the leaves will soon begin to fall. There will also be a special meeting of the executive committee at 3 p. m., in the same place.

"Boys will be boys," but you can't afford to lose any of them. Be ready for the green apple season by having DeWitt's Colic and Cholera Cure in the house. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

HE IS AGAIN NOTIFIED

Mr. Bryan Accepts the Silver Party Nomination.

MEETS THE COMMITTEE AT LINCOLN

The Notification Took Place in the Open Air and the Speeches Were Not Long —Parade, Fireworks and Enthusiasm by the Citizens.

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 9.—The national silver party, through its regularly appointed committee, last night formally notified William Jennings Bryan of his nomination by its convention at St. Louis. The ceremonies attending the notification were in strong contrast to those at the meeting at Madison Square garden last month when Mr. Bryan and Mr. Sewall were officially informed that they were the choice of the Chicago convention. Instead of the spacious auditorium with its boxes and galleries, last night's function took place in the open air on the plaza and lawn in front of Nebraska's state capitol building. With the exception of those seated in a few score of chairs on the speakers platform and directly in front of it all the audience were standing. The most marked difference between last night's ceremonies and those in New York was the fact that Mr. Bryan did not read his speech in answer to the information formally given by the committee of the silver party. He made a speech neither long nor short, without the aid of notes, and was frequently applauded. Lincoln's appreciation of Bryan's second visit home since his nomination was shown by parading of free silver clubs, the display of fireworks and frequent exercise of lung power through tin horns and the old-fashioned yell.

Officially Notified.

It was 9 o'clock when Mr. Bryan appeared on the platform. Norris Humphrey of Lincoln called the assemblage to order and in a few words presented George A. Grout of Ohio, chairman of the committee appointed by the national committee to notify Mr. Bryan. Mr. Grout's address was short and at its conclusion Mr. Bryan stepped forward to reply. He said, in part: "Mr. chairman, chairman of the notification committee and the members of the committee: I beg to reply at this time without the formality of a letter. The platform adopted by the silver convention contains but one plank, the plank upon the money question, or upon the silver question, is identical in substance with the silver plank of the Chicago platform. As I have already discussed at length that plank, and as it will not be necessary to enter into any extended discussion at this time, I beg to assure the committee that I accept the nomination so generously tendered by them on behalf of the silver party, in the spirit in which the nomination was tendered."

Chicago Ticket Endorsed.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 9.—The Saratoga county democratic convention at Ballston Spa nominated William J. Delaney of Saratoga Springs for member of assembly and resolutions endorsing the Chicago platform and Bryan and Sewall were adopted.

Injunction Against Druggists Association.

New York, Sept. 9.—John D. Parks & Son have obtained a temporary injunction restraining the National Wholesale Druggists association from conspiring or combining together, or with other persons, to prevent the firm from freely selling proprietary drugs or other goods. The firm submitted in support of its charge of discrimination on the part of the association an affidavit from a wholesale druggist saying that this association had notified its members that he was selling the Parks & Son proprietary medicines, and on that account the association refused to sell him except at long prices.

Senator Voorhees' Health Not Impaired.

Washington, Sept. 9.—James Paxton Voorhees, son of Senator Voorhees of Indiana, concerning the dispatch from Terre Haute reporting the failing health of his father, said last evening to a reporter: "The dispatch from Terre Haute is wholly without foundation. Senator Voorhees has been perhaps one of the hardest workers in public life, and the fact of his taking up to this time no part in the campaigd means nothing. His physician is authority for the statement from Mackinac, where the senator has been summering, that he is now entirely restored and is preparing to take an active part in the campaign in Indiana."

Albany, Sept. 9.—The National Hay association has just been incorporated with the secretary of state for the purpose of fostering trade and commerce in hay, straw and other like products and for advancing the interests of those having as common business relationship in the trade. BUSY ON SPEECHES

Major McKinley Obliged To Postpone His Visit to Zoar.

ENGAGEMENTS COMING TOO FAST

Charles Emery Smith Dines with the Republican Nominee and Gives His Views on the Outlook in Maine—Progress of the Campaign.

Canton, O., Sept. 9.—Major McKinley's engagements are multiplying so rapidly that he has decided not to go to Zear this week, but will spend today and to-morrow to the preparation of speeches which he is to make on Friday and Saturday. Charles Emory Smith dined with Major McKinley last night and left this morning for Erie, Pa., where he is to address the league clubs. He hopes to return to Ohio later in the campaign to make a number of speeches. Mr. Smith, who has just returned from a speaking tour in Maine, says the republicans will carry that state by a majority of probably 20,000. The visit yesterday of the Ohio editors who are in annual session here, greatly pleased Major McKinley.

SENATOR CARTER'S POSITION.

He Explains Why He Is Still with the Republicans in This Campaign.

Helena, Mont., Sept. 9.—Senator Carter's statement regarding the course of conduct he pursued as a delegate to the St. Louis convention is published to-day in the form of an open letter to the members of the republican state convention of Montana which the senator says he will be unable to attend. The senator lauds the republican party for its achievements and in reciting the action of the national convention on the currency question declares he was dissatisfied with the declaration in favor of the gold standard. The platform of the Chicago convention is denounced as a "load greater than silver can bear." He adds: "I do not believe in free coinage coupled with free trade and I do not believe both can be successfully established and maintained by our government. The free trade policy will render the establishment of bimetallism an utter impossibility. After looking the whole situation over it will be found that the republican party has not declared in favor of the gold standard, but in favor of the restoration of silver." He regards the republican declaration as too conservative, but as between its acceptance and that of the Chicago platform, "with its free trade and other objectionable features" the senator finds no room to hesitate and urges on the Montana convention the placing of McKinley electors in the field as its duty.

Livermore, the Colessie's New York agent, says she is probably on her way here, but does not think she was the vessel spoken.

A Man and His Sister Killed by a Train.

Middletown, N. Y., Sept. 9.—While crossing the tracks of the Ontario & Western railroad last evening James Cunningham, a prominent farmer of Bullville, and his sister were killed by an east bound passenger train. EDISON.

Some of Them Wanted from Montana to Orange.

"Why, you talk about cranks," said Edison recently at Orange to a New York World reporter; "I have more of them come around here than any man in the country. They come out with all sorts of schemes which they want me to puzzle through. These long-haired fellows, with dandruff on the shoulders of their coats, meander around here in shoals. One of them got in here the other day, and he was a walker, too. He belonged out in Montana and got the idea that he was the first man who ever invented an electric light, and that I had robbed him of it. So he came on here to make me give up half the proceeds; and he walked every foot of the way. You ought to have seen him when he got here.

"Some of the boys saw his trail downstairs and followed him up and told him I wasn't here but out at the mines, and I'll be hanged if he didn't walk there. When he got out there the foreman—we'd posted him—asked him if he hadn't invented the arc light. The man from Montana said he had. Then the foreman told him that I had not invented the arc light, but that it had been invented by Thompson. The Montana man wanted to know where Thompson was right away, and the foreman told him Thompson was down in Lynn, Mass.

"How do you get to Lynn?" asked the man from Montana. The foreman told him the road and he started to tramp down there. I expect any day to hear of his raising the deuce there somehow. We have 'em here all the time, but they don't bother me any."

PAPER GARMENTS.

The Latest Fad for People Afraid of Lightning.

A glass house and a feather bed used to be considered the lightning-proof mediums behind which timid persons could seek refuge from the possibility of being stricken by an electric bolt.

But these are old-fashioned ideas now, compared with the lightning-proof paper suit which a New York genius has just invented, patented and invited fearful and apprehensive people to try.

This suit is made of fiber pulp and can be made to look exactly like any other suit of clothes. Paper is a poor conductor, and a man arrayed in such garments might go forth and defy lightning, even if it should show special preference for him.

This is particularly the case if a hat is worn made of the same stuff. Inside of this should be placed a piece of newspaper, and inside the clothing should also be laid folds of a newspaper, which would do as well as a paper suit.

The paper suit is also a good thing for summer excursions, for if it is ruined in the rain there won't be much loss. Those whose nerves are upset by atmospheric disturbances had better wrap themselves up in paper during the electric summer storms, even if they do not have suits made up a la mode and with seams and buttons to hold them together.

Was Looking for a Queen.

A son of the marquis of Salisbury is much interested in bee farming, and this very mild hobby resulted in the wildest kind of excitement in the neighborhood of Hatfield recently. It all came about in this manner: Young Cecil, finding one of his hives queenless, sent an order to Welwyn, the nearest town to Hatfield, for a Carniolan queen—a famous Italian bee—and asked to be informed of the probable time of its arrival. The bee dealer sent off the bee by the next train and wired: "The queen will arrive by 3:40 this afternoon." When Lord Cecil reached the station to take possession of his bee he found the place thronged. The telegraph clerk had interpreted the telegram that her majesty was paying a sudden visit to Hatfield, and, being unable to keep such interesting news to himself, the information spread like wildfire.

Indian Defines Hypocrisy.

"Ugh! Much God and no Flour!" is an old chief's characterization of a sanctimonious Indian agent who stole the goods he was supposed to issue to the tribe. It would be hard to give a terser definition of self-deception or of hypocrisy.

"The Foot of a Fly"

says an eminent English doctor, "will carry enough poison to infect a household." In summer-time, more especially, disease germs fill the air, multitudes are infected, fall ill, die; multitudes escape. These messengers of mischief do not exist for millions. Why not? Because they are healthy and strong—protected as a crocodile is against gun-shot. It is the weak, the wasted, the thin blooded who fall; those who have no resistive power so that a sudden cough or cold develops into graver disease. We hear of catching disease! Why not catch health? We can do it by always maintaining our healthy weight.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, is condensed nourishment; food for the building up of the system to resist the attacks of disease. It should be taken in reasonable doses all summer long by all those whose weight is below the standard of health. If you are losing ground, try a bottle now.

COL. "PATTIE" WATKINS WED.

A Great Event in Ballington Booth's New Salvation Organization, the Volunteers.

New York, Sept. 9.—There was a great gathering of members, auxiliaries and friends of Ballington Booth's Volunteers at Carnegie hall last night on the occasion of the first official wedding in the history of the organization. The principals were Col. "Pattie" Watkins and staff captain Frederick A. Lindsay. The bride was one of the favorite post commanders in the Salvation army and among the first to join the standard of the new army. The groom is believed to have followed his lost heart when he transferred allegiance from the National Salvation citadel in Fourteenth street to the headquarters of the Volunteers in Union square. Mr. Lindsay was stenographer and typewriter for Miss Watkins during her connection with the Salvation army and continued in that capacity in the new organization. Commander Booth and his wife conducted the ceremony, which consisted of the reading of articles of agreement between the contracting parties, and a public invitation to any one present to make known any bar to the marriage. This was followed by public declaration on the part of the participants, each in turn, that they knew of no legal impediment to the union, after which the knot was tied in proper form by a clergyman. This was done because Commander Booth has not been ordained since the formation of the new organization, and he wished to avoid the possibility of giving offense by acting under the license which he obtained as the head of the Salvationists. The affair was of the greatest interest to all in any way connected with the Volunteers, as the bride, who was a prime favorite in the Salvationist ranks, is even more popular under the new banner. Delegations of Volunteers and their friends were present from Boston, Philadelphia, Syracuse, Scranton, Rochester and other places. The special incident of the evening occurred before the ceremony when Commander Booth, saying that though the bride's only duty usually was to answer the minister, yet on this occasion he wanted Col. Watkins to give them a solo. When the last notes of "Fight Manfully On," rendered in the bride's clear soprano voice, had died away, the hall fairly shook with the tremendous outburst of enthusiasm.

Knights Templars Conclave.

Utica, N. Y., Sept. 9.—Fine weather favored the Knights Templers annual conclave in this city. In the forenoon in Masonic temple the freedom of the city was tendered by Mayor Gibson, to which Grand Eminent Commander Noble made fitting reply. The eminent commander also delivered his annual address, in which he stated that the membership on May 31 was 11,037, of which 730 had been created during the year. The city is profusely decorated and the crowds of Masons and Sir Knights from surrounding towns is very large. The parade during the afternoon was a most imposing one with about 2,000 uniformed Sir Knights and twenty bands in line.

Locomotive Firemen's Convention.

Galveston, Tex., Sept. 9.—The fifth biennial convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen will be called to order on September 14. It will last one week. Eugene V. Debs is expected here a few days in advance of the meeting and Grand Master Sargent, it is understood, will arrive here on Saturday. The session, it is expected, will be one of the most important in the history of the organization. From advices received by the local committee more than 2,000 delegates will attend.

PHILIPPINE REVOLT

The Situation at Manila Reported To Be Very Serious.

BUSINESS AT A COMPLETE STANDSTILL

Insurgents in Cuba Continue Their Attacks on the Railroads—Bridges Blown Up with Dynamite and Spanish Troops Forced Back.

Madrid, Sept. 9.—A special dispatch from Hong Kong to the Imparcial says that the commander of the British gunboat Redpole has telegraphed from Manila that the gravity of the situation at the capital of Philippine islands is such as to oblige him to remain there with his ship. This message indicates that the position at Manila is very serious, though no details are obtainable owing to the rigor of the censorship. Business telegrams have been received at Hong Kong from mercantile correspondents at Manila advising against the shipment of further consignments of goods to the Philippines, and stating that business there is at a complete standstill.

Rebels Still Attacking Railroads.

Havana, Sept. 9.—The rebels continue their attacks upon the railways, and, as has been stated before, they have made travel by rail throughout the country very dangerous. Their latest exploit in this direction was the blowing up with dynamite of the suspension bridge over the Pedernales river, near Candelaria in the province of Pinar del Rio. A train which was conveying newly arrived troops to reinforce the Spanish soldiers in the field was compelled to return to Artemisa by the destruction of the bridge. Another train that was carrying a number of fresh troops to Batabano was fired upon by insurgents, but nobody was hurt. The towns of Cuevitas, in the province of Matanzas, and San Francisco de Paula, close to Havana, have been attacked by rebels, who were, however, repulsed by the garrisons. On their retreat the insurgents set fire to and destroyed several houses on the outskirts of the towns.

DEATH OF CAPT. A. P. COOKE.

Official News of the Sad Event Received in Washington from Paris.

Washington, Sept. 9.—An official dispatch from Paris has been received at the navy department conveying the news of the death of Capt. A. P. Cooke, U. S. N., in the French capital on Monday. Capt. Cooke was born in Cooperstown, N. Y., in 1836. He was graduated from the Naval academy in 1853 and first saw active service in Greytown, Nicaragua. In 1862 he joined Farragut's squadron and was present at the bombardments of Fort Jackson and St. Philip, the destruction of the Confederate flotilla and the capture of New Orleans. In 1863 he was in command of a vessel in Buchanan's flotilla, and in the same year, when Buchanan was killed in action, Cooke was put in command of the flotilla. In 1863 he served in the Red river expedition with Farragut and later with Porter. In 1867 he went as navigator to Europe with Farragut's flagship, the Franklin. In 1869 he was appointed head of the department of ordnance at the naval academy, and later published a text book on gunning which was used by the cadets. He was commissioned commander in 1870, commanded the torpedo boat Intrepid, the Alarm and the steamer Swatara. He was made captain in 1881 and commanded the Lackawanna in 1884-5 in the Pacific station. He also commanded the Vermont at Brooklyn, and in 1888 the Franklin at Norfolk. In 1890 he was ordered to New York as president of the board of inspection of merchant vessels.

Mrs. Dugan Sentenced at Hudson.

Hudson, N. Y., Sept. 9.—Mrs. Alice Dugan of this city who was the object of much misplaced sympathy and who obtained much notoriety in connection with arrest by New York officials for violating United States internal revenue laws has been sentenced to six months in Albany penitentiary for obtaining money under false pretenses.

Heavy Gold Withdrawals at Friscn.

Washington, Sept. 9.—The treasury gold reserve at the opening of business to-day stood at $103,251,749. The withdrawals of gold at San Francisco continues heavy. Since Sept. 1 the treasury has lost $2,750,000 in gold in redeeming notes presented, and since July 1 from the same cause the loss has been $31,250,000.

To Stump for McKinley.

New York, Sept. 9.—Ex-Gov. Pinchback of Louisiana has been invited by the republican national committee to deliver a series of addresses during the campaign. He will deliver several addresses in this vicinity. Judge N. W. Tenny has been assigned by Gen. Clayton to several speaking engagements in Virginia.

Anarchists Arrested.

Barcelona, Sept. 9. — Twenty-four anarchists have been arrested here in connection with the throwing of a bomb into a crowd of people who were witnessing the passing of a procession in honor of the festival of Corpus Christi on June 7 last, when eight persons were killed and thirty or more injured.

Connecticut Volunteers.

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 9.—The 23d regiment, C. V., at its annual reunion at Pleasure Beach yesterday elected the following officers: President, Major David H. Miller of Georgetown; secretary, W. H. Hine of Bridgeport, and an executive committee.

Fair Tonight and Thursday; Stationary Temperature.

The Press will be issued at noon again next Saturday, in order that all employes connected with the paper may view the features of the bicycle parade.

Gen. John M. Palmer and Gen. Simon Boliver Buckner, the National Democratic nominees for President and Vice-President, will be notified at Louisville Saturday night.

The delights of a bicycle parade have been dissipated so many times, just as we were about to gulp them down with pleasure, that we are, as a progressive city, bound to try it again.

The State committee of the New Jersey "sound money" Democrats are planning to be somewhat of a factor around about election time. They have decided to begin at once to get signatures to the petition which must be filed to get their electoral ticket on the official list of the Secretary of State. Eight hundred names are necessary.

It has been suggested to The Press that every housekeeper that can possibly do so should open their doors to the accommodation of 5,000 Christian Endeavor delegates who will visit this city next month. This is the time when the hospitality of Plainfielders will be tested. The delegates are required to pay board wherever they go, and if there are those who do not care for the money to be secured in entertaining, it would be a splendid idea to donate it to the expense fund, which the '96 Committee will have to grapple with in the endeavor to keep good the promises made when the convention was assigned to Plainfield.

There is no lack of confidence in the claims made on its own behalf by the Socialist-Labor party, which is running a Brooklyn man for President of the United States and a Paterson Alderman for Vice-President. In a bulletin addressed "To the Workingmen of the State of New York" this encouraging announcement appeared: "From now on and until victory is ours, and until freedom in co-operation has supplanted bondage in wagedom, there is but one true party of labor, the Socialist-Labor party. No time is fixed for the triumph of the labor party, which claims to have made in eighteen years in New York a gain of 9,000 votes. At the same ratio of increase the Socialists, if there is no new ballot law to prevent it, will be triumphant in 2000 or later."—Sun.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation, can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

Sent It to His Mother in Germany

Mr. Jacob Esbensen, who is in the employ of the Chicago Lumber Co., at DesMoines, Iowa, says: "I have just sent some medicine back to my mother in the old country, that I know from personal use to be the best medicine in the world for rheumatism, having used it in my family for several years. It is called Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It always does the work." 50 cent, bottles for sale by T. S. Armstrong druggist.

In a recent letter to the manufacturers Mr. W. F. Benjamin, editor of the Spectator, Rusiford, N. Y., says: "It may be a pleasure to you to know the high esteem in which Chamberlain's medicines are held by the people of your own state, where they must be best known. An aunt of mine, who resides at Dexter, Iowa, was about to visit me a few years since, and before leaving home wrote me, asking if they were sold here, stating if they were not she would bring a quantity with her, as she did not like to be without them." The medicines referred to are Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds and croup; Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, pains in the side and chest, and Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for bowel complaints. These medicines have been in constant use in Iowa for almost a quarter of a century. The people have learned that they are articles of great worth and merit, and unequaled by any other. They are for sale here by T. S. Armstrong druggist.

ASTONISHED SPARROW.

The Rhinoceros' Sneeze Was Too Much for the Bird.

He Sat Contentedly on the Beast's Nose Until the Explosion Came, and Then Fled Into a Dark Corner and Meditated.

It is not easy to astonish a sparrow, says the English Illustrated Magazine. You can scare it—"often scared as oft return, a pert, voracious kind"—and make it fly away; but that is only because the sparrow has the bump of self-preservation very prominently developed, and takes a hint as to personal danger with extraordinary promptitude. But though it may remove its small body out of harm's way for the time being, it is not disconcerted. You can see that by the way in which he immediately goes on with his toilet. Its nerves have not been shaken—that is evident from its obvious self-possession and the way it scratches its head and makes a note of the fly which went by. It would not commence at once a frivolous altercation with another of its kind if had been disconcerted.

And really, it is not to be wondered at that the sparrow should be beyond the reach of astonishment. Think of what it sees, and sees quite unconcernedly, in the streets of London. Put a tiger into Fleet street, or a bear at the bank, and the poor beasts would go crazy with terror. A single omnibus would stampede a troop of lions. Yet a sparrow surveys the approaching fire engine undismayed, and it sits with its back to the street when a runaway van comes thundering death down Ludgate hill. The small bird's life is, in fact, so made up of surprises that it regards the astounding as commonplace. So a fly, sititng down in a train, thinks nothing of finding itself in the next county when it gets up. Its whole existence is volcanic and seismic. It cannot settle on a hand without the hand moving. What would a dog think if, on going into a ten-acre field, the field suddenly turned over? But the fly is not put out of countenance by such "phenomena." It comes back to the hand. It is the same with the sparrow. It thinks no more of another wonder than the seven companions did of another dragon in the day's work.

All the same, I have seen a sparrow totally confounded and all to pieces. It was, I confess, only a young one, with just the promise of a tail, nothing more, and some odds and ends of fluff still clinging between the red feathers. I was looking at the rhinoceros, which was lying down close to the railings, and a very sleepy rhinoceros it was. Except for slight twitches of the tail and an occasional fidget of the ears, it was quite motionless. And the young sparrow hopping about in the inclosure, coming to the beast, hopped onto it, looking in the chinks of its skin for chance grains or insects. And it hopped along its back onto its head (the rhinoceros winked), and along its head to the little horn, and from the little horn onto the big one (and it blinked), and then off the horn onto its nose.

And then the rhinoceros snorted. The sparrow was a sight to see. Exploded is no word for it. And it sat all in a heap on the corner of the house and chirped the mournfullest chirps. "I hadn't the smallest notion the thing was alive," it said. "Oh, dear! oh, dear!" and it wouldn't be pacified for a long time. Its astonishment had been severe and had got "into the system." I remembered the story of the boy who sat on a whale's blowhole. Behemoth had got stranded on the Shetland coast. While the population were admiring it an urchin climbed on to the head of the distressed monster, and exultantly seated his graceless person on its forehead. He had but a short time to enjoy his triumph, and the next instant the whale, filling itself with air, blew such a blast through its blowhole that the boy was blown up into the air and out to sea. So said the veracious chronicler of the day—and I hope it was true, for little boys should not, under any circumstance, sit on the blowhole of whales. Nor young sparrows on the nostrils of a rhinoceros.

Returned After Eight Years.

A traveler pigeon of Antwerp breed, belonging to a farmer at Kerstop-den-Berg, failed to return home from a prize flight to Orleans in 1888. This pigeon, which was three years old at the time, and is now 11, has just come back to its old pigeon-cote after an absence of eight years. It is evident the intelligent creature must have been captured on its return in 1888, and was unable to effect its escape until quite recently.

Cruel and Unusual Punishment.

The singular punishment of bigamy in Hungary is to compel the man to live together with both wives in one house. Something of the terrors of the situation is indicated by the fact that a number of Hungarian bigamists have petitioned the government to have their sentences changed to 14 years' penal servitude.

FAIREST AND BEST.

When I go to that beautiful country,
Away from this mortal unrest,
And am asked, what I choose for my portion,
By the angel who loveth me best;

I think I shall kneel by my angel,
And kissing the hem of her gown,
I shall whisper: "Oh, fair and beloved,
The harp and the glory and crown,

"And all of the splendor awaiting
The pilgrims that Heavenward roam,
Would oppress and appal me, beloved,
I ask of thee only a home.

"One fair little spot, unmolested
By even the harps of the blest,
Where sheltered and happy the children,
Might grow in a quiet home-nest.

"I have waited so long, blessed angel,
I may not be worthy a crown,
But if all of my travel-stained garments
I might for a moment lay down,

"I would ask for the robe of a mother,
Who sits with her baby to rest;
For this is my dream, blessed angel,
Of all that is fairest and best."
—Agnes L. Hill, in Chicago Interior.

ESTHER AND THE MAN.

ESTHER was very late. The clock in the church tower opposite had sputtered 11 strokes in the frosty air, and still Esther did not come. Nor did Martin Howard, who had promised to look in for a smoke on his way home. Esther was staying with me. It is one of my principles that relatives should never stay in the same house. But Esther, becoming more prosperous, was moving into a more commodious flat, and was spending the interregnum of carpenters, whitewashers and paperhangers with me. The clock had struck the quarter past before I heard a cab drive up to the door. In a minute or so Esther's step sounded on the stairs—an agitated footstep, as of one who has something to say in a hurry, and Esther herself appeared.

"Oh! I've had such a fright," she said, breathlessly.

"Really! Dear me!" I said. "What was it?" Esther laid her sketch book on the table and threw off her cape.

"A man," she said, and stood looking at me.

"Come, it might have been worse," I said. "It might have been a cow, or an earthquake." Esther unskewered her hat and sat down.

"But he—followed me," she said, impressively,

"He didn't catch you?" I inquired.

"Don't be silly," Esther replied. "I tell you he followed me. I'll never think of walking home so late again—alone."

"Why did you to-night?" I asked.

"Well, you know, I had to do these sketches at the dress rehearsal, and I couldn't get away until 10:30. Then I could only get a bus to Oxford circus. And then I waited, and every bus was crowded, and I felt horrid waiting there. So I determined to walk. And as soon as I got out of the crowded part, I found there was a man following me."

"Close?"

"No, not very, but—"

"How did you know? Did you look around?"

"Of course I didn't. But a girl can tell when anyone is following her."

"She can tell a policeman," I suggested. Esther reflected a moment, as she drew off her gloves.

"Yes, of course," she said. "But the poor man wasn't really doing any harm, you know. So there was nothing to tell—really."

"Then why disturb yourself about him?"

"Oh, you can't understand how a girl feels," said Esther, looking a little annoyed.

"But," I said, after a pause, "I thought you came home in a cab."

"From the Marble Arch," said Esther. "I couldn't endure it any longer. I walked as fast as I could, and he walked just as fast. When I walked slowly to let him pass, he walked slowly, too. Twice I crossed the street. And—would you believe it—he crossed, too." Esther leaned forward in her chair to note the effect. I signified astonishment with my eyebrows in the usual way.

"And," she continued, "when I was nearly at the Marble Arch, I could feel him coming up behind me—quite near. I simply had to take a cab."

"It was a close shave," I said—"very close shave, indeed." Esther looked at me rather doubtfully.

"But—do you think he meant to do anything?" she asked.

"Well," I said, "I can hardly say, without knowing his previous career. Of course, he might have been a highwayman; and, on the other hand—Hullo, Martin! Come in."

"I beg your pardon," said Martin, halting in the doorway; "I thought you were alone."

"All right," I said, "I was expecting you. You know my sister. We were just discussing the possibility—"

"George, don't," said Esther under her breath. "—the possibility," I continued, of assault and battery and highway robbery upon an unattended young woman in Oxford street. What do you think about it?"

"That's rather curious," said Martin, sitting down. "Only this evening I have been—in a sense—protecting a female in distress. I was confronted by a problem, and I should like your opinion on it, Miss Matthews."

Martin looked at Esther, who turned slightly in her chair with an obviously assumed air of interest. I can never understand why Esther does not like Martin, though I am quite certain she doesn't.

"I spotted her," said Martin, "hurrying along Oxford street just in front of me. She was a lady, and I could see she was very uncomfortable at being out so late alone. It really distressed me to see her edging into the road to make way for polite and inoffensive people. When she heard a couple of men coming along singing she almost ran, and then almost stood still to let them get in front of her. Now there was a problem for me."

"I don't see that there was any problem at all," said Esther, turning her face a little more toward the fire away from Martin.

"Here was a girl," said Martin, "who was frightened, though there was really nothing to be afraid of—so frightened that she was running backward and forward across the road whenever she saw anyone within 30 yards. Doubtless she was a silly little goose. But she was a fellow creature. And as I was going in the same direction, it was my obvious duty to assure her of safety. The problem was — how to assure her. I may smoke, mayn't I?" Martin lit a cigar, and continued: "My first idea was to follow her until I saw her safely at home. But then it struck me that she wouldn't know I was behind, and so I should be doing her no good at all and giving myself a lot of trouble."

"You might," I suggested, "have called a cab and offered to give her a lift." Martin shook his head.

"HULLO, MARTIN! COME IN."

"No," said he, "that would never do. Do you think so, Miss Matthews?"

"I really don't know anything about it," said Esther.

"Well," said Martin, "this was my solution. I determined to address her respectfully—tell her I noticed her embarrassment—assure her I was respectable—lived in a house and served on juries and all that—and offer to walk a dozen yards behind her until she reached her front door and then leave her without speaking. What do you think of that?"

"You didn't do it?" I said.

"No," said Martin. "Just as I had nearly overtaken her a lot of rowdy men came along, and she jumped into a cab. So I didn't bother myself any further."

"What did she look like?" asked Esther, with her face still turned toward the fire.

"O, like a girl," said Martin, "just an ordinary girl—with one of those silly capes that girls wear."

"Anything like this?" I asked, picking up Esther's cape.

Martin looked at the cape—at Esther, whose face looked very red in the firelight—at the sketch book on the table, and then at Esther again.

"I will say good-night," said Esther, rising.

"Oh, but—" stammered Martin, "you're not—"

"It was nice of you," said Esther, "you gave me a dreadful fright."

"But, my dear Miss Matthews, I was only anxious to do you a service."

"It is not pleasant," said Esther, "to be followed by a strange man."

"But I'm not a stranger," said Martin, "I've known you ever since you wore—I mean since you were quite young."

"But I didn't know it was you. How could I? You should have come and told me."

"You see, I didn't know it was you."

"You ought to have known," said Esther. "And," she continued, after a moment's pause, "if you didn't know, it was very wrong of you to follow me—very wrong, indeed."

Esther gathered up her hat, cape, gloves and sketch book, and left the room. Martin and I looked at each other.

"I say, old man," he said "you don't imagine for a moment—"

"Plain or white soda?" I inquired.—Black and White.

A GOOSE THAT GOT A FOX.

Epilogue of a Day's Hunting with Sensitive Hounds.

"HE'S got guns," said the man who had just come from up the river, "but, then, so's a gun store got guns, and it doesn't pretend to do any shooting. He's got nice clothes, too, for going shooting in, about as nice clothes as I've ever seen; but as for the shooting he does in them—" Here the speaker's power of expression collapsed and failed him utterly. He glared around the table hopelessly, and then clutched his glass.

As the cool, comfortable chink of the cracked ice proclaimed the falling of the level of the liquid in the thin glass, his emotion was soothed. The waiter read the promise of a tip in the glow of contentment which overspread his countenance, and as a rosy view of the world replaced the bitter memories of the shooting trip he exclaimed, with a sigh of deep satisfaction:

"Oh, but you should have seen that goose of his!"

The waiter was sent scurrying away for more supplies lest the man from up the river should become despondent again, and the story of his friend's goose was begun.

"I can't expect you fellows to appreciate the good qualities of that goose because you haven't seen his dogs," he said. "I didn't myself until after I had been out hunting with his dogs. But from the time I got there he kept bragging about the goose. It didn't seem to have any particular points superior to other geese, and it had a good deal fewer feathers. That was because an eagle tried to carry it off one day. The eagle swooped down and sank its talons into the goose's back and tried to fly away with it. But the goose fought it so with its wings that finally the eagle was glad to get away by itself, and left the goose strutting proudly above the lawn with half its feathers scattered over the grass. Jim thought an awful lot about it from that moment.

"'It's the finest fighting goose in the state,' he said. 'There isn't another that has a record of whipping an eagle.'

"So he started to give the goose an education. He taught it to dance and shoo the cows, and it got the bighead and fought the servant girls and made a general nuisance of itself. It seemed a peculiar thing to make a pet of; but, then, as I said, I hadn't seen his dogs at work.

"The third day I was up there it was so hot that Jim backed out of pretending to go shooting, and just wanted to be lazy.

"'Let's go fox hunting,' he said. 'I've got the finest hounds in the state for foxes. Once they strike a trail, they'll never let go, even if they have to follow it all day. We'll just set 'em after a fox, and sit in some cool, shady spot till they drive the fox past us. Then we'll shoot the fox.'

"He had an old hound and a young hound and a bird dog.

"'That bird dog isn't much good for foxes,' he said, 'but if I don't take him along, I'm afraid his feelings would be hurt, he's a very sensitive dog. But he's a fine bird dog. The only fault I ever found with him was that he slept too soundly, and wouldn't come when he was called. Just turn his head the other way, will you, while I put the guns in the wagon. He don't like the sight of a gun, now, he's so sensitive.'

"It seems that the dog used to sleep so soundly that one day some boys, as an experiment, dug a mine under him as he lay sleeping on the lawn, filled it without disturbing him, laid a fuse 20 feet away and blew the dog up. It woke the dog up, but ever since then he had been gun shy.

"We drove along with the dogs trotting behind us until we came to a farmhouse. There some sheep came out into the road. As soon as he saw them the young hound set up a howl, turned about and, with his tail between his legs, scooted for home. My friend looked annoyed.

"'I ought to have thought of it,' he said. 'That dog is so sensitive. I had to punish him for chasing sheep, and now, whenever he sees sheep, he gets ashamed and runs away.' But we don't really need him, for that old hound would drop dead on the trail of a fox before he would abandon it.'

"We got to a place where Jim said foxes were plenty, and turned the old hound loose. We didn't pay much attention to the bird dog.

"'You couldn't expect him to do much with foxes,' my friend said, 'for he's only a bird dog; but he won't do any harm if we let him run about, and it will please him.'

"It was a hot day, as I told you, and he had taken me to the hottest place in the whole country, or rather to the next to the hottest place, as I discovered later. We sweltered there while the old hound went dubbing around in the shade.

"'Hadn't we better shake him up a little?' I suggested, when I was in the condition you reach after ten minutes in the steam room.

"'No, no,' Jim exclaimed, hurriedly. 'He's nervous, too, and so easily put out. Let him alone and he'll get along all right.'

"He said we must leave the hound in the shade and stay in the hot sun ourselves, so as not to interfere with him. So I left Jim and the hound together, and strolled over to a swamp where the bird dog had gone nosing about, and where I could hear him yelping. I thought he had discovered a bird, but presently I spied a fox coming loping along with the bird dog at his heels. The dog didn't seem in any hurry to catch up with the fox, and all that the fox seemed to want to do was to keep out of sight of the hound, which was still dubbing away at a distance of only a few hundred feet.

"I watched them a little while. Every time the dog came near me he seemed to look up with an appealing expression, and so for fear of hurting his feelings I thought I would shoot the fox. But as soon as I raised my gun, and he caught sight of me, he uttered a loud howl and darted away for home with his tail between his legs. Jim came running over toward me to see what the matter was.

"'Bless me!' he said, when I told him, 'I'm so sorry you frightened him. He won't get over it for a week. I ought to have told you that since he was blown up he can't bear the sight of a gun, he's so sensitive.'

"The heat and the sensitiveness of the dogs were making me tired by this time, and I said something about getting the dogs to a hotter place and ourselves to a cooler one or else setting about hunting in earnest. Jim saw that I was annoyed, and apologized for his dogs. His eyes brightened when I told him about the fox.

"I FOUND THAT HOUND CURLED UP. ASLEEP."

"'Now,' he said, 'you'll see what a clever hound can do. You'll have some sport now.'

"We chased the old hound about for some time and when we caught him we set him on the fox's trail and away he went. He disappeared over a stone wall in the direction the fox had taken, and finally we ceased to hear his voice.

"'He'll stick to that fox all night if necessary,' Jim said; 'but he'll drive him back here. You see that hollow over there? Well, that's where we'll have to wait.'

"The hollow was the hottest place I was ever in. There I roasted for two mortal hours. D'ye see all the flesh I've lost, and d'ye see the thirst I've got? We'll take the same again, waiter. Well, that's where I got it, and I haven't been able to catch up with it since. Jim kept saying:

"'Just wait five minutes more. I'm sure I hear them coming along.'

"At last I rebelled, and fox or no fox, got up and walked away. Just over the brow of the hill from where we had been hiding was the finest, coolest, shadiest dell you ever saw, with a little brook running through it. I walked down there to rest; and what do you suppose I found there, curled up on the softest bed of pine needles you ever saw? That hound we had been waiting for!"

The man's indignation was such that his throat hissed as the cooling beverage rolled down it.

"Of course," he went on, "you can't shoot a friend's hound even if you are mad. If any shooting's to be done, you've got to shoot your friend. I didn't want to hurt Jim, for, really, it wasn't his fault, as he didn't know any better, and so I merely kicked the life half out of the brute before he could get away, and then went up to Jim and told him I didn't care to hunt any more that day.

"When we got home we found a dead fox there besides the three sensitive dogs, and they told us that the goose was really responsible for its death. According to their story, it had sneaked into the farmyard and the goose had caught sight of it and squawked and shooed it like mad. That brought up the bird dog and the young hound, and the fox dodged into the barn, where a horse kicked and killed it before it had a chance to get at the goose.

"Jim believed the story, and it made him prouder than ever of the goose. I offered to stay over another day and go fox hunting again if he would let me take the goose along instead of the dogs, but he was so fond of his pet that he wouldn't risk it. So here I am. If anybody wants to appreciate a fine goose and get a big thirst, just let him go fox hunting with Jim's dogs, and—waiter, bring us another drink."—N. Y. Sun.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? DESERTIONS AND BATTLES.

Serious Trouble with the Crews of the Arctic Whaling Fleet.

New Bedford, Mass., Sept. 9.—Letters just received in this city from the Arctic whaling fleet in winter quarters at Herschell island, report an unusually thrilling experience in the winter and spring. There were thirteen ships there, with a total colony of about 500 souls. Early in the fall reports of rich finds of gold in the Yukoa valley created discontent among the crews and desertions followed as early as November. In the first attempt, two Germans ran away to walk to San Francisco, but gave it up and came back five days after the start. In January seven more deserted, but were pursued and overtaken. Four were brought back in irons, but three escaped in a pitched battle with rifles. About the middle of March twelve more deserted and were pursued by twenty officers and sailors. The deserters pillaged many of the native settlements and terrorized the Indians who fled to the fleet for protection. March 17 the pursuers overtook them and a battle ensued, in which forty or fifty shots were exchanged. The pursuit was then given up. Soon after the deserters devastated Hoffman's trading camp, which was in charge of a single Indian. On hearing of the affair Hoffman pursued with ten Indians, overtook the robbers and a desperate battle followed. One of the deserters was killed and one fatally wounded. The rest of the party surrendered, but only six were taken back to the ships in irons, as the others managed to escape on the way. The fleet was reported in excellent condition in May.

CONFESSES TO PERJURY.

A Former New York City Excise Commissioner Forces a Retraction.

New York, Sept. 9.—Edgar M. Tomlinson who testified before the Lexow committee and before the Loyal Legion that he paid money to Commissioner William S. Andrews to influence his action as a commissioner of excise, has confessed that the charge was not true and that he committed perjury in making it. Mr. Andrews brought a suit for slander against Tomlinson for the purpose, as he stated at the time, of compelling him to appear before a jury where the falsity of his accusation could be proven. Tomlinson was arrested and gave bonds, but instead of putting in an answer he wrote a letter to Mr. Andrews confessing that he had made a false charge and begging Mr. Andrews not to prosecute him. Mr. Andrews consented, and an order discontinuing the action has been filed in the supreme court, when the facts became known.

THE TURK'S REVENGE

Humane Action on the Part of Foreign Consuls Causes Trouble.

GAVE SHELTER TO MANY ARMENIANS

Permitted Them To Go Aboard Different Ships in the Harbor During the Recent Riots and Now Their Relanding Is Prohibited.

London, Sept. 9.—The Constantinople representative of the United Associated Presses, telegraphing under date of yesterday, says that during the recent rioting in that city the consuls of the various powers arranged that many Armenians should go on board the different ships in the harbor, where they would be safe from massacre. This humane action has resulted in a somewhat awkward predicament, as the government now forbids the relanding or transfer of the refugees. A conference of the ambassadors was held regarding the course to be pursued in the matter and it was arranged to appoint a mixed commission to take charge of the difficulty. The dispatch adds that the consulates are still engaged in sending Armenians of means out of the country. The government is shipping all Armenians of the lower class to their birth places. Many long time residents of the city have been obliged to leave their families and return to the places where they were born, their enforced departure entailing much hardship and pecuniary loss. Each man who is thus sent away receives from the government free passage and the sum of two dollars in money.

Massacred by Turks.

New Jersey—Heavy showers in middle and northern sections on 3d and a general and heavy rain on 5th and 6th has effectually broken the long drought; soil now in fine condition for plowing and seeding; cutting corn and digging potatoes general; severe hailstorm in extreme northeastern section on evening of 3d destroyed some fields of buckwheat and damaged tree fruits; temperature below and rainfall above normal. Pennsylvania—Shortage will result from drought, causing premature ripening of the late crops; local damage by frost in northern counties: considerable corn and buckwheat cut; fall seeding delayed by the dry weather; large grape crop reported. Heard Interesting Reports.

A regular meeting of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., was held last evening, at which time the veterans listened with interest to reports made by comrades Wm. C. Smith and Edward C. Morse, regarding the recent national encampment held at St. Paul. The next encampment will be held at Buffalo, and the question of the Post and Relief Corps of this city attending was discussed and there is a probability that the two organizations will attend the encampment in a body. Other business transacted was of a routine nature.

Young Girl Stricken Blind.

Miss Tiny Voehl, of Somerset street, youngest daughter of Jacob Voehl, is still confined to her room by illness, the saddest part being that she has been stricken blind, and an examination by a New York specialist gives little hope of her recovering her sight. She is a bright little lady and her sad affliction is deeply mourned by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

Petit Jurors.

The following Plainfielders were drawn yesterday on the petit jury for the October term of court: Christopher M. Fine, George H. Cook, Israel D. TenEyck, John E. S. Petrie, John W. Dodge, George D. Walsh, Joseph B. Morrison. They were notified last night by Constable Rockafellow. The Fanwood jurors are: Joseph Clark, George McCauley, Henry Kyte, Edward L. Hand.

At the State Convention.

Among the delegates from this city and the borough, who are attending the Democratic State convention at Trenton today are James E. Martine, Michael Flynn, Frank Vosseller, John Rafferty, H. O. Hance and David Kenney.

Sympathy.

Poor Plainfield. Rain has twice spoiled her bicycle carnival. Weeks of preparation and anticipation have ended in disappointment. The pretty and energetic city has our sympathies. —New Brunswick Times.

Mr. Saunders Will Not Talk.

Ex-Mayor William L. Saunders will not deliver a speech at the McKinley and Hobart banner raising, and has never said that he would. Though he says he is a Democrat he will vote for the Republican ticket.

—Patrick Rafferty paid $3 to the city for misbehaving himself yesterday by an over-indulgence in strong drink. He was arrested by Patrolman McCue.

—Michael Smith, residence unknown, was arrested yesterday by Marshal Hansen on Somerset street for being drunk and disorderly. Smith said he was going to Easton, and Justice Crosley gave him ten days in which to recuperate.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Pond, of Washington avenue, left yesterday for Wilmington N. C., where they were called by the serious illness of their daughter, Miss Florence, who has been visiting relatives at that place for the past few months.

Used Bottled Breath.

Mountain climbers will be interested to learn of the successful experiments of Dr. Berson, of Stassfurt, who by means of "bottled breath" has been enabled to ascend to great heights, both on land and in a balloon. The doctor, when endeavoring to get further above the level of the sea than anyone else has ever climbed or flown, carries along a cylinder of compressed oxygen, fitted with a tube for breathing. Whenever he experiences discomfort on account of the rarity of the atmosphere a few whiffs from the cylinder suffices to restore him.

Dr. Berson, by means of this device, recently ascended to an altitude of 31,300 feet, which is 2,000 feet higher than the summit of Mount Everett.

RESCUED FROM SNAKES.

Arrival of a Charcoal Burner Save Young Women from Rattlers.

While a party of young women from the normal school were delving about the rocks and dense undergrowth on Montecoe point the other day in search of arbutus they were surprised to see what they at first supposed was a large football.

As it approached, says the Beaver (Pa.) Argus, they became too badly frightened to stir, seemingly having lost the power to flee, for what they now saw was a compact mass of snakes wound tightly about each other, with their heads outward, tongues darting out and hissing like small steam engines.

The snakes had approached within a few rods when, fortunately, a stone upon which one of the young women was standing slipped from under her foot and she fell. In falling her eyes were for an instant removed from the approaching snakes. The spell was broken and she uttered a loud shriek and ran away, while her companions still continued to gaze in silence and unable to stir hand or foot at the approaching venomous reptiles that had evidently charmed them, as a cat does a bird. In her flight for safety the girl almost ran against a cabin occupied by a hardy charcoal burner and his family, to whom she excitedly explained the situation. The man of the house seized his shotgun and ran to the rescue. When he came in sight the girls were still standing like statues, not a muscle moving, every eye fixed on the approaching ball of snakes, now less than a rod distant and beginning to unroll themselves.

Taking hasty aim, before they had time to scatter or spring at their intended prey, the man let go both barrels of his gun. A number of the rattlers scurried away into crevices in the rocks and some more wounded and helpless were soon dispatched with blows from the butt of the gun. Then attention was directed to seven imperiled young women, each of whom, as soon as released from the spell of the snakes, fled, after uttering one ear-piercing shriek that was heard in the village, nearly a mile away, fallen unconscious.

Vigorous chafing soon brought them back to consciousness, although it was several hours before strength returned sufficiently to permit them to return home. Eighteen dead snakes were counted on the field of battle, though none was of large size.

CHEWED A CARTRIDGE.

It Exploded in the Horse's Mouth and Broke Its Jaw.

In front of the Mott street entrance to New York's police headquarters a big bay horse that works for a brewing company shot himself by chewing a loaded cartridge.

The animal not only shot himself, but came near shooting a shopgirl who was passing on her way to work. The horse belongs to the H. B. Schraman Brewing company, of Brooklyn. One of the firm's customers has a small lager beer saloon in Mott street, next to police headquarters. The horse and his mate drew a wagon load of beer to the front of the store about nine o'clock the other morning.

The driver carried several kegs of beer into the cellar of the saloon, leaving he horses unwatched. It was while the driver was in the cellar that the shooting occurred. It is supposed that that animal, while nosing in an ash barrel, got a cartridge in its mouth, and began to chew it. The cartridge exploded in his mouth with such a concussion that the report could be heard in the police building.

Those who arrived on the scene first saw the animal's tongue hanging about six inches out of his mouth, from which a stream of blood was flowing. The tongue was badly lacerated and the shot also broke the animal's jaw. The bullet that was discharged flew across the street from the animal's mouth.

Otto, the man-of-all-works at police headquarters, who was crossing the street at the time, says that it whizzed past his head and went through the balloon sleeve of a girl who was passing.

A veterinary surgeon was called to attend the wounded animal. The horse was then taken to Brooklyn. It is believed that he will not have to be killed, but he will probably lose his tongue as the result of the accident.

A Question of Importance—the question of prices.

We don't want anybody to think of this as a "cheap place." It is nothing of the kind. There isn't anything as thoroughly cheap as cheap hats. We can't afford to sell them. But there is such a thing as selling reliable hats at moderate prices. You'll find that method in operation here. You'll find that all our hats will stand the wear test. We sell nothing that we are doubtful about. There's good big money's worth in any hats here, from the ordinary sorts at $1.50 up to the genuine Youman at $5.00.

THOSE WHO WILL INSTRUCT THE PUPILS IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

All the Corps Are Either Graduates of Colleges or Normal Schools and Will Keep up the Established Reputation.

Plainfield's public schools have long been famous for their excellency, but this has only been possible by having a corps of energetic and efficient instructors. This year the Plainfield public schools stand higher than ever before and the credit for this is due to Superintendent Henry M. Maxson and his able assistants in every department. The present corps of teachers, that has charge of the instruction of Plainfield's children, is an excellent one, which would be hard to equal. All are graduates of colleges or normal schools and Plainfield can well be proud of her educational facilities for the young.

The teachers are as follows:

High School—Ira W. Travell, principal, senior; Ellen E. Niles, principal, junior; Mary Grace Caldwell, third grade; A. J. Knowlton, sciences; Alice M. Whitney, S. Lena Bass, fourth grade.

CHEST AND LEG CRUSHED.

P. and R. Brakeman Mortally Hurt at Bound Brook This Morning.

Frank Walcot, aged twenty-eight years, a brakeman on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, sustained injuries this noon, while coupling cars at Bound Brook, which in all probability will prove fatal. His chest was horribly crushed, as was also his leg. His assoaiates found him in a partially unconscious condition and his wounds were bleeding profusely. He was at once brought to the hospital where he now lies in a very critical condition.

The physicians have examined him and considered that the man cannot at present stand an operation. Walcot is married and lives in Philadelphia. His folks have been notified regarding the accident.

Wanted to Run the Place.

The old Conneely saloon, on Park avenue now owned by the Rising Sun Brewing Company, of Elizabeth, was the scene of a little excitement yesterday afternoon. An inebriated individual entered the saloon and tried to run the place. He had high words with everybody, refused to go out and wanted to fight the city. He finally left, however, only to be met by Patrolman McCue who had been summoned by the bartender. He gave his name as Theo. Wilson and was brought before Judge DeMeze this morning. His friends are now trying to raise his $15 fine.

Mr. Dunham's Condition Precarious.

There was a consultation of physicians last night over the condition of Joseph Dunham, who was stricken with paralysis Tuesday morning. He is in a comatose state and fears are entertained for his recovery.

The whole system is drained and undermined by indolent ulcers and open sores. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve speedily heals them. It is the best pile cure known. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

GOES UP TONIGHT SURE.

M'KINLEY AND HOBART BANNER TO BE FLUNG TO THE BREEZE.

Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone Will Deliver an Address on the Issues of the Campaign—Rain or Clear It Will Take Place.

Rain or shine, hail or snow, the Republican banner raising will take place tonight. At 8:30 o'clock, the faces of McKinley and Hobart will be revealed to the public gaze and keep a watchful eye on the politics of North avenue from now until the election.

The banner is to be stretched across North avenue in front of the Hotel Grenada. The Plainfield Cornet Band will open the battle and call the crowd together and then entertain it while the banner is being arranged.

If it is a clear night, and from present prospects it is likely to be, the banner-raising will be followed by speeches. Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone is down for the orator of the evening, and those who have heard him before declare him to be one of Plainfield's best speakers.

Should the ever ready rain put in an appearance, the banner will be raised amid the water and the crowd will be asked to adjourn to the Republican Association rooms and there listen to the address of the evening.

Death of an Estimable Resident.

Henry Wheeler, aged 81 years, died at his home, No. 410 Madison avenue, at six o'clock this morning, his immediate illness resulting from the recent extreme heat. Although ailing more or less for a long time, his condition was not considered dangerous until quite recently. His death was peaceful, passing away as he did surrounded by kind and loving members of the household. Besides the widow there survive him four children, Mrs. William E. Lowe, of this city, Mrs. Charles Lockwood, of Philadelphia, Mrs. George W. Ely, of New York, and a son. Decedent had in former years followed a variety of occupations, but about eight years ago he lost an eight-year-old son from the effects of which he was stricken down with nervous prostration. From this he never fully recovered, and has since then lived a retired life. In former years he followed real estate and mercantile pursuits.

Funeral services will take place from the house on Saturday afternoon at 3.45 o'clock, and the remains will be taken to Seymour, Conn., for interment.

Realty Looming Up.

A canvas of some of the leading real estate dealers in this city gives encouragement to the real estate market here. With a single exception the dealers were of the opinion that property is slowly but surely increasing in value, but few important transfers are being made just at this time when the political affairs of the country are on the qui vive. Homes that have been vacant in years past are now occupied, but this may be largely due to local causes. The prospect for big business in the real estate market here next season, some of the dealers say is most encouraging.

For an Ice Pond.

The Plainfield Ice Company yesterday consummated the deal for thirty acres of land in the Notch which will be used for an artificial pond to make ice in the winter. The land was bought of Charles Badgley, Mr. Wolfert and Mrs. Underhill. It takes in the site of the of the old French mill pond. F. A. Dunham commenced the survey today.

Stole Coal.

Michael Finity, of South Second street, was arrested yesterday for pushing coal off the coal cars between Plainfield avenue and Liberty street. He pleaded guilty before Judge DeMeza this morning of being drunk, but said he didn't know what he did. The Judge reserved his sentence until Saturday.

Taken From a Freight Train.

Patrolmen Flynn and Vanderweg captured two men on a freight train early this morning and arrested them. They gave their names as Chas. Martin and James Moffett. Judge DeMeza suspended sentence on them.

Miss Mary Belle Anderson, of Crescent avenue, is expecting to attend Hampton College, Virginia. On her way she will visit friends at Baltimore.

Mrs. Geo. W. Lowere, of Plainfield, and Mrs. Annie Belding, of Poughkeepsie, are visiting Mrs. Hiram Belding, of Gloversville, N. Y. They spent Labor Day at Mrs. H. Belding's beautiful cottage at Sacandaga Park, which is the great southern entrance to the Adirondacks. They were delighted with the beautiful park and will ever remember the curteous treatment they received at the hands of Mr. and Mrs. Belding and the best of friends they made while there.

SENT TO REFORM SCHOOL

LADS WHO STOLE FROM THE BOYS CLUB ARRANGED IN COURT.

John Hickory, the Westfield Wife Beater, Sent to Prison for One Year.—Another Brute Goes to Jail for Three Months.

The fall term of the court of general quarter session was opened yesterday morning, at Elizabeth, with Judge McCormick presided.

A considerable portion of the session was devoted to the making of citizens, and about thirty were naturalized. A large proportion of them were Germans, while others were Austrians, Danes, together with a number of former subjects of the British empire.

The criminal business before the court were several cases of minor importance, the prisoners awaiting trial being arraigned:

Albert Williams, the colored lad who stole "Jack" Price's bicycle from in front the Westfield bowling alleys, and then painted it to conceal its identity, pleaded guilty, but as his mother promssed to take better care of him, he was paroled with the understanding that if he did not behave he would be sent to the state reform school.

Two youths, William Riss and Dorsey Conozer, both of Plainfield, pleaded guilty to breaking into the Boys' Club in this city and stealing books and tools valued at $33. The court entered an order committing them to the reform school.

The wife beater, John Hickory, of Westfield, was the next arraigned. On July 29 he beat his wife, who is 70 years of age, so brutally that she was believed to be fatally injured. She was removed to the General Hospital, where for a week she hovered between life and death. Her condition was so bad that an "ante mortem" statement was taken, but she afterward rallied and recovered.

The trouble between Hickory and his wife arose because she asked him for a kiss when he was not in a kissing mood, and he wacked her over the head with a hickory club.

When asked for his plea Hickory said, "I plead guilty; but it was the woman's fault." He was sentenced to one year's hard labor in state prison.

Wesley Sheperson, colored, was another Westfielder charged with assaulting his wife. She was placed upon the witness-stand and told how her husband and she had a difference, during which he struck her with an iron rod. The trouble was partly her fault. Sheperson went to jail for three months.

READY FOR FOOTBALL.

Young Athletics to Arrange for Games on the Gridiron.

All those interested in the formation of the Y. M. C. A. football eleven are invited to be present at a meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Football Association tomorrow evening at the Y. M. C. A. building, corner of Watchung avenue and East Front street. It is very important that all candidates for the team shall be present. Officers will be elected for the ensuing year and the work of preparing the eleven for the field will be begun at once. The meeting is called for 8 o'clock.

There is probably no team of any kind that has sustained Plainfield's reputation any better than the Alis Football team. Last year this club passed through many conflicts but still maintained its clean score. This year the eleven will again be seen on the gridiron strengthened at all weak points and ready to co-battle with any eleven of equal size and weight. Captain Royal T. Phillips has been very careful in his selection of his team and now announced the following line-up: Left end, Orville T. Waring; left tackle, Morris Dumont; left guard, Albert Finch; center, Walter Long; right guard, William K. Dwight; right tackle, Everett Peck; right end, Charles Woolston; quarter back, Willard Wadsworth; right half back, Harry Cuming; left half back, J. Vincent Rittenhouse; full back, Royal T. Phillips. Aaron D. Thompson, Jr., will act as manager.

The following games have been scheduled: September 19, Westfield at Plainfield; September 26, Pingry's second at Elizabeth. A game is being arranged with the Roselle team. The Alis boys will begin practicing on Monday and will average 119 pounds when in condition.

American Volunteers.

Staff Captain John Lindsay, of National headquarters, will lead the meetings of the local post at Reform Hall Sunday afternoon at 2:30 and evening at 7:30.

The engagement is announced of Miss Louise Pangborn, daughter of the late Isaac W. Pangborn, and W. Hull Western, son of Benjamin R. Western, of Washington Park.

NO ROOM FOR GOLD MEN

DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION DECLARED FOR FREE SILVER.

James E. Martine Talks and Strikes the Popular Chord By Saying That all Gold Men Must Leave the Convention.

The Democratic State convention at Trenton, yesterday, was well attended and very enthusiastic.

Samuel Fowler acted as temparary chairman. In his introductory remarks he predicted that the State would go for Bryan and Sewall by an immense majority. After a speech by ex-Congressman Augustus W. Cutler and some routine business the convention adjourned until 2 o'clock.

On reassembling Senator William D. Daly was chosen as permanent chairman. As he stepped to the front of the platform he was greeted with cries of "Our next Governor!" and "Our next United States Senator!" He introduced Congressman Benton McMillin, of Tennessee. James E. Martine spoke of Messrs Cutler and McMillin's addresses:

"Hon. Augustus Cutler made a strong speech insisting that this was no new theme but that both parties had been declaring for free coinage for years. His remarks were cheered wildly. The talk of Hon. Benton McMillan, of Tennessee, was replete with statistics and facts. He said that no permanent prosperity would come to the toiling millions except through bi-metallism. He quoted Hon. Wm. McKinley as urging bi-metallism. He said McKinley's stand today was but McKinley drunk and McKinley sober. His address was eloquent and forcible."

J. E. Martine secured the floor and insisted that this was no time for Democrats to falter or hesitate. There was no middle ground to stand upon, he said. "Democrats cannot serve God and mammon, you must either be for or against us," he said, and to this end he insisted that all lukewarm or apathetic members of the State Committee who could not support the Chicago platform and its candidates should in common fairness and decency immediately withdraw from the same. He then read a reeolution adopted by the Union county delegates declaring that since Hon. Samuel Williams, member of State Committee from Union county, had declared for gold and the Indianapolis platform, that his place be declared vacant, and that William D. Wolskeil of Elizabeth be elected in his stead. Mr Martines address and thoughts captured the convention as with storm and delegations all over the State followed suit insisting that their members must declare for Bryan and Sewall or get out.

Former Senator William J. Keys of Somerset county, member of the State Democratic Committee, took occasion to place himself on record.

"I am now, as I always have been," said he, "a Democrat, and will support and vote for Bryan and Sewall. I am ready, willing and eager to go into the fight. I am no prophet if New Jersey does not give Bryan and Sewall her electoral vote."

The following Presidential electors were chosen:

At large, Johnson Cornish, of Warren county, and Eckhard Budd, of Burlington county; first district, David M. Chambers, of Camden county; second district, I. N. Carmichael, of Ocean county; third district, James J. Meehan, of Somerset county; fourth district, N. C. Barrick, of Hunterdon county; fifth district, Carlton M Herrick, of Passaic county; sixth district, Jeremiah O'Rourke, of Essex county; seventh district, James F. Minturn, of Hudson county; eighth district, Edwin A. Raynor, of Essex county.

The following were the most important planks of the platform:

The Democratic party of New Jersey, in convention assembled, ratify and indorse the National Democratic platform adopted at Chicago and the candidates nominated there, the Hon. William J. Bryan, of Nebraska, and the Hon. Arthur Sewall, of Maine, and hereby pledge our honest, earnest and hearty endeavor to secure the election of these, our candidates. We insist that the platform adopted at Chicago is thoroughly Democratic and purely American, and with its enforcement we firmly believe that relief will come to the toiling masses and it will advance the general prosperity of the country.

We demand that the tax laws of this State be amended to provide for the equal taxation of property not used for religious, charitable or educational purposes.

We declare it to be the principle of free government that the minority should submit to the will of the majority. Any other policy would be destructive of self government and party organization.

Plenty of Work in Prospect.

At the regular meeting of Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe, I. O. R. M., held last evening, routine business was transacted. Next week the third degree will be conferred on two candidates, and on Wednesday evening, September 23d, the tribe will be entertained by the good and welfare committee, under the direction of chairman, Asa D. Pope.

"Boys will be boys," but you can't afford to lose any of them. Be ready for the green apple season by having DeWitt's Colic and Cholera Cure in the house. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

SO MRS. FREY HAD TO PROVIDE FOR THE FAMILY.

Overseer of the Poor Marx Was Called In and Had the Husband Arrested His Past Record Not a Good One.

The records of the city court show that during the last four years Charles Frey has been a frequent visitor at the court room. Yesterday he made another visit and was called on to answer the charge of non-support of his wife, made by Overseer of the Poor Marx.

Frey lives, or has been living at least, on Spooner avenue with his wife and two small children. Mrs. Frey works out by the day, while her husband works at almost anything that comes handy when he gets a chance, which does not seem often. All the money he does earn, his wife claims, is immediately spent for rum. It is claimed that Mrs. Frey has been supporting the whole family and works night and day to do it. During these hard times she has found it almost beyond her efforts, and Overseer Marx was thus called into the affair. He made a complaint against Frey and Tuesday night Patrolman McCue arrested Frey. He was brought before Judge DeMeza and held in $50 bonds on his own recognizance for trial Saturday morning.

Frey has quite a record in the police court. On March 4th, 1893, he was arrested for being disorderly and fined $5. A year later he was fined $10 for striking and abusing his wife. He was arrested three other times for disorderly conduct and fighting, but escaped a fine or imprisonment.

FELL BY THE WAYSIDE.

A Young Traveling Agent Goes on a Toot and Lands in Jail.

A well-dressed young man staggered into the yard of Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday afternoon and fell on the grass in a heap. It was first thought that he was injured, but investigation showed him to be drunk. An officer was sent for and Patrolman McCue appeared and took the man to the lockup in a hack. He was very impudent in his maudlin way, but this morning became quite pentinent.

He said that he was a traveling salesman for a wholesale drug house and promised to leave town at once if the Judge would suspend sentence, which he did.

LOOKING OUT FOR THE GAME.

Annual Meeting of the Protective Game Association—Election of Officers.

The first annual meeting of the Protective Game and Propagating Association of Union, Middlesex and Somerset counties, was held in Percy C. Ohl's office in the Babcock building last evening. The attendance of members was large and considerable business was transacted. President Goff was in the chair and Secretary Henry Haurand recorded the proceedings.

New printed copies of the constitution and by-laws were received and accepted and the bill for the same was ordered paid. The badge of the society was also settled upon. It is to be of silver and similar in design to the badge now used by the State Game and Fish Protective Society.

The report of the treasurer showed that considerable money had been spent during the year for signs, detective services, etc., but there is still a balance in the treasury to meet contingent expenses.

Several new applications for membership were received and referred until the next meeting for approval. The membership for the year had been limited to twenty-five, but last night the number was increased to thirty.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President, John Goff; vice-president, Joseph A. Blatz; secretary, Henry Haurand; treasurer, R. H. McCullough; counsel, William Newcorn; board of directors, John Dixon, John Goff, R. H. McCullough, Henry Haurand, William Pierson, Louis Van Dyke, Joseph Blatz, Frank Day and Harry Dreier.

Cent a Day Offering Due.

The Home Missionary Society of the First Presbyterian Church, will hold their quarterly meeting, in the Chapel on Friday, at 3:30 o'clock. The meeting will be addressed by Mrs. Pingry of Elizabeth, and tea will be served at 5 o'clock. The cent a day offering for the quarter is due at that time.

—The Junior Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church, after having discontinued its meetings during the summer, will hold the first meeting of the fall Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Subject: "What good can we get from the Bible?"

Mrs. Abbott and stepson, Leon, of Martinville, have returned home after a visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Blimm, of Somerset street.

YOUNG GIRL ABDUCTED.

Spirited Away in the Dark Last Monday Evening.

KIDNAPPED BY AN UGLY ITALIAN.

Missing For Two Days Before a Search Was Made For Her and Then the Excited Parents Tried to Find Her at the Italian Boarding House Without the Aid of the Police—Found Her Hat in the Grass and Heard Screams for Help—Police on the Case.

Quiet and peaceful as it seems these delightful September days, Plainfield was the scene of a dastardly act last Monday evening when a bright young girl was spirited away and now lies hidden in some secret place, known only to her abductors.

Last Monday was a beautiful day and two big train loads of people from Plainfield went to Boynton Beach to spend the day. Among the merriest of the pleasure goers was fifteen year old Louise Gilles and a girl friend. Louise lives at 13 Lake street. All went well on the excursion and they left the station together on the arrival at Plainfield. After walking about a block together, Louise left her companion and started home alone. That was the last time she was seen by her friends, and what followed is still shadowed in doubt.

Mr. and Mrs. John Giles, the parents of the missing girl, live on Lake street with their family of five children. Lake street is a narrow thoroughfare connecting Woodland avenue and Hillside avenue, between Watchung and Prospect avenues. It is sparsely settled and is, indeed, a lonely place at night. Most of its residents are Italians.

Mr. and Mrs. Giles are both hard-working people and it takes the united efforts of father and mother to make both ends meet. Mrs. Giles has most of the care of the children. That eventful Monday night Mrs. Giles did not sit up for her daughter; tired with the day's work she retired early and did not wait supposing that she would come in later. She rose early in the morning and hurried away leaving, as she supposed, her child in the room. The father also left early.

When they returned in the evening, their daughter was no where to be found but as the family of a friend of Louise's had gone on a short outing, they supposed that Louise had accompanied them. That was Tuesday night and the party would return Wednesday night.

Wednesday morning, Mrs. Giles remained at home with her two youngest children, one of whom is a mere baby in arms. While she was about her household duties, an Italian neighbor approached the house. He was apparently greatly excited about something.

Wonderingly, Mrs. Giles came to see what was the matter. In his broken English he hinted at a story that made the mother's flesh creep. 'Twas something about Louise. "Drag," he muttered and pretended to drag someone, then he tried to tell something about the Italian boarding house on Terrill road, how somebody was there tied, he thought, had tried to talk to him, and then he put his fingers on his lips, as if signifying that she could not. Then he went away.

After long hours of waiting in which teraible thoughts of her daughter's peril filled the mind of Mrs. Giles, until the father and sister of the kidnapped child reached their home. Then a searching party was arranged and father, mother, sister and the girl, whom had accompanied Louise on the excursion, started for the Italian shanty that lies half hidden in the woods at the corner of Terrill road and North avenue, a place lonesome enough in the bright sunlight, but terribly so at night.

They came by the way of the main part of the city, but finding no policeman, went on alone. They had just climbed up the railroad bank when they caught their first glimpse of the shanty. The occupants were sitting around and, as the frightened faces of the searching party appeared the Italians, chattering like monkeys in their lingo, hurried into the hut and closed the door.

At the same time, two shrill screams were heard so loud and piercing that even the little mongrel curs, that dragged out a weary existence around the huts, barked in answer. Entrance into the hut was demanded but the natives of sunny Italy refused to admit them. The head man, Ernest, they call him, declared that the missing girl was not around there

Finally the watchers walked back as far as the standpipe, when suddenly there was a stir at the shanty. Lights moved around and all seemed excitement. Two more screams followed and then all was quiet again.

Finally about 9 o'clock the police arrived and a search was made of the shanty. On the door was hung a hat that was identified as belonging to the missing girl. She was dressed in light green.

The police are now working on the case while the family are at home, nearly frantic with anxiety and fear over the fate of poor Louise Giles.

CAPE COD TERRAPIN.

Interesting Facts About a Very Popular Reptile.

The "Diamond Back" Affords a Comfortable Living to Those Who Are Engaged in Capturing It.

It will be a great shock to the pride of Maryland and Pennsylvania to learn that terrapin are caught on the coast of Massachusetts and that they command a higher price in the New York market than those from anywhere else.

Where the Massachusetts "diamond backs" come from or when they come or whether they are natives of these waters are questions that have never been answered. Indeed, naturalists seem to have entirely overlooked, until very recently, the fact that the terrapin was to be found on the Massachusetts coast.

When the presence of terrapin was brought to the attention of a few men who were interested in natural history it was thought at first that the reptiles had migrated from the south. But many of the terrapin were fully grown, and as a full-grown terrapin is believed to be not less than 50 years old it was concluded that they were probably natives of Massachusetts. If this conclusion is the correct one it is the more remarkable that the fashionable turtle managed to keep himself out of text-books on natural history.

Terrapin were first discovered in Massachusetts by a southern negro, Dempster Hill, who happened to see several of the "diamond backs" sunning themselves on a sandbar. He had not lived in the south for nothing, and, recognizing the value of his find, he said not a word to anybody, but suddenly developed remarkable energy.

Like most of his race he did not worry about the future, and, when he had caught a dozen or two terrapin, he sold them and lived on the proceeds until his funds needed repletion, when he became again energetic.

Hill made a very comfortable living in this way for several years before his white neighbors awoke to their opportunities.

This was a number of years ago, and when Hill died his mantle fell on a white man, who is now the principal terrapin fisher on Buzzard's bay.

Terrapin are to be found all along the Cape Cod coast as well as in Buzzard's bay. This year both the "diamond" and smooth back terrapin have been very scarce in these waters or else the fishermen have not had their usual success in finding them.

Twelve years ago terrapin were caught in great quantities in Barnstable, South Wellfleet and other points on Buzzard's bay, but most of the fishing is now done in East Wareham and vicinity, where the most expert "diamond back" hunter on the coast lives.

Terrapin are known on Cape Cod as "turpin" and the visitor from the city who gives the word three syllables is regarded as hopelessly ignorant. The native of Maryland prefers to speak of this delectable inhabitant of a shell as a "bird," possibly because its flavor has something of a suggestion of the salt marsh in the early morning.

It is in the salt marshes bordering the creeks which have their outlet in Buzzard's bay that the choicest "turpin" find their homes in the winter months. To protect themselves from the cold they dig down in the sand, sometimes to a depth of five feet, and lie dormant until spring. In the interval they go without food. With the approach of warm weather appetite returns, they resurrect themselves from their sandy graves and until winter comes again they swim about in the water, catching the oysters, crabs and fish on which they subsist or lie sunning themselves on sandbars for hours.—Boston Herald.

The Law and the Lady.

Patient Man—Suppose a woman makes it so hot for her husband that he can't live with her, and he leaves her, what can he do?

Lawyer—Sue him for support.

Patient Man—Suppose she has run him so heavily into debt that he can't support her, because his creditors grab every dollar as quick as he gets it, besides ruining his business with their suits?

Lawyer—If for any reason whatever he fail to pay her the amount ordered, he will be sent to jail for contempt of court.

Patient Man—Suppose she drives him out of the house with a flat-iron, and he's afraid to go back?

Lawyer—She can arrest him for desertion.

Patient Man—Well, I don't see anything for me to do but go hang myself.

Lawyer—It's against the law to commit suicide, and if you get caught attempting it, you'll be fined and imprisoned. Ten dollars, please. Good day.—N. Y. Weekly.

Infant Curiosity.

A careful mother had impressed upon her little boy the necessity of ejecting the skins of grapes, and a few days afterwards she told him the story of Jonah and the whale.

"The whale is a very large monster," said the mother, "and he swallowed Jonah."

"Did he swallow other men, too?" asked the little boy.

"Well, I suppose he did," continued the mother, who was somewhat in doubt; and while she was hesitating about the continuation of the story, the boy interrupted:

"And, mamma, did he spit the skins out, too?"—Texas Sifter.

A Plain Fact.

"I would lay the world at your feet!" exclaimed the young man who reads novels.

"Really," she replied, "it's very good of you to suggest it, but you needn't trouble yourself. It's there already."—N. Y. Recorder.

BEAT THE LOST-PARCELS MAN.

How a Suburban Woman Secured a Nice New Umbrella.

"Pretty smart lot of women on them Galena division trains," said the lost parcels custodian at the Northwestern depot to a Chicago Post man.

"Why?"

"One of them comes in here yesterday and beats me out of an umbrella," replied the custodian, wrapping up a fan and handkerchief and labeling them.

"How?"

"She remembers that the last hard rain was July 21, and yesterday when the sun is shining she comes in here and asks me if any umbrella is left on the train that day. Of course there is. Find some every rain. I say: 'Yes; what train did you leave yours on?' She says the Elmhurst train. Now that don't tell anything. She says she's going to her sister's at Elmhurst, and she don't know this road at all. All the trains are Elmhurst trains. She's got me.

"Then I says: 'What kind of an umbrella?'

"And she says it's new. She can't recollect how the handle went, but she'd know if she sees it. Now, what can I do? I show her the umbrellas brought in that day, and she picks up the best one and she says: 'That's it.' And it is."

"How do you know it isn't her umbrella?"

"'Cause to-day the traffic manager sees her on the train with that umbrella, and hears her tell another woman how she got it, and he fetches it in here just as five other women break in here with the same game. Did they get umbrellas? Well, no—not till after the next rain."

IN MINE EXPLOSIONS.

Many Men Lose Their Lives Through Ignorance of What to Do.

Scientific inquiry is being directed to the saving of human life in mine explosions. Dr. Haldane has established the fact that the loss of life in colliery accidents is far greater than it need be when those who work in the mines and those who manage them have clearer knowledge of the right thing to do in the face of the calamity. In a recent mine explosion, where 57 men and 30 horses were killed, the cause of death in every case was proved to be not the want of oxygen in the air of the pit after the explosion, but to comparatively slow poisoning by carbon monoxide. Sufficient oxygen to support life was left in the airways all along the track of the explosion. It appears that men from want of knowledge now go straight to their death in endeavoring to escape. Dr. Haldane is convinced that hundreds of men have lost their lives by hurrying blindly toward the shaft, or by not retiring toward the face when they met the after-damp. In many parts of the mine there will be, beyond the limits of the explosion, abundance of air to effect dilution of the poisonous carbon-monoxide, on breathing which the men suddenly lose the use of their limbs and finally consciousness. So that a man who waits for the rescuers, or long enough for the after-damp to disperse, will be able to escape either by the intake, or, if this is blocked, by the return airways.

CITY SOLDIERS ARE BEST.

Modern Warfare Is Easiest Learned by Them.

The old saying of the recruiting sergeants that "the best soldiers come from the plow-tail" is hardly correct when looked at in the light of modern military experience. It is quite true that in the past regiments recruited from the country districts have again and again made themselves conspicuous for gallantry and endurance, but the changed conditions of modern warfare appear to have enabled the town-bred soldier to rather more than catch up with his country-bred comrade. Statistics show that he is more rapidly promoted, that he is more fertile in resource, more adaptable to circumstances and quicker in learning the details of his business, while the improved conditions of town life seem to have placed him nearly on a par with regard to stamina. In France there are no two opinions on the subject—the best soldiers come from Paris; and when it is remembered that after the practical destruction of the regular French army at Metz and Sedan the victorious veterans of Germany were held at bay for five months by the raw levies mostly drawn from the French towns, there seems but little doubt that the French opinion is correct.

SMALL PROFIT IN CIGARS.

Dealers Complain That They Make Very Little Money.

"There is not a large percentage of profit in cigars," said D. B. Talbert, of Baltimore, a cigar salesman, at the Metropolitan, to a Washington Star reporter. "And there is probably no line of goods in which customers swindle the dealers with so little compunction of conscience. There are 50 cigars in a box of ordinary goods, but the dealer seldom gets paid for 50, even though he credits none and gives none away.

"A man buys a cigar, taking it out of the box with his thumb and forefinger, at the same time closing his other fingers over another which rests in the palm of his hands. He gives the dealer a dime and almost invariably receives a nickel in change. Or he may buy a quarter's worth and gets one too many in the same way. This has caused some dealers to ask how many are wanted and to give out just what are called for, but it is doubtful if this is wise, as a customer likes to help himself, and goes where he can do so."

Didn't Pay to Be Funny.

M. Cleiftie, prefect of the department of the Bouches du Rhone, has just lost his place for trying to be funny officially. At a meeting in Marseilles the mayor of the city, who is a socialist, made a speech in which he declared that no one in Marseilles could have any confidence in the Meline ministry. The prefect in answer said that he was profoundly touched by this evidence of respect for the ministry.

FOSSIL MEAL.

A New German Product Which Has Many Uses.

A new product, called fossil meal, is being introduced from Germany for preventing the loss of heat from radiation which takes place to so large an extent from the uncovered surfaces of boilers, steam pipes, cylinders, and steam plant generally. It consists of infusorial earth, obtained from certain mines in Hanover, combined with other substances to secure greater strength and cohesiveness. This infusorial earth is composed of millions of minute organisms, whose hollow form gives to the fossil meal its high porosity, and consequently its non-conducting power. The use of this material, however, is not confined to the manufacture of non-conducting composition for steam pipes and engine and boiler surfaces. It is used in safe making as a fire-resisting compound, and by explosive manufacturers in the production of dynamite. It is in demand for cold storage purposes, for covering cold pipes from contact with the warmer external air. It is also employed in chemical manufacture, as a preventive against damp; for cleaning glass and metal; as a tooth paste; it is made up into blotting paper, and it is employed in the manufacture of sealing wax. It makes up into a firebrick of one-fifth the ordinary weight, with a fire-resisting quality equal to that of quartz. It has many other uses, one of which is filtration and it is being utilized for the domestic purification of water.

Sleep

Induced by the use of coca, opiate or narcotic compounds is bad, decidedly bad. It undermines the health and shatters the constitution and the patient is steadily growing into a worse condition—often resulting in the terrible slavery and misery of the cocaine and opium habit. Sleep induced by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla may not come as quickly, but it comes more surely, permanently and is

LI'S OPPOSITION TO WAR.

China's Greatest General Is Preeminently a Man of Peace.

Ex-Secretary John W. Foster contributes a sketch of "The Viceroy Li Hung Chang" to the Century. Mr. Foster says:

"Although the greatest general his country has produced in this century, he is preeminently a man of peace. Confucius, whose disciple he is proud to call himself, taught the folly of war, and the practice of the government and Chinese society in this respect is inspired by his teachings. While Japan has exalted the warlike spirit, and there the soldier is the idol of the people, in China the soldier is lightly esteemed, and always takes rank below the literary class. But notwithstanding this peaceful spirit, there is often a war party in China, and on two or three memorable occasions it has fallen to the lot of Viceroy Li to be placed in antagonism to it.

"The Kuldja question, about 1880, brought the country to the brink of war with Russia, and it was only by his most active resistance to the war party at Peking that a peaceful settlement was reached. It is now well known that he opposed the late hostilities with Japan. The government of the latter during the progress of the war obtained possession of and published certain memorials to the throne, dated in 1882, and forwarded by the viceroy, which looked to the ultimate invasion of Japan; but at best it was merely an inchoate scheme and probably encouraged by the viceroy to aid his projects for the defense of the approaches to Peking. He had a better knowledge of the military strength of Japan and of the weakness of China than any other of the emperor's advisers, and he feared the consequences to his country of a conflict."

THE WILY SEAL

How He Manages to Catch Sea Gulls Unawares.

The seal is probably the clumsiest animal in the world, says the New York Recorder. He likes to bask in the sun all day and when he moves he is exceedingly sluggish and awkward. It has often been wondered how this animal manages to secure its favorite food, wild sea fowl.

Sea gulls are so wild that it is difficult even for man to get within gunshot of one. The seal seems to realize that it would be a waste of time to attempt to crawl up on the gulls as they rest upon the water and catch them unawares. So he watches until the gulls are soaring slowly through the air and close to the waves. Then the seal dives into the sea and swims underneath the water for some distance. By the time he has managed to swim about 100 feet the gull has forgotten the presence of its enemy. This gives the seal his opportunity. He cautiously rises to the surface of the water at some distance from the point at which he dived, and allows merely the tip of his great nose to appear above the water.

Remaining in this position, he gives his enormous body a rotary motion, so that his nose describes a circle on the surface of the ocean. He does this so skillfully that to the gull his nose looks like a fish at play. This catches the gull's eye, and it at once darts down with the speed of an arrow, aiming straight for the little dot. The seal sees it coming and sinks a few inches, and as the gull strikes the water with tremendous force the seal's jaws close upward and the gull disappears.

AN UNCOMFORTABLE MAN.

Hundreds Witness His Writhings and Show No Pity.

On a narrow platform, close to the glass roof of Hammerstein's Olympia roof garden, may nightly be seen, says the New York Herald, one of the most uncomfortable men in New York. He is the man who operates the calcium lights which play upon the stage. He has barely room to stand up, so he kneels most of the time and stares at the stage before him.

Below are persons trying to look so cool and comfortable that the sight of them must be a perpetual aggravation. They sit and laugh and talk, and take no notice of the uncomfortable fellow perched high aloft and yet in full view. He is there for four hours every night. He shifts about and occasionally stands up in his endeavor to get the kinks out of his legs. He sits, kneels and sometimes leans back against the big iron girder behind him. He sees the show over and over again. He listens to the endless splash of the water on the crystal roof and sees the same little comedies nightly enacted around the round tables beneath.

Sometimes a sign of human interest is shown in a bending forward as some woman with a more towering hat than usual, or a boy with a more resplendent hat band than common parades through the garden.

AS TO THE NAME BILL.

Every Boy Bearing It Should Be Proud of the Title

There is something cordial and frank about the name of Bill, says the Chicago Record. It is a strong and sterling old name, which goes on multiplying itself in a most meritorious manner. A large proportion of the men who bear it are good men, and the reason is simple. Most of the "Williams" are named for some other Williams. It is not assumed that it is possible for any mother to choose that rough old cognomen for her pretty baby unless she does it to honor some particular person. Other things being equal, she would call him Clifford or Adelbert or Reginald. But she remembers Uncle Bill Farnsworth, who was the best and fairest man in White Oak precinct when she was a girl, and so she calls the child for him. Or the father recalls to mind a good, hearty and joyous character of earlier days—some friendly Bill of other times—a righteous man and a good citizen, and he recommends the name of William for the little chap, so as to bring back the memory of that other Bill. Or there are Bills in the family of Bills known to fame.

And now comes the key to it all. These various Bills were all named for other Bills, and the other Bills must have been esteemed good citizens and worthy, else no parent would bestow the name upon that which is next to his heart, his man-child. Whenever you find a man named William, and you will find many of them, you will please remember he was so called because there was a respectable and upright William back of and beyond him, and that other William was named for a further William of goodly sort.

It does not pay to belittle the common, plain name of Bill. Every male bearing that name represents some person presumably worthy, and if he himself disgrace and discredit the name then his punishment will be that no Bills will be called in his honor.

MOURNING GARB RENTED.

Novel Business Built Up by an Enterprising Dealer in Old Clothes.

Persons who are forced to undergo a sudden change of clothing because of the death of relatives, and who haven't the ready money to buy outright an entire outfit of black for brief use, have found a welcome assistance in their embarrassment in a man whose business is obscure, comparatively, and of recent origin, but who has an active trade.

The office of this man has a funereal aspect, filled as it is with heaps of somber garments, but its proprietor is anything but grave. He was, until lately, a dealer in old clothes, and was dismayed at the amount of competition. Everybody seemed to him to be dealing in that commodity.

A friend, short of cash, whose father died, borrowed a mourning outfit from him one day, paying a small sum for the loan. This transaction suggested to the dealer the idea of hiring out mourning dress as a business. He tried it, and soon found his peculiar trade well patronized.

He began to read death notices in the newspapers, and to send his agents to visit those whom he considered were not in extra good circumstances. Seven agents now act for him, being paid in commissions. Each has a regular circuit of streets marked out for his canvass.

LEGAL ADVICE FREE.

Given to a Lawyer by Judge Sage in Self-Defense.

Here is a story told by a bright young Cincinnati lawyer on one of his older and less scintillating friends, says the Cincinnati Tribune:

The older attorney was pleading a case before Judge Sage, and had talked incessantly for two hours. He had gone over and over the ground and up into the air and down below the surface of the question, until it seemed as if nothing was left for him to say. He had talked and talked until most of the listeners were either asleep or wished they were, and those who were still awake were about making up their minds to rise in their might and throw chairs and things at him, when suddenly and unexpectedly the long-winded man stopped short and coughed.

"I should like a glass of water," said he to the court attendant, and the man disappeared to get it for him.

For a moment there was a long-drawn sigh from the listeners, and then Judge Sage leaned forward to the young lawyer who tells the story, and whispered:

"Why don't you tell your friend, Alfred, that it is against the law to run a windmill with water?"

Take the First Rank.

A certain Alabama register in chancery takes first rank as a lover of abstract justice. Recently in stating an account as master when the evidence showed that a large quantity of corn bargained to plaintiff had been lost by the defendant's agent, whose duty it was to deliver it to plaintiff, the register announced his decision as follows: "While, perhaps, the law and the evidence are on the side of the plaintiff, I think it would be unjust that the defendant should lose all this corn. I, therefore, charge the plaintiff with the corn."

Railroad Speed in Germany.

Germany has made some bold experiments at railroad speed on the line between Berlin and Gorlitz. The best performance was 65¾ miles, which was 12 miles better than the highest speed of the fastest German train, the Berlin-Hamburg lightning express, which does 177½ miles in 3½ hours. Ordinary German express trains make 48½ miles an hour.

Scotch and English Farmers.

Scotch farmers who have settled in the east of England are not looked on with favor, "because their wives and daughters milk cows, take it to the village, feed calves and do other work." Scotch farmers succeed thereabouts, while English farmers do not.

HOBART'S LETTER

Accepting the Republican Vice-Presidential Nomination.

IMPORTANCE OF THE MONEY QUESTION

Bimetallic Currency as We Now Have Approved by the Republicans—A Standard and a Currency Vastly Different Things—Urgent Need of a Change in Tariff Law.

Paterson, N. J., Sept. 10.—Garrett A. Hobart's letter accepting the republican vice-presidential nomination is made public to-day. The main points follow:

Hon. Charles W. Fairbanks and others of the notification committee of the republican national convention:

Gentlemen—I have already, in accepting the nomination of the office of the vice-presidency tendered me by the national republican convention, expressed my approval of the platform adopted by that body as the party basis of doctrine. In accordance with accepted usage I beg now to supplement that brief statement of my views, by some additional reflections upon the questions which are in debate before the American people.

The Money Question.

The platform declarations in reference to the money question express clearly and unmistakably the attitude of the republican party as to this supremely important subject. We stand unqualifiedly for honesty in finance, and the permanent adjustment of our monetary system, in the multifarious activities of trade and commerce, to the existing gold standard of value. We hold that every dollar of currency issued by the United States, whether of gold, silver or paper, must be worth a dollar in gold, whether in the pocket of the man who toils for his daily bread, in the vault of the savings bank which holds his deposits, or in the exchanges of the world. The money standard of a great nation should be as fixed and permanent as the nation itself. To secure and retain the best should be the desire of every right-minded citizen. The dollar of our country, whether of gold or silver, should be of the full value of one hundred cents, and by so much as any dollar is worth less than this in the market, by precisely that sum will some one be defrauded.

Not Opposed to the Use of Silver.

The necessity of a certain and fixed money value between nations as well as individuals has grown out of the interchange of commodities, the trade and business relationships which have arisen among the peoples of the world, with the enlargement of human wants and the broadening of human interests. This necessity has made gold the final standard of all enlightened nations. Other metals, including silver, have a recognized commercial value, and silver, especially, has a value of great importance for subsidiary coinage. In view of a sedulous effort by the advocates of free coinage to create a contrary impression, it cannot be too strongly emphasized that the republican party in its platform affirms this value in silver, and favors the largest possible use of this metal as actual money that can be maintained with safety. Not only this, it will not antagonize, but will gladly assist in promoting a double standard whenever it can be secured by agreement and co-operation among the nations. The bimetallic currency, involving the free use of silver, which we now have, is cordially approved by republicans. But a standard and a currency are vastly different things.

Must Cease Juggling.

If we are to continue to hold our place among the great commercial nations we must cease juggling with this question and make our honesty of purpose clear to the world. No room should be left for misconception as to the meaning of the language used in the bonds of the government not yet matured. It should not be possible for any party or individual to raise a question as to the purpose of the country to pay all its obligations in the best form of money recognized by the commercial world. It is desirable that we should make it known at once and authoritatively that an "honest dollar" means any dollar equivalent to a gold dollar of the present standard of weight and fineness

Fraud Upon All Persons.

The free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 is a policy which no nation has ever before proposed, and it is not to-day permitted in any mint in the world—not even in Mexico. It is purposed to make the coinage unlimited, at an absolutely fictitious ratio, fixed with no reference to intrinsic value or pledge of ultimate redemption. With silver at its present price of less than seventy cents per ounce in the market, such a policy means an immediate profit to the seller of silver for which there is no return now or hereafter to the people or the government. Any attempt on the part of the government to create by its fiat money of a fictitious value would dishonor us in the eyes of other peoples and bring infinite reproach upon the national character. The business and financial consequences of such an immoral act would be world-wide. Such free coinage legislation, if ever consummated, would discriminate against every producer of wheat, cotton, corn or rye—who would in justice be equally entitled, with the silver owner, to sell his products to the United States treasury at a profit fixed by the government—and against all producers of iron, steel, zinc or copper, who might properly claim to have their metals made into current coin. It would, as well, be a fraud upon all persons forced to accept a currency thus stimulated and at the same time degraded. In every respect the proposed policy is partial and one-sided.

The letter then at some length points out a number of great interests that would suffer and the calamity that would follow if the Chicago platform was permitted to be carried out.

Cannot Sanction Wholesale Spoliation.

The proposition for free and unlimited silver coinage, carried to its logical conclusion, and but one is possible, means, as before intimated, legislative warrant for the repudiation of all existing indebtedness, public and private, to the extent of nearly 50 per cent. of the face of all such indebtedness. It demands an unlimited volume of fiat currency, irredeemable, and therefore without any standard value in the markets of the world. Every consideration of public interest and public honor demands that this proposition should be rejected by the American people. This country cannot afford to give the sanction to wholesale spoliation. It must hold fast to its integrity. It must still encourage thrift in all proper ways. It must not only educate its children to honor and respect the flag, but it should inculcate fidelity to the obligations of personal and national honor as well. Both these great principles should hereafter be taught in the common schools of the land, and the lesson impressed upon those who are the voters of to-day and those who are to become the inheritors of sovereign power in this republic, that it is neither wise, patriotic nor safe to make political platforms the mediums of assault upon property, the peace of society and upon civilization itself.

Serious Peril.

But vastly more than the mere assertion of a purpose to reconstruct the national currency is suggested by the Chicago platform. It assumes, in fact, the form of a revolutionary propaganda. It embodies a menace of national disintegration and destruction. This spirit manifested itself in a deliberate proposition to repudiate the plighted public faith, to impair the sanctity of the obligation of private contracts, to cripple the credit of the nation by stripping the government of the power to borrow money as the urgent exigencies of the treasury may require, and, in a word, to overthrow all the foundations of financial and industrial stability. Nor is this all. Not content with a proposition to thus debauch the currency and to unsettle all conditions of trade and commerce, the party responsible for this platform denies the competency of the government to protect the lives and property of its citizens against internal disorder and violence. It assails the judicial muniments reared by the constitution for the defense of individual rights and the public welfare, and it even threatens to destroy the integrity and independence of the supreme court, which has been considered the last refuge of the citizen against every form of outrage and injustice. In the face of the serious peril which these propositions embody, it would seem that there could be but one sentiment among right-thinking citizens, as to the duty of the hour. All men, of whatever party, who believe in law, and have some regard for the sacredness of individual and institutional rights, must unite in defense of the endangered interests of the nation.

Tariff and Protection.

Our financial and business condition is at this moment one of almost unprecedented depression. Our great industrial system is seriously paralyzed. Production in many important branches of manufacture has altogether ceased. Capital is without remunerative employment. Labor is idle. The revenues of the government are insufficient to meet its ordinary and necessary expenses. These conditions are not the result of accident. They are the outcome of a mistaken economic policy deliberately enacted and applied. It would not be difficult and would not involve any violent disturbance of our existing commercial system to enact necessary tariff modifications along the lines of experience. In such a condition of affairs as this it is idle to argue against the necessity of some sort of a change in our fiscal laws. Our party holds that by a wise adjustment of the tariff, conceived in moderation and with a view to stability, we may secure all needed revenue, and it declares that in the event of its restoration to power it will seek to accomplish that result. It holds, too, that it is the duty of the government to protect and encourage in all practicable ways the development of domestic industries, the elevation of home labor, and the enlargement of the prosperity of the people. It does nor favor any form of legislation which would lodge in the government the power to do what the people ought to do for themselves, but it believes that it is both wise and patriotic to discriminate in favor of our own material resources and the utilization, under the best attainable conditions, of our own capital and our own available skill and industry.

Appeals to Patriotism.

My sincere conviction is that my countrymen will prove wise enough to understand the issues that confront them, and patriotic enough to apply safe and sure remedies for the evils that oppress us. They will not, I am sure, accept again at their face value, the promises of a party which, under desperate and perverted leadership has so recently dishonored its solemn pledges, which has repudiated the principles and policies which have given it a historic past, and the success of which, as now constituted, would endanger at home private security and the public safety, and disastrously affect abroad both our credit and good name. And foremost among those who will decline to follow where the new democracy leads will be thousands of men, democrats aforetime and democrats to-day, who count country more than party, and are unwilling even by indirection to contribute to results so disastrous to our most sacred interests.

The letters of acceptance of William J. Bryan as a Democratic Presidential candidate, and Garrett A. Hobart as the Republican Vice-Presidential candidate, were made public yesterday, and are printed in the telegraphic news in today's Press. The money question is the most important subject discussed by both men.

The opening of the school year here in Plainfield, on both sides of the brook, is very gratifying to those who take pride in the intellectual development of the rising generation. With the high standard of the city public schools maintained as in years past, and improved if anything, together with the fact that the North Plainfield public school has been raised to the high school class, is a matter of congratulation for all who, like the late James A. Garfield, believe that the public schools are the Nation's defence.

The Democratic State convention held at Trenton, yesterday, was controlled from start to finish by the silver men. Only one gold man attempted to raise a voice in defence of his ideas and he was shutup in a way that showed the majority's determination not to permit any other sentiment other than of the ultra silver brand to show itself. James E. Martine, known far and wide as the "Farmer Orator," took an active part in the day's proceedings and was largely responsible for the platform enunciated by the convention.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation, can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Mr. and Mrs. George P. Dupee, who have been spending the last three weeks at the Breeze House, Asbury Park, are expected to arrive at their home on Rockview avenue today.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Vogeler, of West Front street, are entertaining Albert Rippel and Julius Rippel, also Julius' bride-elect, Miss Traphagen, all of Newark.

A postal card received from Justice V. W. Nash yesterday, dated Chicago, states that both he and Mrs. Nash are enjoying excellent health and are having a first class time. The card states that all letters addressed to them at Albion, Ill., for a few days will reach them there.

The condition of Frank Conshee, of North Plainfield, who was badly injured by falling from a tree in North Plainfield several days ago, is reported as slightly improved. Although his advanced age is against him the physician in charge gives encouragement. It will, however, if ever, be a long time before the genial Frank will be seen on the streets again.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

SCOTCH PLAINS.

Miss Bertie Barry, of Brooklyn, is in town for a few days visiting among relatives.

William McNair has been spending a few days with friends in North Plainfield.

Edward Marriod, of Orange, has been a guest of Mr. and Mrs. William Lee for a day or two past.

A young son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Lyons arrived home from a visit at New Foundland, N. J., yesterday.

The Misses Billing, of Brooklyn, returned home today after a few days' visit with Mr. and Mrs. George Lyons.

The inevitable "Bob" Walpole went to Passaic again yesterday in search of fish. And he got 'em all the same.

Miss Avis Barry, of Brooklyn, has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Walpole for the past week or so.

The fire cistern in front of the public school has been completed, and is now ready for use in case of emergency.

George Johnson, clerk in the Seabright Hotel, at Seabright, N. J., will be home today for a visit among his friends.

The musicians which have been entertaining the guests at the West Side House for a week or past have gone to the Waverly Fair.

The Scotch Plains base ball team would like to hear from any team in this section of the State, with reference to arranging a game or series of games.

The high winds of a few nights ago blew down enough trees in John Traynor and George Lyon's door yards, to cut up eleven cords of wood, so George says.

James Baker, who has been confined to the house for some time past suffering from a complication of diseases, has had a relapse and his condition is reported as most serious.

The Scotch Plains public school opened Tuesday morning and the attendance on the opening day was unusually large. Principal Morey is kept busy classifying the pupils and getting them ready for active work.

There was a private parlor concert, led by Prof. George Richter, of Plainfield, in Blimm's Hotel parlors, yesterday afternoon. Several Plainfield vocalists took part, and an enjoyable afternoon was thus spent.

The managers of the Scotch Plains base ball team are trying to arrange a game with the Cranford team for next Saturday. The two teams are fairly well matched and a good game maybe expected if they come together.

Daniel Baker, better known as "The Trapper," lost a valuable hound dog a day or two ago, and the only way he found the dog was by following tracks in the mud made by the prints of a heavy neck-chain, which the animal carried.

A half dozen of the young sprouts from here went over to Berckley Heights fishing on Labor Day, but like all the rest of the fishermen from here, except "Bob" Walpole, their total catch could be counted on the fingers of one hand.

Some of the farmers hereabouts are already cutting their corn, and especially that part of it which has not eared out. Much of the standing corn shows evidence of the recent drought and some of the farmers are cutting it mainly for fodder.

Quite a delegation of Plainfielders went to the State Fair to see Mr. Jeanette's colt trot in the 2:27 class. The colt has a record of three minutes, but it is thought with proper handling, before the season is over, it will be rated in the 2:22 class.

DUNELLEN.

Mrs. H. A. Palmer is at the Elgian, Asbury Park, for a brief stay.

Druggist F. H. Moore, of Orange, is a guest at Maier's Park Hotel.

Mrs. W. H. Taylor's new house on Grove street, is being repainted by Smith & Taylor.

Miss Lizzie Hunt and Miss Lillian Staats are enjoying the sights in New York for a day or two.

Mrs. J. B. Wright, of St. Simons, Ga., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A.F. Warden, of Washington avenue.

Adam Dealaman and family, who have been enjoying an outing at Mt. Pocono, are expected home this evening.

Mrs. John Heyser, formerly of Plainfield and now of Brooklyn, has returned home after a pleasant two weeks visit with Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Warden.

The funeral of the late C. F. Enander, whose tragic death on the rail was recorded in Tuesday's Press, took place from the house yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Rev. A. I. Martine, pastor of the Presbyterian church, officiating. The house was filled with mourners and friends of the family. Interment was made in the Samptown cemetery.

Since the recent railroad accident the borough commissiouers will soon be asked to prevail upon the Central Railroad officials to have a watchman on duty all night at the Washington avenue crossing just east of the station. Several accidents have happened near there within the past few years, simply because there is no guardsman there after 10 o'clock at night.

A delegation of half-grown boys, and a lot of older ones too, have been playing havoc in Charles Snowden's watermelon patch for several days past. Not only would they carry off what they wanted, but would put their heels in the melons to see whether or not they were ripe. The police have been notified, and unless the raids are discontinued a trip to the New Brunswick jail will be the result, as some of their names are known.

The funeral of the late John Taylor, who died here Monday, took place from the house on the New Market road this afternoon at 3 o'clock, Rev. Mr. Fletcher, pastor of the New Market Baptist church, officiating. Interment was made in Evergreen cemetery, Plainfield, Court Dunellen, Order of Foresters, with which the deceden was identified, met at the home of Sandford Staples, one of the members, last evening, and went to the house in a body, where services were held at 8:30 o'clock according to the rites of the order. The pallbearers were chosen from the several lodges.

NEW MARKET.

A. S. Coriell is suffering from sore eyes, the result of a severe cold.

Another of those delightful boating parties enjoyed an hour or two on the lake yesterday afternoon.

The new macadam road between Stelton and New Market, which the township committee has been working on for several weeks past, is nearing completion. The work of ploughing up the old roadbed preparatory to spreading stone was begun in the centre of town today, and stone for the work is being carted there by a dozen or more teams from the two mountain quarries.

After the ceremony dancing will be indulged in on a large platform which is to be erected on the lawn adjoining the house. Guests will be present from Plainfield, Metuchen, Rahway and Elizabeth. Prof. Sam Frazee, of Plainfield, will furnish the music for dancing.

Sent it to His Mother in Germany

Mr. Jacob Esbensen, who is in the employ of the Chicago Lumber Co., at DesMoines, Iowa, says: "I have just sent some medicine back to my mother in the old country, that I know from personal use to be the best medicine in the world for rheumatism, having used it in my family for several years. It is called Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It always does the work." 50 cent, bottles for sale by T. S. Armstrong druggist.

In a recent letter to the manufacturers Mr. W. F. Benjamin, editor of the Spectator, Rushford, N. Y., says: "It may be a pleasure to you to know the high esteem in which Chamberlain's medicines are held by the people of your own state, where they must be best known An aunt of mine, who resides at Dexter, Iowa, was about to visit me a few years since, and before leaving home wrote me, asking if they were not she would bring a quantity with her, as she did not like to be without them." The medicines referred to are Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds and croup; Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, pains in the side and chest, and Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for bowel complaints. These medicines have been in constant use in Iowa for almost a quarter of a century. The people have learned that they are articles of great worth and merit, and unequaled by any other. They are for sale here by T. S. Armstrong druggist.

Chinese Attacked in the Ottawa House of Commons.

LI HUNG STILL IN THE COUNTRY

Efforts To Have the Tax on Mongolians Increased to $500—Negotiations To Be Opened with the United States on the Subject.

Ottawa, Sept. 10.—The question of Chinese immigration was brought up in the house of commons last night when Rev. Mr. Maxwell of Vancouver, B. C., moved for copies of the memorials and other correspondence in the hands of the government on the question. The Chinese, he said, were driving the white people out of the province and making the labor market scarce for those who remained. He asked that the tax on each Chinaman entering the country be increased from $50 to $500; the tax of $50 was not sufficient to prevent them from entering the country in large numbers. Sir Henry Joly, minister of inland revenue, who has just returned to Ottawa after accompanying Li Hung Chang as far as North Bay, regretted that an attack had been made on the Chinese race and he would upon another occasion take the opportunity of defending them from the aspersions placed on their character. It was to be regretted that Li Hung Chang would be able to read in the papers this attack while on his way to the Pacific coast and while still a guest of the Dominion government. He merely said this much so it would go along with the attack which had been made on Li Hung Chang's countrymen. Mr. Laurier stated that the government would negotiate with the United States government during the interval between this and next session of parliament on the subject, but if the negotiations failed, then the Dominion government would introduce legislation next session.

FEVER AT HAVANA.

No Abatment to the Pest and the Death Rate Is Very Large.

New York, Sept. 10.—Alexander Gollen, British consul general at Havana, arrived here last night on the Ward line steamship Vigilancia from that port. He is on a four months' leave of absence and will sail for England on Saturday. Regarding the present condition of affairs in the war ridden island Mr. Gollen did not care to speak in detail. He said, however, that the sanitary conditions now prevailing in Havana were far from good and that the death rate was very heavy. The number of persons now sick with fever, he said, would indicate that it would not soon decrease. Just before Mr. Gollen sailed from Havana the first ship load of Spanish soldiers that constitute the advance guard of the reinforcement that recently left Spain to crush the rebellion arrived. They came on the Montevideo and numbered 1,900 men. He declared that there were at present about 150,000 Spanish soldiers on the island. Most of these were doing police duty, which consists in guarding the towns held by the Spanish. Disease was prevalent among the troops to a terrible extent when he left Cuba, he said.

Great Ovation for Dr. Nansen.

Christiania, Norway, Sept. 10.—Dr. Nansen, the Arctic explorer, who recently returned from an expedition in search of the North Pole, arrived here yesterday afternoon on his vessel, the Fram, and was given a great national reception. He proceeded to the royal palace, where he was given a hearty welcome by King Oscar and the crown prince. In the evening a state banquet was given in his honor.

Sixteen Greek Deserters To Be Shot.

Athens, Sept. 10.—A number of officers in the Greek army who deserted from their commands and joined the insurgents in the island of Crete, recently returned to Athens and gave themselves up to the military authorities. Decrees have been signed condemning sixteen of them to death. The executions of the condemned men will take place at Nauplia.

Fair Ground Grands Stand Collapses.

Cherryfield, Me., Sept. 10.—A small grand stand collapsed at the fair yesterday afternoon when 5,000 people were on the grounds. One hundred people were precipitated in a mass, a dozen receiving broken bones and internal injuries. Capt. John Leighton of Millbridge, aged 80, died from fright.

A Warning to the Sultan.

London, Sept. 10.—Following is the text of the unanimous note from the various embassies at Constantinople, sent to the sultan on August 27: "We regret the events. They ought to cease immediately; otherwise they will bring prejudice upon Turkey and your dynasty."

W. Brockholst Cutting's Condition

Newport, R. I., Sept. 10.—W. Brockholst Cutting, the prominent clubman, who is lying at the point of death at the home of his mother, is reported to-day as about the same, if anything a little worse. The doctors remain at his bedside.

Chairman Hinkley To Retire.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Sept. 10.—The article which appeared in a New York morning paper announcing the retirement of James W. Hinkley from the chairmanship of the democratic state committee was shown Mr. Hinkley and he acknowledged its correctness.

FAST MAIL WORK.

Pneumatic Tubes for Post Delivery in Large Cities.

It would not be surprising, says Harper's Round Table, to find Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington connected by tubes, enabling letters and parcels to be forwarded in as many hours as it now takes days. The telegraph companies will be seriously affected by the new system.

The operation is very simple. The letters are placed in a leather tube or carrier, which fits snugly into the pneumatic tube. Then a blast of air from behind, or the suction of air from the front, or a combination of the two methods, forces the carrier and its contents forward. As the friction soon wears out the leather carriers, American genius will be called upon to invent a metal carrier on "ball bearings." With leather tubes about 90 per cent. of the power applied is lost in overcoming friction and in waste, only ten per cent. of the total force applied being used to propel the carrier.

The charge for sending pneumatic letters in Paris was 15 cents each in 1879, and the territory covered was but a small part of the city. To-day every part of Paris is reached by the tubes, and the charge is ten cents per letter, the same as our special delivery. Nine varieties of the Paris pneumatic letters are collected. Probably many of the readers have one or more of them. They bear a map of the city on the face of the envelope, showing the different sections served by this post. The Berlin and Vienna pneumatic letters are simpler in design. There are no special designs on the London envelopes.

SOFT CRABS.

There Are Conditions Which Make It Dangerous to Eat Them.

"There is no danger in eating soft-shelled crabs," observed an epicure to a Washington Star man, "if they are fresh, but they are poison if they are not. They should be well seasoned, and an extra lot of pepper put on them as a precaution, especially if the weather is very hot when they are eaten, or if they are eaten shortly before one retires. It is the habit of many persons to eat soft shelled crabs at night time. I do not know but that they taste better then. It is sometimes dangerous to many to drink milk after eating crabs. Milk seems to develop the colic that follows eating soft-shelled crabs with some persons.

"Another thing should be remembered, and that is a sharp thunderstorm will kill soft-shelled crabs, and even the hard-shelled crabs at times. Unless the soft-shelled crab has been cooked before the thunderstorm, I think the safer plan would be to decline to eat it. Under all other conditions there is no danger of partaking of them, for I do not think anyone would be criminal enough to cook a dead crab, hard or soft shell. The proper way to kill a crab is to throw him into a kettle of boiling water. I know that some people think this is cruel, but it is no more cruel than to stab them with a needle or kill them with chloroform, as I have known some extra sensitive persons to do."

A COMMON MISQUOTATION.

Our Orators Should Read the Declaration of Independence Again.

Probably three out of four Fourth of July orators in their speeches this year quoted the Declaration of Independence as claiming that: "All men are created free and equal." The mistake has been common in the past and it is as prevalent now as ever. Presidents of the United States, members of congress, governors and a host of lesser lights have made the blunder, and to their number can be added editors and distinguished orators like the late Henry Ward Beecher. Nevertheless, the Declaration does not say that "all men are created free and equal," and it would not be true if it did. No person is created free. He or she is subject for years to the control of parents or guardians, and natural laws recognize this subjection as right. What the Declaration does say is that: "All men are created equal." There may be some dissent from that doctrine, as there is an evident difference among men in mental and physical endowment at birth. But while the Declaration of Independence is quoted as saying they are, it had better be quoted correctly.

COOKERY HERBS.

Every Housewife Should Understand and Cultivate Their Use.

Herbs used in cookery, while they may be purchased in the markets of the larger cities of the United States, are rarely procurable in those of smaller towns. To the average ruralist they are unknown, or, if known, their use is not understood. In first rate cookery, which is one of delicate combinations and flavors, they are absolutely indispensable, and their absence therefrom is quickly detected by cultivated palates. Chives, tarragon, chevril, savory, sorrel, etc., may be grown with little trouble either out of doors or in boxes in the house. Pulverized dried herbs that are sold in bottles or tin are of little value. For flavoring purposes they are hardly more effective than so much dried dust. Sorrel soup, on account of its pleasantly acid flavor, is much in vogue in Europe. Here it is almost entirely unknown, and is rarely or ever served except in families of foreign origin or at restaurants that encourage a special clientele. Of all the herbs only sage and mint are in universal use with us. For this boon we are indebted to the favor accorded sausages, and the popularity of the "mint julep."

When Frogs Are Best.

Frogs are best for the table in the autumn. They are then fat and sleek, and there is a peculiar and desirable flavor about them at that season not possessed at any other. At this season they are quite desirable, and form a very clever side dish at any time.

The Advantages of Prepared Mince Meat should be honestly considered by every housewife. It has great advantages, as one trial of will prove. You will find that it is clean—it could not be more so; that it is convenient—always ready and never spoils on the shelf; that it is economical—a 10c. package makes two large pies, fruit pudding or delicious fruit cake. Get the genuine—take no substitute.

SEWING MATERIALS.

A Proper Selection Will Be Found of Great Advantage.

Many seamstresses do not show intelligent judgment in the choice of materials. It is not uncommon to see sewing women using thread and needles in every way unsuitable for the cloth, while the cloth is much too heavy or too sheer for the purpose chosen. All white cloth should be shrunk for whatever purpose it is to be used, except possibly sheet and tablecloth and such large pieces that are only hemmed at the ends and have no seams. It is not only easier to sew shrunken cloth, but the seams stitched in unshrunken draw after the garment is washed if they are not cut by the needle, as they often are when the stitching is done. This applies especially to a machine-stitched seam, which is much stronger and better, as well as more rapidly done. The best modern seamstresses do not fell the seams of their undergarments except sometimes the side seams of the chemise and the seams of the close-fitting corset covers. Experience has shown that shrinking the cloth before using it adds certainly one-third to its wearing qualities.

The most important matter is to chose the proper muslin for the purpose. A heavy muslin does not necessarily wear longer than a light one. For some purposes it will not wear as well. Where the cloth lies in folds, as it does in gathering, or where a loose-fitting garment is drawn in around the waist by a band of the skirt, heavy goods will crack long before a light muslin will show any signs of wear. The fashion of choosing for most undergarments a much lighter muslin than was formerly considered advisable is in every way better on the score of comfort as well as economy. A light muslin or cambric wears better than a heavy muslin for night garments. These lighter garments are almost as warm as the heavier ones, but where extra warmth is required a neat garment of flannelette may be used in the winter or an extra undergarment of flannel may be worn. The latter is the best plan, as flannelette nightgowns are clumsy and the seams cannot be as thoroughly washed as the light cambric gown. It was no uncommon thing in olden times, when heavy muslins were used and stiff felled seams were the rule, to see a thick line of dirt settled in the muslin that no laundress could remove without alkali washing fluids, which invariably rot the fiber of the muslin. One advantage of a light muslin is that it is easily washed, and the dirt has no chance to cling in the interstices of the muslin, as it does in the heavier goods. As a rule cambric is the best choice for nightgowns, chemises and skirts. And even lighter goods, as Victoria lawn, which does not rattle when it is starched, may be used for skirts. A good quality of this goods heavy enough for skirts comes at 12½ and 15 cents.

For drawers and corsets that fit closely an especially strong linen is needed. Corset covers which are fitted to the figure are frequently made up of linen, because this cloth bears the necessary strain better than cotton. Drawers may be made of any nice domestic muslin. They should be short enough to reach above the knee when the wearer is seated or they soon crack at the knee. A simple group of tucks and a ruffle of two or three inches is the best trimming. For some reason known to fashion the corset cover fitting to the figure is not so much in favor as a baby waist and various other loose contrivances that serve to shield the corset. The chemise is completely restored to favor, and many women adopt this in place of the corset cover and avoid the clumsiness of too many garments. Linen laces are generally preferred to cheap embroideries, as they cost no more and wear better.

The best rule for the choice of thread is to chose a thread near the size of the thread of the garment. Where a very fine cambric is used this is not practical, but in general it may be said that for stitching, overhanding and running, No. 60 or 70 thread is the best, and a No. 8 or 9 needle where a needle is used. For hand hemming No. 70 or 80 thread and a No. 9 or 10 needle is the best choice. No. 45 thread is generally chosen for buttonholes. Where the garment is very fine No. 50 may be used. Gathering demands a No. 40 or 50 size thread. The old rule of gathering—to take up two threads and skip four—is no longer insisted upon, as no one has time in these busy days to [illegible] every thread, but this is about [illegible] proper length for gathering stitches.—N. Y. Tribune.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

HOW THEY VIEW IT

Democrats in Washington Pleased with Bryan's Letter.

OTHERS SURPRISED AT ITS SHORTNESS

His Managers Consider It a Strong Document, as It Covers Only the Main Questions Now Before the American People and Does Not Go Over Old Ground.

Washington, Sept. 10.—William J. Bryan's letter of acceptance was read with much interest at the different political headquarters here, and among all but the democratic leaders its shortness was a surprise. Mr. Bryan's declaration, often before embodied in his speeches, that he would not accept a second nomination if elected is considered by democrats as one of the strong points. Regarding this he says: "So deeply am I impressed with the magnitude of the power vested by the constitution in the chief executive of the nation, and with the enormous influence he can wield for the benefit or injury of the people, that I wish to enter the office, if elected, free from any personal desire, except the desire to prove worthy of the confidence of my country. Human judgmemt is fallible enough when unbiased by selfish considerations, and in order that I may not be tempted to use the patronage of an office to advance any personal ambition I hereby renounce, with all the emphasis which words can express, my fixed determination not, under any circumstances, to be a candidate for re-election in case this campaign results in my election."

Considered a Strong Document.

At democratic headquarters the letter is considered extremely strong for two reasons. It is short and covers only the main points at issue, and in the present flood of political literature can be more easily digested than if it had gone into points already thoroughly covered by Mr. Bryan in his speech of acceptance and numerous addresses. That this was his intention is made clear by the following paragraph taken from the introduction of his letter, the main points of the document then following: "Having discussed portions of the platform at the time of its adoption, and again when your letter of notification was formally delivered, it will not be necessary at this time to touch upon all the subjects embraced in the party's declarations. Honest differences of opinion have ever existed and ever will exist as to the most effective means of securing domestic tranquility, but no citizen fails to recognize at all times and under all circumstances the absolute necessity for the prompt and vigorous enforcement of law and the preservation of the public peace. In a government like ours law is but the crystalization of the will of the people; without it the citizen is neither secure in the enjoyment of life and liberty, nor protected in the pursuit of happiness. Without obedience to law, government is impossible. The democratic party is pledged to defend the constitution and enforce the laws of the United States, and it is also pledged to protect and defend the dual scheme of government instituted by the founders of the republic. The name United States was happily chosen. It combines the idea of national strength with the idea of local self-government, and suggests an 'indissoluble union of indestructible states.' Our wise forefathers, fearing the tendency toward centralization, as well as the dangers of disintegration, guarded against both, and national safety, as well as domestic security, is to be found in the careful observance of the limitations which they impose. It will be noticed that, while the United States guarantees to every state a republican form of government, and is empowered to protect such state against invasion, it is not authorized to interfere in the domestic affairs of any state except upon application of the legislature of the state or upon the application of the executive when the legislature cannot be convened. This provision rests upon the sound theory that the people of the state, acting through their legally chosen representatives are, because of their more intimate acquaintance with local conditions, better qualified than the president to judge of the necessity for federal assistance. Those who framed our constitution wisely determined to make as broad an application of the principles of local self-government as circumstances would permit and we cannot dispute the correctness of the position taken by the people themselves.

No Excuse for Bond Issues.

"An increase in the bonded debt of the United States at this time is entirely without excuse. The issue of interest-bearing bonds within the last few years has been defended on the ground that they were necessary to secure gold with which to redeem United States notes and treasury notes; but this necessity has been imaginary rather than real. Instead of exercising the legal right vested in the United States to redeem its bonds in either gold or silver, the executive branch of the government has followed a precedent established by a former administration and surrendered the option to the holder of the obligations. This administrative policy leaves the government at the mercy of those who find a pecuniary profit in bond issues. The fact that the dealers in money securities have been able to deplete or protect the treasury according to their changing whims, shows how dangerous it is to permit them to exercise a controlling influence over the treasury department. The government of the United States, when administered in the interest of all the people, is able to establish and maintain its own financial policy, not only without the aid of any syndicates, but in spite of any opposition which the syndicates may exert. To assert that the government is dependent upon the assistance or good will of a portion of the people other than a constitutional majority, is to assert that we have a government in form, but without vital force.

National Bank Currency.

The position taken by the platform against the issue of paper money by the national banks is supported by the highest democratic authority, as well as demanded by the interests of the people. The present attempt of the national banks to force the retirement of United States notes and treasury notes, in order to secure a basis for a larger issue of their own notes, illustrates the danger which arises from permitting them to issue their paper as a circulating medium. The national bank note being redeemable in lawful money, has never been better than the United States note, which stands behind it, and yet the banks persistently demand that the United States notes, which draw no interest, shall give place to interest-bearing bonds in order that the banks may collect the interest which the people now save. To empower national banks to issue circulating notes is to grant a valuable privilege to a favored class, surrender to private corporations the control over the volume of paper money, and build up a class which will claim a vested interest in the national financial policy. The United States notes, commonly known as greenbacks, being redeemable in either gold or silver at the option of the government, and not at the option of the holder, are safer and cheaper for the people than national bank notes based upon interest-bearing bonds.

The Monroe Doctrine.

A dignified but firm maintenance of the foreign policy first set forth by President Monroe and reiterated by the presidents who have succeeded him, instead of arousing hostility abroad, is the best guarantee of amicable relations with other nations. It is better for all concerned that the United States should resist any extension of European authority in the western hemisphere rather than invite the continual irritation which would necessarily result from any attempt to increase the influence of monarchial institutions over that portion of the Americas which has been dedicated to republican government.

Pensions.

No nation can offord to be unjust to its defenders. The care of those who have suffered in the military and naval service of the country is a sacred debt. A nation which, like the United States, relies upon volunteer service rather than upon a large standing army adds to its own security when it makes generous provision for those who have risked their lives in its defense and for those who are dependant upon them.

Injunctions.

The recent abuses which have grown out of injunction proceedings have been so emphatically condemned by public opinion that the senate bill providing for trial by jury in certain contempt cases will meet with general approval.

Trusts.

The democratic party is opposed to trusts. It would be recreant to its duty to the people of the country if it recognized either the moral or the legal right of these great aggregations of wealth to stifle competition, bankrupt rivals and then prey upon society. Corporations are creatures of the law, and they must not be permitted to pass from under the control of the power which created them; they are permitted to exist upon the theory that they advance the public weal, and they must not be allowed to use their powers for the public injury.

The Producers of Wealth.

Labor creates capital. Until wealth is produced by the application of brain and muscle to the resources of this country there is nothing to divide among the non-producing classes of society. Since the producers of wealth create the nation's prosperity in time of peace and defend the nation's flag in time of peril, their interests ought at all times to be considered by those who stand in official positions. The democratic party has ever found its voting strength among those who are proud to be known as the common people, and it pledges itself to propose and enact such legislation as is necessary to protect the masses in the free exercise of every political right and in the enjoyment of their just share of the rewards of their labor.

Arbitration.

"I desire to give special emphasis to the plank which recommends such legislation as is necessary to secure the arbitration of differences between employers engaged in interstate commerce and their employes. Arbitration is not a new idea—it is simply an extension of the court of justice. The laboring men of the country have expressed a desire for arbitration, and the railroads cannot reasonably object to the decisions rendered by an impartial tribunal. Society has an interest even greater than the interest of employer or employe and has a right to protect itself by courts of aritration against the growing inconvenience and embarrassments occasioned by disputies between those who own the great arteries of commerce on the one hand and the laborers who operate them upon the other.

Immigration.

"While the democratic party welcomes to the country those who come with love for our institutions and with determination and ability to contribute to the prosperity of our nation, it is opposed to the dumping of criminal classes upon our shores and to the importation of either pauper or contract labor to compete with American labor.

Railroads and Civil Service.

"The right of the United States government to regulate interstate commerce cannot be questioned, and the necessity for the vigorous exercise of that right is becoming more and more imperative. The government cannot afford to discriminate between its debtors and must therefore prosecute its legal claims against the Pacific railroads. Such a policy is necessary for the protection of the rights of the patrons, as well as for the interests of the government. That the American people are not in favor of life tenure in the civil service is evident from the fact that they, as a rule, make frequent changes in their official representatives when those representatives are chosen by ballot. A fixed term in appointive office, except where the federal constitution now provides otherwise, would open the public service to a larger number of citizens without impairing its efficiency.

The Tariff.

"It is not necessary to discuss the tariff question at this time. Whatever may be the individual views of citizens as to the relative merits of protection and tariff reform, all must recognize that until the money question is fully and finally settled the American people will not consent to the consideration of any other important question. Taxation presents a problem which in some form is continually present, and a postponement of definite action upon it involves no sacrifice of personal opinion or political principles; but the crisis presented by financial conditions cannot be postponed. Tremendous results will follow the action taken by the United States on the money question and delay is impossible. The people of this nation, sitting as a high court, must render judgment in the cause which greed is prosecuting against humanity. The decision will either give hope and inspiration to those who toil, or 'shut the doors of mercy on mankind.' In the presence of this overshadowing issue, differences of opinion upon minor questions must be laid aside in order that there may be united action among those who are determined that progress toward a universal gold standard shall be stayed and the gold and silver standard of the constitution restored. W. J. BRYAN."

BOURKE COCKRAN DECLINES.

His Reasons for Refusing a Republican Nomination for Congress.

New York, Sept. 10.—The republicans of the Twelfth congressional district a few days ago sent a letter to Bourke Cockran offering him the republican nomination for congress. To this Mr. Cockran has just replied, declining the offer. He said that while he was deeply sensible of the compliment, and that while the assaults led by Mr. Bryan on American honor and industry are fraught with such danger to the country that he would vote for Major McKinley as the most effective method to prevent its success, he could not, however, accept any nomination to an office howsoever exalted for which he waould be indebted to the political organization whose candidate he was compelled to support by the exigencies of a grave national peril, but to whose principles he was opposed.

Funeral of Former Senator Payne

Cleveland, O., Sept. 10.—The funeral of Henry B. Payne, former United States senator and father-in-law of William C. Whitney, ex-secretary of the navy, who died yesterday at his home on Euclid avenue, will take place to-morrow afternoon. The death of Mrs. Payne and a daughter, Mrs. W. C. Whitney, occurred only a few years ago. The only surviving children are Col. O. H. Payne and Mrs. C. W. Bingham, both of New York city.

South Carolina Election Returns.

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 10.—The backwoods precincts now being received improve Earle's lead. Earle now has 35,842, Evans 25,576; Earle's majority is 10,266 out of this vote. Allowing a total vote of 85,000, and giving Evans the improbable amount of two-thirds of the outstanding vote, it will give Earle a final majority of 2,500 votes. Earle's majority will be at the lowest estimate about 5,000.

Black Declines the Nomination.

Chicago, Sept. 10.—Gen. John C. Black, who is United States district attorney in Chicago, has sent his expected letter to the Illinois committee of the national democratic party, declining the nomination of governor, which was given him, August 25.

New Jersey Democrats.

Trenton, Sept. 10.—The democratic state convention yesterday afternoon selected presidential electors and instructed them to cast their ballots for Bryan and Sewall. Resolutions indorsing the Chicago platform and ticket were adopted.

Baldwin Not Asked to Resign.

Washington, Sept. 10.—It is emphatically denied at the treasury department that a request has been made on Auditor Baldwin for his resignation because of his participation in the free silver agitation.

Nominated on the 1,000th Ballot.

Louisville, Sept. 10.—The fourth district free silver democratic congressional convention at Elizabethtown last evening nominated D. H. Smith, of La Rue county, for congress on the 1,000th ballot.

Republican League Clubs.

Erie, Pa., Sept. 10.—The Republican League clubs convention elected Isador Sobel of Erie president by acclamation; Charles F. Harris of Pittsburg secretary, and M. B. Young of Philadelphia treasurer.

GOLF.

While the interest in most of the summer sports declines with the approach of the cool weather, golf still continues to be very popular with the members of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club and their friends. Golf is a game that can be played all the year round with enjoyment. The summer was quite a lively one for Plainfield's golfers and this fall it is promised that there will be plenty of attractions. The new club house is nearly completed. The outside work is finished and the inside is now being arranged and will be completed in about a week. There will be a grand opening soon after that at which a tea and golf tournament will be the features.

Besides the tournament, several matches will aid in keeping up the interest. Games are now being arranged with the golf clubs of New Brunswick, Morristown, Montclair, and Elizabeth.

A Timely Reminder.

Each season forces upon our consideration its own perils to health. The advent of fall finds many reduced in strength and vigor, poorly prepared to continue the business of life. The stomach and bowels, the great highway of animal economy, is especially liable to disorder in the fall. The nervous system has also suffered in the struggle. Typhoid fever and malaria in particular find in the fall that combination of earth, air and water that mark this season as especially dangerous. The falling leaves, the decaying vegetables continue their share of contamination. Hood's Sarsaparilla furnishes a most valuable safeguard at these important points, and should be used in the fall before serious sickness has laid you low.

Theories of cure may be discussed at length by physicians, but the sufferers want quick relief; and One Minute Cough Cure will give it to them. A safe cure for children. It is "the only harmless remedy that produces immediate results." For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

If you have ever seen a little child n the agony of summer complaint, you can realize the danger of the trouble and appreciate the value of instantaneons relief always afforded by DeWitt's Colic & Cholera Cure. For dysentery and diarroea it is a reliable remedy. We could not afford to recommend this as a cure unless it were a cure. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

From all accounts Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a Godsend to the afflicted. There is no advertisement about this; we feel just like saying it. The DEMOCRAT, Carrollton, Ky. For sale by T. S Armstrong, Druggist.

THEATRICAL.

Proctor's Pleasure Palace, the big white vaudeville bazaar in 53th street, inaugurates its second year, and the advent of the fall season simultaneously with a big holiday bill. The element of European novelty creeps out very prominently, Mr. Proctor having made a number of notable direct importations. The American debut of Ara, Kebra and Vera, introduces a trio of acrobats who are very famous in Europe. Their tricks include difficult balancing on pedestals, pyramids and staircases, and the turning of hand springs on a table covered with scores of many colored lights. Illusion and electrical effects add to the picturesquences of the act. Jones and Robinson are German eccentrics and comic acrobats direct from Berlin, who have a very droll burlesque upon the parallel bars. Three of the specialties brought over from Europe for Mr. Procter's big road company are also seen. These are the Brothers Horn, assisted by Amy Clifford, from the Palace, London, in their typical sketch portraying the London shoe-black, newsboy, society swell and flower-girl, culminating with a cyclonic comic boxing bout; Horr Crals, and his trick donkey and equestrian baboon, from the Folies Bergore, Paris, and the Two Bostons, eccentrics from the Alhambra, London, with their comic dogs and burlesque bull fight. Gertrude Mansfield, also engaged for the road tour, sings selections, in character, from "Faust" and "El Captain."

"The Caliph," at the Broadway Theater, in New York, appears to have settled down to a prosperous run. The attendance since the opening night has been extremely large, and the audiences have certainly been well pleased with Mr. DeAngelis in the title role judging by the hearty laughter and applause. Several improvements have been made in the first act, and the opera now runs briskly, ending before eleven o'clock. Mr. Englander's music has been very much praised, and two of the numbers—the monkey and parrot song in the first act and the whistling sextet in the last act—are already being hummed and whistled on the streets. The scenery and costumes have been much admired, and the performance bids fair to become one of the most popular of the kind ever on Broadway.

A Question of Importance—the question of prices.
We don't want anybody to think of this as a "cheap place." It is nothing of the kind. There isn't anything as thoroughly cheap as cheap hats. We can't afford to sell them. But there is such a thing as selling reliable hats at moderate prices. You'll find that method in operation here. You'll find that all our hats will stand the wear test. We sell nothing that we are doubtful about. There's good big money's worth in any hats here, from the ordinary sorts at $1.50 up to the genuine Youman at $5.00

FIRST CAMPAIGN SHOUT.

REPUBLICANS UNFURL A BANNER AND ORATE ON THE ISSUES.

Principal Speech Made by Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone—His Remarks Listened to by a Good Sized Crowd in the Street.

The Republican campaign was inaugurated in this city last night by the unfurling of a banner bearing the portraits of McKinley and Hobart, accompanied by the burning of red fire, playing of Guttman's band, and speeches by several well-known advocates of the election of the St. Louis ticket.

The scene of the celebration was on North avenue, in front of the Hotel Grenada, and for a considerable distance both on North and Park avenues, the streets were completely filled with people, from the youngest to the oldest. A large number of Democrats was noticed in the crowd. The Republican campaign committee, together with well-known leaders, of the party arrived at the hotel about 7:30 and at once arranged for the opening. Later they occupied seats in the balcony at the hotel which was neatly decorated with American flags. By this time an immense crowd had assembled. Some sought the roofs of nearby buildings, others occupied windows; while the remainder of the throng were obliged to resort to terra firma.

About 8 eight o'clock the Plainfield Cornet Band appeared, after making a tour of the city and borough. The music set the crowd wild with enthusiasm and they cheered lustily as the different selections were rendered. At the proper time the following well known Republicans appeared at the balcony: J. F. McDonald, Assemblyman W. R. Codington, Ex-Councilmen F. E. Marsh, S. P. T. Wilbur, Ernest R. Ackerman, and E. H. Bird, Councilmen Chas. Fish, and Wm. A. Westphal, J. W. Murray Sr., J. W. Murray Jr., City Clerk, J. T. MacMurray, Assessor Joseph Hubbard, Frank Hubbard, W. W. Corriell, John Drayton, Dr. Glenn, G. D. Patten, W. T. Kirk, Editor F. W. Runyon, and Roger F. Murray. When Assemblyman W. R. Codington arose to speak, the crowd was unusually quiet. He spoke as follows:

"Fellow citizens! We are rapidly approaching a National election, and the result will be watched eagerly by all. The Republican party has adopted a platform which is solid and worthy of consideration. Tonight we open the campaign and unfurl a banner, with our standard bearers, Wm. McKinley, of Ohio, and Garrett A Hobart, of New Jersey. The present question is not one of party politics, but what is best for the honor of the United States, for the protection of her citizens and the welfare of all."

At this time, while the 'Star Spangled Banner was being rendered by the band, and amid the blaze of red fire and cheering, the banner was pulled in position by J. Fred Mac Donald. Mr Codington then stated that it was with great pleasure that he introduced Dr. Jocelyn Johnstone, the speaker of the evening. The crowd at once resumed quietness and Dr. Johnstone's clear penetrating voice was audible for a great distance, and no one had any difficulty in hearing him. He spoke as follows:

"I have not come here to speak as a partisan, or to excite sectional animosities. The issue does not appeal to one party only, but concerns the vital interests of the Nation. I am a Republican; but I recognize that the present issue is one which demands the united action and united vote of both Republicans and Democrats. By the latter, I mean the men who still pursue the lofty and patriotic ideals of Jefferson—not the fanatics who have determined to vote for Mr. Bryan, simply because he was nominated by the Democratic machine.

"Fellow-citizens, Republicans and Democrats have stood side by side before. In 1861 they threw aside their political prejudices and responded with their lives to the summons that came from President Lincoln. Then the struggle was for unity and the strength that springs from unity. Today the conflict is for something that is dearer than organic power, namely, the honor and reputation of the Republic. Then the army of the north fought with heroes and the sons of heroes who, however, mistakenly believed that they were striving for their sovereign rights. Today we are waging a battle not against Mr. Bryan, but against the treacherous forces of fraud and red ruin that skulk behind the high personal character of the Nebraskan candidate. Our war, as Republicans, is not against persons, but against a fateful Jacobinism that was conceived by repudiation and brought to birth by anarchy.

"Fellow-citizens, I have no words

PASTOR TAKES A BRIDE.

REV. H. J. JOHNSTON MARRIED AT EAST ORANGE YESTERDAY.

The Ceremony Performed in the Church Amid Sweet Flowers and Admiring Friends—The Bridal Party and Guests.

Calvary M. E. church, East Orange, was the scene, last evening, of a pretty wedding. It was in every particular a brilliant affair. The contracting parties were Miss Mary Edwina Smith, daughter of Rev. George W. Smith, presiding elder of the Elizabeth district, and Rev. Henry James Johnston, pastor of Grace M. E. church, North Plainfield.

The happy event was solemnized at seven o'clock before a large assemblage of people. Rev. George W. Smith, father of the bride, performed the ceremony, assisted by Dr. Johnston, of Port Richmond, S. I., cousin of the bride, and Dr. Dobbins, pastor of the church. The best man was Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, pastor of Monroe Avenue chapel, and the bridemaid was Miss Alice Smith, sister of the bride. Miss Grace Darnell, of Hackettstown, a friend of the bride, presided at the organ. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's grandmother, 9 Prospect street. Among the Plainfielders present were Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson of the borough, and Miss Florence Burt, of this city.

The ushers, all ordained ministers, Revs. A. C. McCrea, Roselle; C. G. Shaw, Newark; J. F. Mashman, Port Jervis, N. Y.; W. W. Winans, Port Jefferson, N. Y.; R. B. Urmy, East Orange and F. H. Knight, Paterson. Many costly and elegant presents were received. The official board of the Grace M.E. church presented their pastor with a gold watch while the bride received a gold watch and a Chickering piano from her friends. Rev. and Mrs. Johnston left during the evening for Newport, R. I., where they will spend a week. On their return they will reside at 19 Craig place.

Gold Democrats to Organize.

A meeting of the National Sound Money Democratic Association will be held this evening in the Revere House. The call is signed by A. H. Atterbury and Gen. Sterling, and it is said that twenty-five have signified their intention of attending. It is the purpose to organize by the election of officers and arranging plans to carry on a sound money campaign in Plainfield before the November election.

Roads in a Dangerous Condition.

Certain portions of the roadbed on East Front street, between this city and Scotch Plains, are in a most deplorable condition. At intervals there are holes, which are almost continually filled with stagnant water and in other places the roadbed is rough and uneven. The present condition of the street is particularly dangerous to bicyclists.

Stole Forbidden Fruit.

H. Levine, Aaron Levine and Lewis Samuels, young boys living in this city, were arrested by Chief Marshal Wilson, of the borough, this morning for stealing apples in Hyde's orchard. Owing to the fact that they were young and it being their first offense, Justice Crosley fined them only $1 each.

Had to be Broken and Reset.

William Schaeffer, of West Second street, who was so badly injured in a collision with a carriage while riding his wheel on Park avenue, has had more trouble. The bones in one of his fingers, which were broken by the fall, did not knit properly and had to be broken again last Monday and reset.

ICE MAKING INDUSTRY.

STONY BROOK TO BE DAMMED AND AN ARTIFICIAL POND MADE.

The Miniature Lake Will Cover Six Acres of Land and Will be an Enlargement of the Old French Mill Pond in the Notch.

The exclusive announcement in The Press, yesterday, of the large ice pond that the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storge Company intend to have in the valley near Washingtonville has aroused considerable interest, and visions of a second Johnstown flitted across many minds, and everybody seemed anxious to know more of the details of this proposed artificial lake and where it is to be situated.

A Daily Press reporter visited the office of the company on North avenue yesterday afternoon to learn what the company had to say about their new venture. The representative of the company talked carefully but gave all the information asked for. He said that a new pond for the purpose of gathering ice was going to be built, but that the land that the company was going to purchase did not exceed twelve acres, and that the pond itself would be little, if any, more than six acres in extent. The stream, that is to be dammed is Stony Brook which is formed by the numerous little streams that start among the first and second ranges of the Watchung mountains. It is a wild little torrent after a heavy rain and was one of the causes of the freshet that visited this vicinity about eight years ago. There is already a pond there, known as the French mill pond, situated near Washingtonville. It is planned to extend this pond by moving the dam further down the valley and building it up to about ten feet in height. The new pond will be about twice as long as the old one, so it is stated, and about the same width.

The mill will remain and Hippotyte Texier, its owner, will continue to conduct a glove factory on the two upper floors, while the two lower floors are now for rent with the power. A turbine water wheel is now being put in by Mr. Mooney, of Scotch Plains.

During the winter the pond will, of course, be used to furnish ice for the company, and will in no way interfere with the other ice ponds which will be used as formerly.

F. A. Dunham is not the engineer who is surveying the lines for the pond, but H. C. Smith.

ELECTION BOARDS.

Those Who Will Receive the Ballots on Election Day.

The Union county board of election met yesterday morning and the members, E. C. Woodruff and P. J. Ryan, of Elizabeth, and ex Mayor William Chamberlain and ex-County Clerk John L. Crowell, of Rahway, were sworn in by County Clerk Howard. President Woodruff suggested that maps should be secured which would define all of the election districts in Elizabeth and Plainfield. Mr. Ryan made a motion to that effect, and after it was adopted the lists of district members were submitted for approval from the chairmen of the Republican and Democratic county committees.

The following Republicans from this city were selected for the election boards:

First ward—First district, George W. Moore, J. H. Tier, Jr.; Second district, Guillermo Thorn, B. T. Barnes.

Second ward—First district, J. H. Doane, Armstrong Mulford; Second district, Edward Willis, Fred I. Smith.

Third ward—B. Frank Coriell, Jacob Kirkner.

Fourth ward—First district, James Huntington, Abraham Angleman; Second district, James B. Martin, Jacob Kriney.

The Fanwood Republicans are: Henry Kyte, Chas. J. Drake.

Couldn't Survive the Injuries.

Frank Walcot, of Philadelphia the unfortunate brakeman who was crushed at Bound Brook yesterday morning, while coupling freight cars, died at the hospital this morning after the most intense suffering. His body and leg were crushed almost to a jelly, and hopes of his recovery were given up yesterday by the physicians. His home was at 2032 North Third street, Philadelphia, and his remains will be taken there today, where the funeral will be held. His folks who were notified came on yesterday and returned today. The grief stricken family deserve the sympathy of all in their hour of affliction.

The whole system is drained and undermined by indolent ulcers and open sores. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve speedily heals them. It is the best pile cure known. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Voorhies, of East Front street, are spending their vacation at Somerville.

THE PARADE TOMORROW

THE SECOND ATTEMPT, WITH GOOD WEATHER, WILL BE A SUCCESS.

The Finance Committee Have Increased the Funds and There Will be No Diminution of Prizes Offered at the Start.

Are you going to the Daylight Bicycle Carnival tomorrow? If not, why not? Remember that Plainfield has a reputation at stake and it is the duty of everyone to assist. But there is no need of asking if you are going. Of course you are, everybody is.

The preparations are still going on and the interest, since its postponement, seems to be increasing instead of waning. A number of business houses have decided to enter floats in the parade and that divison promises to be a large and handsome one.

For the benfit of those who have just returned from their summer vacations, it may be well to state that the Daylight Bicycle Carnival will be held tomorrow afternoon starting at 3:30 o'clock, and that every wheelmen and wheelwoman in this city and the surrounding towns is expected to take part.

There was a perfect host of decorated wheels out last Saturday but there promises to be even more tomorrow afternoon. Those who had made no attempt to decorate, saw the great number in line and decided to follow the crowd and decorate also. It was the same way with the merchants—they didn't want to be considered slow and so they are all preparing to be represented in the parade.

House decorations promise to be elaborate. It is rather hard to be asked to decorate twice, but then the committee isn't to blame because it rained last Saturday and they have had to do lots of extra work, so do your share and decorate. The business men realize the advantage of making as good an appearance as possible so the business section will present a gala appearance, indeed. The residents along the line of march will also be prepared for the occasion.

The prizes have not shrunk any during the last week. On the contrary the finance committee has been at work and the prizes will be finer than ever. The large and varied list of prizes will give all a chance, as either individuals or clubs. As to clubs, there will be quite a number here. The Union Bicycle Club, of Newark, is coming, if the members can be gathered together in time while quite a number of the other Jersey clubs will be in attendance. New York may not be as largely represented as before on account of a parade on the Boulevard there in the evening but a fair representation is expected.

So far the prospects are for a pleasant day and if we do have it, then Plainfield will see a parade that will surprise everyone by its large size and handsome decorations, and don't you forget it!

Touring in the Northwest.

Dr. O. L. Jenkins and wife who started yesterday for the west will join a Raymond & Whitcomb party at Seattle, Wash., returning with same probably in November or December. During their absence they will visit all the principal resorts and attractions of the Pacific northwest, will spend several days in the Yosemite Valley and on the return trip will stop at Salt Lake City in order to visit the Tabernacle, making sojourns also at The Colorado, the fine new hotel which is located in the heart of the Rocky Mountains, Glenwood Springs. There will also be stops at Manitou Springs, where the Garden of the Gods, Pike's Peak, etc., will be visited.

Death of Mrs. Edward Laufer.

Eliza, wife of Edward Laufer, proprietor of the Rose Hill farm on the second mountain, near Stirling, died suddenly from heart failure, yesterday. She had been ailing only a few hours, and her death was sudden and unexpected. Dr. D. C. Adams was summoned, but he could do nothing to prolong her life.

New Fall Goods

are now arriving at Edsall's Commercial Palace every day and soon the large store will be in its fall and winter attire. They are now in the midst of a big special sale affording the trading public a splendid opportunity to buy fine new seasonable goods at very low prices.

Carpet Works Change Hands.

The carpet works on South avenue, which have long been owned by A. D. VanDeventer, have passed into the hands of Lawyer A. J. Brunson, who is associated with R. V. Lindabury, the Newark lawyer.

"Boys will be boys," but you can't afford to lose any of them. Be ready for the green apple season by having DeWitt's Colic and Cholera Cure in the house. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

OBJECTED TO HIS HOUSE

SO THE NEIGHBORS LEAGUED TOGETHER TO DRIVE CRONIN OUT.

They Destroyed His Garden, Stoned His House and Finally One of Them Assaulted His Wife—He Goes to Court.

Persecuted by his neighbors, while his wife was assaulted by one of them, John Cronin, of Dunellen, was at last driven to appeal to the borough authorities for protection.

John Cronin is the coachman employed by R. F. M. Chase, of Somerset street, and about two years ago he purchased a little plot of land from the Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company at Dunellen, not far from the railroad. On this land he built a house. It was not a pretentious one, as it was only by hard work that Cronin could lay by any money. The house was smaller and simpler than the others in the neighborhood and that caused the trouble.

Some of his neighbors did not like either Cronin or his house, and were not afraid to express their opinions. Their children took up the feud and Cronin's garden suffered accordingly. In the evening they sometimes threw stones, large and small, at Cronin's house.

One evening, the first of this week, a young man names James Kelly visited the Cronin home. According to Cronin's story, Kelly stood out in front of the house and tried with taunts and jeers to bring Cronin out. Then he went into the yard. Mrs. Cronin came to the door and according to her statement Kelly rushed at her, kicked, punched and beat her until she could hardly stand. Constable Warden was going by at the time and was called in. He led Kelly away and told him to go home.

The next day Mr. and Mrs. Cronin appeared before Squire Luckey, justice of the peace, and swore out a warrant for the arrest of Kelly. The warrant was served and Kelly was brought before the justice yesterday. He was held in $500 bail to appear before the grand jury at the next term of court. Mr. Cronin has retained City Judge DeMeza to look after his interests.

WALKED FOR A CAKE.

Grace and Ease Personified at the Colored Ball.

With all the grace and dignity possible the waiters of the Revere House blossomed forth in Central Hall last evening, with their many friends, and enjoyed one of their celebrated cake walks and dances. Previous to the dancing a very excellent entertainment was given. The first number was a banjo and guitar duet by R. Hopkins and William Wilson, followed with a selection by the Blackville quartette, composed of William Betts, William Wilson, O. Nelson and John Taylor. A soprano solo "The Picture of '81," Mrs. R. Hopkins, a solo, "The Tramp Song," by William Betts, John Taylor and S. Conway in a comic song and dance, Wm. Wilson song and dance entitled "Dancing in the moonlight." The last number was a selection by the quartette. The floor was then cleared and prepared for the grand cake walk. All the guests present entered the walk but only two could win and they happened to be Mrs. Georgia Heywood and Wm. Wilson. The committee, James Potter, Arthur Chambers, R. F. Bowden, J. McCray, R. Hopkins, G. H. Henderson, and Geo. Anderson, very gracefully awarded the winners a handsome cake, which, of course, was taken by Mrs. Heywood.

A New Trolley Route.

H. C. Smith, the civil engineer, has just completed a survey for a new trolley route to the Mountain Park Inn, and which, it is assured, is entirely pratical for building over. It is to branch off from the main line at Jenning's lane, this side of the drive, go up the lane for a distance to the rear of A. C. Johnson's house and then up to the mountain to the Inn. It is a comparatively straight route with a grade of seven per cent. to the one hundred feet.

A Popular Store.

Those Plainfielders who go to New York to do their shopping cannot find a more popular, reliable and reasonable dry-goods store than that of Hearn's on West Fourteenth street. They make free deliveries direct from their store to this city and the borough. Plainfielders will do well to remember this.

The death of Mrs. Emily J. Schutt, wife of Herbert H. Schutt, of Leland avenue, occurred this forenooon. Notice of funeral will be given tomorrow.

SHE LOVED THE ITALIAN

IT SEEMS THAT LOUISE GILES WAS NOT KIDNAPPED AFTER ALL.

Chief Grant Found the Couple Yesterday Afternoon, but They Showed a Marriage Certificate—Luccio Was Arrested.

What appeared to be an abduction yesterday, seems now very much like a runaway, and young Louise Giles, instead of being dragged away to the lonely Italian shanty in the woods up at Terrill road, evidently went there of her own free willl in company with the man of her heart.

Soon after The Press had exclusively told the story of the disappearance of Louise Giles to the public, Chief Grant found the missing girl and an Italian, by the name of Ernest Luccio, her supposed abductor. Now Louise is at her home, while Luccio is having a hearing.

It was not until 7 o'clock Wednesday night that the police were informed of the disappearance of the girl and that she was supposed to be at the Italian shanty at the corner of Terrill road and North avenue. Chief Grant and Sergeant Kiely started out to investigate. They reached the hut only to find that the excited family of the missing girl had already been there. Louise was not to be found, but one of the Italians informed them that she had gone to the house of a certain Italian in Scotch Plains. They arrived at the latter place only to find that an Italian scout had preceeded them and that Luccio and his supposed captive had left a few moments before.

The police were not inclined to believe the kidnapping theory as they knew that Louise had previously seemed quite taken with this young Italian, and he had shown a great liking for her. Only two weeks ago, Sergeant Kiely had warned him to keep away and leave her alone.

Yesterday the search was continued and in the afternoon Chief Grant again visited the Italian shanty on Terrill road. It was about 4 o'clock and he was standing by the hut when suddenly Luccio and Louise Giles appeared on the scene. The Chief was rather astonished and so were the young couple. Grant knew what he wanted, however, and his first remark was to Luccio.

"I want you," he said.

"What for?" said the Italian, as he looked smilingly at the Chief.

"I have a warrant for you," answered the officer.

"Alla right," was the reply and the Italian thrust a paper into the Chief's hand. It was a marriage certificate and told that Louise Giles and Ernest Luccio had been married by Justice Hart, of Westfield.

Nevertheless the Chief arrested both and took them before Justice Newcorn. The weeping girl was turned over to her parents, for she could tell nothing in the excitement of the moment.

'She's not fifteen yet," said her mother. "She has no more idea what she's done than a babe unborn."

"If she's not fifteen you're her guardian'" said the Justice. "You did not consent to this marriage?"

"I?" the woman cried. "Of course not. Oh, I am overcome with shame. She was taken to that shanty and kept there against her will. She was there when I asked for her, but they would not let her out till I'd gone."

"Oh, don't bother, mother," the bride sobbed. "Let it rest where it is and I won't live with him."

"Have I a right to take her home?" Mrs. Giles asked.

"Yes, indeed, and to keep her, too, until the case is settled," said the Justice.

Luccio did not seem to object to the arrest but, on the contrary, seemed much pleased with the course of events.

"Can you furnish $500 bail?" asked the Justice.

"What?" gasped the Italian and his sunny smile faded away. "Me? I don't think!" and so the officer in charge locked up a very dejected foreigner while his wife was led away by her mother.

Justice Newcorn recognized Luccio as one who consulted him about a love affair several weeks ago.

"I love a girl and she loves me," the Italian said on that occasion. "Her mother won't let us marry. The girl is fifteen years old. What will I do?"

"Keep away from her and keep out of trouble," said the Justice. But Luccio didn't take the advice. He has retained ex-Judge W. A. Coddington as his lawyer.

The case was adjourned this afternoon until Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

BRYAN VERY BUSY

Trying To Catch Up with His Accumulated Correspondence.

TELEGRAMS OF SUPPORT RECEIVED

He Meets a Delegation of Postoffice Clerks at the Lincoln Depot, by Request, and Makes a Short Address.

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 11.—A party of postoffice clerks, delegates to the national convention of their association, heard a little speech last evening from Mr. Bryan at the Rock Island station. They were on their way to Denver, where the convention is to be held, and had telegraphed to J. H. Harley, the postmaster at Lincoln, requesting him to secure the presence of Mr. Bryan when their train arrived. The clerks, twenty-four in number, cheered Mr. Bryan when the train came in, and James H. Maloney, secretary of the civil service board and superintendent of the postoffice registry department at Springfield, Mass., made a few remarks, greeting Mr. Bryan in behalf of the National Association of Postoffice clerks as the representative of Americanism. Mr. Bryan in reply said: "I am very glad to meet you, gentlemen. I only received notice of your coming a few moments ago, but I am glad to greet you as representatives of an occupation which requires so high an order of intelligence and so large a degree of fidelity. I meet you in an entirely unpartisan manner and accept your kind words in the spirit in which they were tendered." Mr. Bryan spent a quiet day yesterday, so far as callers were concerned, but he was very busy going over his accumulated correspondence. He received several telegrams last evening, mostly from the west assuring him of support. One telegram from northwestern New York said that the silver sentiment was growing in that part of the state and that the vote in November would probably surprise many.

Tillman Accepts a Challenge.

Chicago, Sept. 11.—Some time ago Rudolph M. Patterson, a young republican in this city, challenged Senator Tillman of South Carolina to a joint debate on the silver question. Last night he received a reply from the senator accepting the challenge and agreeing to meet him in either Chicago or New York, the latter city preferred.

Instructed To Aid the Chicago Ticket.

Cooperstown, N. Y., Sept. 11.—The democrats of Otsego county at their convention elected delegates and instructed them to aid in securing the endorsement of the nominations of Bryan and Sewall and the Chicago platform. A resolution was adopted endorsing Bryan and Sewall and the Chicago platform.

Dual Congressional Conference.

Hanover, Pa., Sept. 11.—The republican conferees of York, Adams and Cumberland counties had a split here yesterday over the nomination of a congressional candidate for the 19th district. The division was on the basis of representation, York claiming the right to a majority of the conferees on account of having more votes than the other counties combined. After a warm debate the conference divided into two meetings. York nominated congressman James Stahle of Adams and Cumberland nominated Frank E. Holler of Carlisle.

Political Forecast by Li Hung Chang.

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 11.—While Li Hung Chang was here he was, as usual, interviewing the reporters who were sent to talk with him. Of one of them, who was an American, he asked: "What are you, a republican or a democrat?" "Democrat," replied the reporter. "Oh, that's too bad," said the viceroy, with a smile. "The democrats are going out of politics. McKinley will be the next president."

Reunion of Rev. A. J. Welton's Family.

Binghamton, N. Y., Sept. 11.—A reunion of the children and grandchildren of Rev. and Mrs. A. J. Welton was held at the residence of the happy couple in this city yesterday afternoon. Although yesterday was the sixtieth anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Welton, they still enjoy excellent health and are as active as many persons of half their age.

Coinage of Silver.

Washington, Sept. 11.—Mint Director Preston says that since Jan. 1 he has paid into the treasury about $3,000,000 as the result of the seigniorage accruing from the silver coined. Most of the silver coined has been since July 1 last, since which date it has been his purpose to coin silver at the rate of $3,000,000 a month. All the mints are now coining silver almost exclusively.

Robbed His Employer.

Boston, Sept. 11.—George Unsoeld, who had been up to last February employed as bookkeeper by Richard Schwartz, an extensive dealer in toys, on Washington street, is under arrest charged with the embezzlement of $2,250 from his employer. He had left the city, but had recently returned.

FOR TURKISH WATERS.

Bancroft To Sail To-morrow and Cincinnati Next Week.

Washington, Sept. 11.—The fire on the Bancroft has not been deemed of sufficient importance to be reported to the navy department. The departure of the ship for Constantinople to-morrow will not at any rate be postponed. Acting Secretary McAdoo said that the ship need not be detained by the occurrence. Such fires are frequently of trivial character, as in the present instance, but on account of their frequency a naval regulation had recently been promulgated allowing anthracite coal only in the bunkers nearest the boilers as a precautionary measure. The cruiser Cincinnati, which has also been ordered to join Admiral Selfridge's fleet in the Mediterranean and has been kept at Tompkinsville while Admiral Bunce's squadron manoeuved at Fishers island, is expected to leave for Gibraltar the middle of next week. She is ready for the cruise, and is only awaiting a detail of fifty long-time enlisted men, which she will take out to replace those on the ships of the squadron whose terms of service have expired. Her own crew is composed almost altogether of three-year men, and the extra fifty are principally for the San Francisco. The Cincinnati is certain to leave New York in a few days after the Bancroft, and it is expected that both vessels will reach Gibraltar at the same time.

ALBANY CAPITOL.

More Men To Be Laid Off—Twenty Discharged Veterans Will Be Reinstated.

Albany, Sept. 11.—The new capitol commission will lay off eighty more men to-morrow, leaving the total number employed in the construction department 300. The hard and soft stonecutters employed by the contractors on the building endeavored to have their differences adjusted by the commission, but the commission refused to take cognizance of the matter. A complaint that aliens were employed on the building was ordered investigated. A resolution ordering the restoration to the pay roll of twenty veterans who were discharged at the last lay off was adopted. It was rumored that William Barnes, jr., presented charges against the general foreman, Stevenson of Syracuse, for discharging over 100 men employed upon the work for political purposes and asked Mr. Stevenson's dismissal.

To Sell Fire Island at Auction.

Albany, Sept. 11.—The state land board held its regular monthly meeting yesterday and decided after a lengthy discussion to sell Fire island at public auction. The question of the sale of this piece of property was brought up by an offer for its purchase by D. Phoenix Ingraham & Co. of New York for $50,000.

Major-Gen. Miles To Publish a Book.

Chicago, Sept. 11.—A local paper announces that Major-Gen. Nelson A. Miles has written a book which will be issued within two weeks. It is to be entitled "Personal Recollections and Observations of Gen. Nelson A. Miles, Embracing a Brief View of the Civil War."

Treasury Gold Reserve Takes a Jump.

Washington, Sept. 11.—The treasury gold reserve at the opening of business to-day stood at $107,173,072. It is believed that in the future the daily withdrawals of gold at San Francisco which for the past six weeks have been so heavy, will be light.

Mrs. Bottome To Speak.

LANDSEER'S MODEL SERVANT.

He Knew His Master's Wants and Whims and Humored Him.

In a recently-published volume entitled "Riverside Letters" Mr. George D. Leslie, R. A., gave the following description of Landseer's domestic: "Landseer had an old servant, his butler, valet and faithful slave, named William, who knew and understood his master's ways and habits perfectly. Though Sir Edwin would bully this man at times, when he was put out, he thoroughly appreciated his usefulness and could not have got on at all without him.

William was particularly assiduous in guarding the outer portal; no one could by any possibility gain access to Sir Edwin; not even though an appointment had been made. The answer would invariably be: 'Sir Hedwin is not at home.' H. R. H., the prince consort himself, once received this answer when he called, amplified on that occasion by the assurance that 'he had gone to a wedding,' an entire fiction on William's part, as the prince found out, for on walking boldly in and around the garden he noticed Sir Edwin looking out of his studio window. I paid so little regard to William's customary formula that at last he gave it up and would merely show me into the drawing-room and say that he would go and tell Miss Jessy.

"I had seldom long to wait before Landseer himself would appear in an old homespun shooting jacket; calico sleeves were tied on to his arms like those butchers wear. He wore generally an old straw hat, the brim of which was lined with green, had his palette and brushes in his hand and looked extremely picturesque, reminding me strongly of some of the figures in Rembrandt's etchings. He did not at once speak, but would gaze at me with a queer, scrutinizing look, full of expression, for a moment or two, his lips beginning to quiver and move a little before the words came. He was always extremely kind and courteous in his manner."—Chicago Chronicle.

Serving Men Disappearing.

Parisians are giving up keeping men servants. For the sake of economy male domestics are everywhere being replaced by female. It was the clubs that first set the example by dismissing their men cooks and engaging women cordons bleus. Now the tendency is gaining ground in all directions. People are banishing their butlers, keeping parlor maids where they used to keep footmen, and paying off their valets. The last straw has come to break the camel's back. The financial proposals of the new government include a tax on man servants. The cruelest cut of all in the new law, lackeys are to be scheduled along with carriage horses, as if they were a kind of cattle. The domestic servants' syndicate is agitating against the threatened legislation.

A Perfect Fit Needed.

A well-known club woman the other day went to her dressmaker to order a gown. The woman asked at once: "Shall you wear it at club meetings?" The reply was in the affirmative. "And to make speeches in?" was the next question. Again she said yes. "Then I must have it trimmed accordingly," said the dressmaker. "It will be cyed closely and for long periods of time at once by women at leisure to observe. Such a gown must be absolutely perfect."

Common Footing.

A pretty story of the young empress of Russia is going the round. Before leaving Tzarsko-Selo her imperial majesty gave a reception at the palace to some ladies who had taken part in a charitable bazar in which she was so much interested. One of the ladies, it seems, was mother to a baby exactly the same age as the empress' lovely little daughter. When it came her turn to speak to the empress, although hitherto a stranger, this motherly young woman inquired suddenly, with irrepressible interest: "How's your baby?" The empress smiled, and was, it is said, delighted at the naivete. She told the woman all about the royal tot. Apropos of the Russian baby, her little highness when dressed for an outing is held up at the window every morning by her nurse for all the world to see.

Don't Let Yourself Get Thin

If you get hungry three times a day, enjoy your food, and enjoy the next two hours, you are happy enough.

If not, what you want is to get there.

A great deal of sickness begins with loss of fat. You know this. When your friend is in good flesh, you say, "How well you look!" and when he is thin you don't say what you think, but you worry about him.

Apply this to yourself. Don't let yourself get thin.

The diseases of thinness that we fear most are scrofula in the child and consumption in the adult. If you keep your child and yourself plump, you do not fear these diseases.

It will be useful to you to know the exact reason for this.

The germ of scrofula and consumption thrives on leanness. Fat keeps it down. Fat, then, is the food-means of getting the odds in our favor when contending against this germ.

Everybody knows that cod-liver oil is a fat producer.

Scott's Emulsion

is cod-liver oil made easy. The taste is concealed; the oil half-digested; it is half-ready to make fat.

In health you get this fat from your ordinary food, and have no need of cod-liver oil. When you begin to lose flesh, you are not getting the fat that you must have out of your ordinary food, and you do need cod-liver oil. Take Scott's Emulsion.

LAY PREACHERS.

English Lords Who Deliver Sunday Discourses.

Emperor William's taste for preaching, even where there is a duty qualified ecclesiastic within reach, is far more common fancy than most people might be willing to imagine. Under the circumstances it is difficult to understand the surprise which has been caused by his insistence in delivering the Sunday discourse during the recent yachting trip in the Mediterranean, although he had on board with him the chief of the court chaplains.

Thus in England there are at least a dozen secular members of the house of lords who, not content with preaching to their own households and tenants, actually travel about in England and on the continent preaching wherever they can find either a congregation or a pulpit at their disposal.

Several of them, such as, for instance, Lord Radstock, have incurred the wrath of foreign governments in consequence of their religious zeal.

The young Earl Beauchamp is another of these lay preachers, but he confines his ministrations to the East end of London. Then there is Lord Bennet, married to an American wife and heir to the earl of Tankerville, who has been arrested for street preaching on several occasions.

The present duke of Hamilton does a little in the preaching line, chiefly among the poorer classes of London. But none of these peers come anywhere near the late earl of Shaftesbury so far as pulpit oratory is concerned, the earl being known by the nickname of "the lay bishop."

TWO INVENTIV THIEVES.

They Took a Bicycle from the Rider on a Bet.

The bicycle thief is inventive this year. A young man was practicing circles in front of his house when two fellows stopped on the pavement to admire him. One of them, says the New York Herald, asked how much the wheel weighed, and the young man said it weighed 22 pounds.

The smaller of the two said that was too light, and that he believed in wheels weighing at least 30 pounds. Also, he mentioned that he once came in first in a ten-mile race and rode a wheel weighing 38 pounds. At this the larger of the strangers laughed derisively, and said:

"What do you know about wheels?"

"Why, I've ridden more wheels than you ever saw," replied the other.

"I don't believe you can ride at all."

"I'll bet you five dollars I can. Let me show him on your wheel. I won't hurt it."

He could ride all right. He wobbled slowly on the wheel for a short distance, and then swished around the corner and was away like the wind.

"You'd better run after that fellow," said the stranger; "I don't know him."

The owner of the wheel set off, but the short stranger must have been a mile away by that time. Then when the owner came back the stranger also had Beardless Youth (excitedly)—I say, waiter, there's a long hair in this soup. What on earth do you mean by that? Waiter—Very sorry, sir. That hair must have dropped from your mustache.

B. Y. (flattered)—Ah, yes, of course. I beg your pardon.—Tit-Bits.

THE SHAKERS' IDEA OF MEDICINE

Now a days when a man goes to his doctor, he is usually told that he has some unheard of disease with a long name, and when he leaves the office he does not know whether it is St. Vitus Dance or consumption that is gradually undermining his health.

It is therefore refreshing to talk with the Shakers, for their very simplicity commands confidence and respect, and we have the further satisfaction of knowing that they have devoted themselves to the study of disease and its cure for more than a hundred years.

The venerable old man whom the writer saw was only too glad to discuss his pet subject. He said that strange as it might seem, very few doctors realized that three-quarters of the most prevalent diseases were all attributable to faulty digestion.

He then went on to say that a child of average intelligence knows that putrid meat or decaying vegetables are poisonous, and must be avoided, and yet these same foods, even if taken into the stomach in the freshest possible condition soon decompose unless digested and absorbed.

In such cases the resulting poisons enter the system, when aches and pains, weakness and debility soon follow as a natural consequence.

It was recognition of this that led the Shakers to devote their energies to the perfection of a product which would stimulate the digestive organs and assist them to perform their proper work.

The first symptom of disordered digestion is loss of appetite, and the Shaker Digestive Cordial is wonderfully efficient in supplying any deficiency in this respect, at the same time it relieves all distress after eating. Furthermore, as was carefully explained by our venerable friend, it is absolutely harmless.

Better evidence of the Shakers' confidence in it could not be found, than in the fact that they have placed 10 cent sample bottles in the hands of all druggists, assured that if once tried it will produce such immediate and marked benefit that it will be continued.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

—At the funeral of Miss Jennie Rumsey, a popular young woman of Kiowa Kan., the other day, women acted as pallbearers.

—Iowa almost from the date of its admission has been called the "Hawkeye state." Hawkeye was the name of a noted Indian chief.

—Taking the young and the old together, it is found that 26 years is the average at which people die in London. In England and Wales only, more than 100,000 persons are always slowly dying of consumption.

—Ladies' bangs are good indicators of a coming storm. When they "go out of curl" the indication is for rain. When they are dry and crisp, fair weather will ensue. When the hair is naturally curly, however, it becomes more so on the approach of rain.

—Silk dresses rustle much more loudly in dry weather, because they are almost devoid of moisture, and the friction between their folds is considerable and noisy; when rain is impending the silks absorb a portion of the moisture and become almost silent.

—A curious lake has been found in the island of Kildine, in the North sea. It is separated from the ocean by a narrow strip of land and contains salt water under the surface, in which sponges, codfish and other marine animals flourish. The surface of the water, however, is perfectly fresh and supports diaphnias and other fresh water creatures.

—A Russian citizen of Manistique, Mich., has received notice from the Russian government that he is expected to return to that country and do military service or pay $300, in case of refusal to do either of which the property of his relatives in that country will be confiscated. He is a naturalized citizen of this country, and has consequently applied to the government authorities for advice in the case.

THE STORY OF THE SALMON.

Said to Deposit Its Eggs in Its Native River.

In the autumn time, and onward to the beginning of the next year, the mother salmon ascends the rivers to deposit her eggs, and thus to secure the continuance of her race. In connection with this periodical visit or visits to the river must be mentioned, says Chamber's Journal, a very curious fact. The idea is entertained very strongly by some authorities that a salmon invariably returns to its native river or that in which it is bred. It has even been asserted by fishermen that, when several rivers enter the sea in one stream (as at Bonar bridge, for example), the salmon bred in each river will pass back into their own water and will avoid the strange streams. The late Frank Buckland, a strong believer in this instinct of the fish, regarded the sense of smell as that which led it to its native river. Perhaps the truth is that for the most part salmon do return to their own river, but the practice and habit are not necessarily invariable. We know the fishes certainly swim great distances along coast lines where they are captured in stake and bag nets, and it may well be the case that now and then a fish will turn into a river that is near, in preference to seeking its own and distant water.

Arrived in her river, the mother salmon begins to scoop out a kind of trench in the gravel of the stream. This she effects by plowing into the gravel with her body. This trench is to be the nursery of her young. The eggs are laid in the furrow, and are duly fertilized by the male salmon. Then the trench is filled in by the efforts of both parents, the eggs are covered with gravel, and the mound thus formed is called, in fisher's language, a "redd." How many eggs a mother salmon will deposit is, of course, a difficult question to determine, but a stock calculation maintains that she produces about 900 eggs for every pound she weighs. Each egg in its diameter measures about a quarter of an inch, and it is estimated that 25,000 eggs go to a gallon.

BIG DAY AT CANTON

Two Governors and Their Staffs To Call on Maj. McKinley.

FROM RHODE ISLAND AND OHIO

Three Delegations Also Due To-day and Half a Dozen Others Have So Far Signified Their Intention of Calling on the Republican Nominee.

Canton, O., Sept. 11.—Gov. Lippitt of Rhode Island and staff will call on Major McKinley this afternoon. Gov. Bushnell and his staff arrived this morning and three delegations are due this afternoon. Hon. W. A. Lynch, a well known democratic lawyer of eastern Ohio, addressed the railroad men's sound money club at the Tabernacle last evening. The auditorium was crowded. Mr. Lynch made a strong sound money speech. The following delegations have signified their intention of visiting Canton: Marshall, Mich., republicans, Sept. 15; wheelmen of Toledo, O., Sept. 18; first voters and veterans of Muncie, Ind., Sept. 23; republicans of Oil City, Pa., Sept. 24; republicans of Piqua, O., Sept. 26; railroad men of Chicago and Fort Wayne, Ind., Sept. 19. Among Major McKinley's callers yesterday were Hon. Charles S. Baker of Rochester, N. Y., who lunched with him, and J. H. Shaw of Philadelphia.

HOBART AT WAVERLY FAIR.

Accompanied by Gov. Griggs He Visits the Grounds and Is Greeted by 20,000 People.

Waverly, N. J., Sept. 11.—"Governor's Day" at the New Jersey State Agricultural society's annual fair was marked by a tremendous attendance, it being estimated that fully 20,000 people were on the grounds at 2 o'clock. No small portion of the interest marking the proceedings was the visit of the republican vice-presidential candidate. Soon after 2 o'clock Gov. Griggs and Mr. Hobart arrived at the fair as the guests of the society. As the distinguished party drove about the grounds in President Tompkins' carriage, Mr. Hobart was cheered by the thousands who flanked the roadways, and in response repeatedly bowed his acknowledgments. During the afternoon Mr. Hobart and Gov. Griggs held a reception in the president's tent on "Politician Hill."

Onion Crop Short.

Springfield, Mass., Sept. 11.—That the onion crop of 1896, now generally harvested, is decidedly smaller than a year ago is shown by an exhaustive canvass just made by the American Agriculturist, covering every section of the country where onions are commercially grown. There is a shortage both in acreage harvested and yield, and report places the commercial crop of '96 at 2,200,000 bushels, or nearly 25 per cent smaller than a year ago, and 1,000,000 bushels, or a third smaller than the bumper crop of '91.

Measurement of Type.

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 11.—At the meeting of the Typothatae yesterday afternoon, Mr. Rose, as chairman of the committee on measuring self-spacing type, presented this report: "We have considered the matter and find that from time immemorial the trade has considered the square body of a type as an em and that when the type is charged by the 1,000 ems it has always been the usage that the square is the standard of measurement, and we see no reason why that principle should be changed."

Fatal Storm in Paris.

Paris, Sept. 11.—Traffic in the streets was stopped for two hours by a severe wind and rain storm which passed over this city last evening. Much damage was done, and several persons were injured by being struck by flying debris. Among the buildings that stood in the pathway of the storm was the Opera Comique, the roof of which was blown in. Most of the persons injured were cab-drivers. Several persons were killed in the suburbs.

To Bar Liquor Dealers Hereafter.

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 11.—The national council of American Mechanics, at its third day's session, voted not to receive into membership of the order any person who manufactures or deals in spirituous or malt liquors. The proposition to drop from the by-laws the word "white" as relating to the receiving of members for initiation in the order was defeated.

Illegal Sealers Captured.

Washington, Sept. 11.—Capt. Shoemaker of the revenue cutter Bureau is informed that the revenue cutter Rush on Aug. 25 captured the British schoon Viva, and the revenue cutter Corwin on Aug. 22 captured the schooner Jane Gray while both were engaged in sealing in the prohibited area in Behring sea.

Gold Prospectors Attacked.

London, Sept. 11.—The Malagasy mail received here brings news of an attack made upon a number of English and American gold prospectors in Madagascar by the Tahavolds. The prospectors were compelled to flee for their lives, abandoning their baggage.

Will Keep Away from Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Sept. 11.—The filibustering steamer Laurada, which arrived yesterday, proceeded to a point opposite Wilmington, Del., and dropped anchor there. It is said that she will lighter her cargo of fruit and not come up to Philadelphia.

Public Building Contract Awarded.

Washington, Sept. 11.—The contract for the interior finish of the public building at Taunton, Mass., has been awarded to A. H. Kleinecke of Chicago, at $16,060.

William J. Bryan is to speak in Newark September 23d.

The Newark News says that there is some talk of ex Judge W. A. Goddington being nominated for Senator by the Democrats. Many Democrats of Somerset would gladly assist their Union county brethren in electing as worthy, true and honest lawmaker as ever sat in Trenton.—Bound Brook Democrat.

We don't wonder the North Plainfield people are indignant that the plans for the macadamizing of Mountain avenue should not be approved at the same time as those of Union avenue. They want the new road very much, and now that they are so near having it, the delay is provoking. We trust the approval will soon be given. —Somerset Unionist-Gazette.

With one sweep of the pen a New York editor has transplanted beautiful Plainfield from beside the limpid and peaceful Green brook to the banks of the rawging Morris canawl. The geographical abortión was made in the report of a "little Johnnie Slavinski" who fell into the canal. Now, as our thoughts wander, we can almost perceive the bray of the boney and abused mule as the whacks of a whip are plied by the raw-boned driver and vibrated to our auricle, instead of the redolance of the brook's cleansified flow permeating our olfactory organs. We take it upon ourselves to say that Plainfield has not moved yet. We are doing business at the same old stand.

HOT SHOT FROM DEMOCRATS.

Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone Attacked by Two Prominent Plainfielders.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—A fit and proper exponent and voiced-man for the gold monometalists at the Republican banner raising was the Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone, who declared at the Park Club, just after Mr. Cleveland's proclamation on Venezuela that Mr. Cleveland should be strung up, that he had no right to interfere with England's interests there, that the Monroe Doctrine was a farce. Republicans, you are welcome to this advocate of England's policy. True Amercans have no use for him.

J. E. M.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—The Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone has been a resident of this country some six years, and only felt it necessary to declare his intentions to the United States some six months since. And many are prone to belive that this step was only taken in order that he might be admitted to the legal bar of N. Y., as a lawyer. A man of many parts is this gentleman. A reverend, a lawyer (in prospect,) an advocate of Lincoln and America, and yet bowed so low on Queen Victoria's last birth day in New York, that his school was without its principal the next day. Even that gold paper, the New York Sun, in an article "called him down" on this occasion.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation, can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

strong enough with which to clothe my indignation against these new apostles of unrest and turbulence, who are not content unless they are assailing the institutions of the Republic. Even in the distant land that gave me birth I became aware that the crowning glory of this American Nation was the Supreme Court of the United States. That tribunal stands today, as it has done in the past, the buttress of our personal rights and liberties. It exists as the pride of all true Americans and a safeguard even against the Nation's passion and impatience. No man has ever dared to assert in good faith that the Supreme Court of the United States has ever sullied its fair fame by partiality or fraud. The man who does so is either a traitor or a fool. But Mr. Bryan is willing, in order to pander to the lowest prejudices of his followers, to besmirch the reputation of a majestic tribunal that stands today in the hearts of true Americans as the representative of all that is best in our Western civilization. In doing so, let me tell him in the name of an overwhelming majority of American citizens that he has secured his own defeat.

"Mr. Bryan and his imitative followers have tired the public by harping day after day on the crime of 1873. There was no such crime. The bill was debated over and over again. It was printed thirteen times. There was absolutely no stealth. Silver was erased from the statute simply because the mercantile value of silver was greater than the coinage value. The ratio was 15½ to 1, and the result, of course, was that the Government refused to coin an amount of silver, which was intrinsically worth more than 100 cents. In other words, in 1873 the bullion in a silver dollar was of greater value than the coin itself. Mr. Bryan calls this 'a crime.' I brand this a falsehood.

"The great question of the hour is simply this: 'How would the free and unlimited coinage of silver affect the prosperity of the country?' Mr. Bryan has over and over again advised the audiences he has addressed to study the question. I re-echo his advice. If I were a betting man, I would lay the odds of 5,000 to 1 that no intelligent student can examine the issue dispassionately without reaching the conclusion that the election of Mr. Bryan would mean the paralysis of all the business of the country. I do not ask you to accept my unproved assertions. I simply request you to give me your undivided attention when I try to present to you the reasons which convince me that under the silver regime gold would go to a premium. That is the keystone of the Republican arch. If gold and silver could be kept at a parity—and the supposition, as I will show you, is absurd—it would be right to vote for Mr. Bryan and his new experimental politics. In this discussion I want your intellectual, not your partisan assent.

"First of all, let me ask you what is it that sets a premium on any product? Why its scarcity; in other words its inability to satisfy the demand. Suppose for a moment that he cotton harvest of the South was limited to a thousand bales. What would be the result? A marvellous appreciation of its value, that is an increase in price. Apply this principle to any other commodity and you will see that all products and commodities go to a premium in direct proportion to the smallness of their amount, what do you think will be the fate of gold if a majority of his fellow citizens are mad enough to elect Mr. Bryan and his empirical allies? Why today men who happen to have gold are hoarding it. If Mr. Bryan were elected and silver became a legal tender for all indebtedness, how long do you think would gold remain in America? Not six months! The importers of foreign goods would demand payment in gold. Mr. Bryan's fallacy consists in the fact that he believes that the civilized nations of the earth will be obliged by Americans had to change their financial system."

"That is an idle dream Gold countries will remain on a gold basis, and the intrinsic value of silver will never remain at a parity with gold, even if by one spasmodic leap it could for a day reach the bullion price, $1 29 an ounce. The United States cannot abrogate the law of supply and demand. When there is a scarcity of any product there will at once be a premium on it; can a scarcity of gold will be created in America by the necessity of paying for imports in gold, and the necessity, unless we are content to lapse into repudiation, to pay the interest on our bonds in gold.

"Now I think I have shown you that the trade system of the world acting on gold will bring it to a premium. What then follows? Why, the inevitable rule, as true as that the night follows the day, that prices follow gold in its upward and downward march. Some of you who are present here tonight remember the prices that prevailed in 1864. Gold was then at a premium of $2 85. You remember that the prices of the necessities of life were proportionately high. It was the time of war prices you say. True, but the high war prices were produced by the advance in the price of Gold. Now, strange as it may appear, Mr. Bryan has himself given away his whole case. He has offered as a bait to the professional farmers the assurance that under the free and unlimited coinage of silver, the prices of their products will be doubled. What does that mean? It means that gold will use to a premium of 100, and that his assertions about keeping gold and silver at at a parity are a delusion and a fraud!

"If Mr. Bryan is elected the prices of the necessities of life will be doubled. I appeal to the working men in this audience to tell me whether they will be satisfied to elect a man as President who will introduce a system under which wages will remain as they have been, but the prices of commodities will be doubled? The value of a dollar consists in its purchasing powers! If I am able with one dollar to purchase ten loaves of bread today, and with the same dollar I can only buy five to morrow, you may say it is the same dollar; but I deny it. Your dollar has been reduced by fifty per cent. It is only worth fifty cents. I speak to-night not in the interest of of capitol. I care nothing for it. I am only concerned for the prosperity of the working men and their families. If you elect Mr. Bryan in November, the man who earns $15.00 a week will find that he only has the purchasing power of $7.50. I tell you here tonight that if Mr. Bryan is elected such a reign of disaster will come to this country as never was since the Pilgrim Fathers first landed.

"Paralysis of business—poverty and despair. But it is impossible to conceive such a disaster. The intelligence of the laboring classes will administer such a defeat to Mr. Bryan in November that the cause of free silver will be doomed forever. For the sake of the women and little children, for the honor of America, the workingmen will bury the Nebraskan under such a heap of ballots that there will be no arm of resurrection long enough to lift him from his political grave."

At the conclusion of Dr. Johnstone's remarks, which were heartily applauded, Mr. Codington introduced Mr. Schermerhorn, a young man of this city, who is a new comer. In part he said:

"Never before has the people of this country been stirred with so great an issue as the one which is at present before them for their consideration. We, the people of the east, are too confident of success, and I want to raise a voice of warning. I want to urge upon you the necessity, as my brother who spoke before me said, of studying earnestly the question now before you. Let your actions be governed by your convictions. One of our first principles is honesty. It is taught our boys and girls, and if we destroy this element we destroy character. We can't afford to be dishonest. No employer can afford to pay his men wages with a depreciated currency. Its necessary that we maintain the highest standard in patriotism, for which we are well known, and for which makes us the leading nation of the world.

"Let Mr. White or Mr. Edsall say that they will sell six cent calico for twelve cents, and see what the result will be! Why, it would go on the shelf and stay there. The same principle will apply in all other cases. It is impossible to carry on business alone without the aid of other countries. The price of silver will not be governed by the platform adopted at Chicago, but the trade of the world only will decide that question. Foreigners will not take a depreciated currency, and our only safety is in electing McKinley and Hobart, who stand on right principles. I am glad that I was born an American, also that I can clasp hands with my brother, Dr. Johnstone, who though not born here, is a true American. When Fort Sumpter was fired upon, all responded to the call to stand by the Stars and Stripes, and in the coming election the ballot box will proclaim an edict will be heard around the earth and rock to sleep the free silver boy."

Ex Councilman E. R. Ackerman was the next speaker and he gave a short talk regarding his experiences in free silver countries. He spoke about Japan where the best paid men and women get 37 cents a day, also in India where the best coachman is paid $3 a month. He urged all to stand by McKinley and Hobart and thus secure prosperity and protection.

After Mr. Codington had announced that the Republican Association rooms were opened every evening and all were cordially invited to visit them, the meeting was brought to a close and the crowd departed.

—The Board of Freeholders of Somerset county went to High Bridge yesterday to inspect a line bridge which was damaged recently.

SCOTCH PLAINS.

The farmers about here are at work cutting their corn, although much of it is yet very green.

"Bloomers inflated" is the wording on a sign board in front of a Scotch Plains grocer store.

The Misses Annie and Jennie Collins, of New York City, will return home this week, after a four weeks, visit with Mr. and Mrs. John H. Blimm.

Jacob and Clarence Lambert of this place helped to swell the crowd at the State fair yesterday, and spent a few hours inspecting the prize pumkins and sich.

John H. Blimm, proprietor of the well-known Blimm's Hotel and wheelmen's rest has been re-modeling the upper story of the building New and attractive mouldings have been placed about the ceiling in each room, and the floors have all been newly carpeted.

John Blimm is having much trouble with his eyes of late, brought on by extreme nervousness, so that now he is scarcely able to read a newspaper at all. On Wednesday he consulted an oculist in the Vanderbilt clynic, at 60th street and 10th avenue, New York City, and he is now being treated by a specialist there.

Scotch Plains is up to the times in the manner of open air concerts. Yesterday a hand organ came to town and when the manipulator ground out "Spring, spring, gentle spring," there was a general resurrection of spades and hoe handles and every preparation was made for spading up gardens and dooryards.

Owners of cabbage and potato patches about here are suffering from petty thieving. A night or two ago some twenty-five head of fine cabbage were "lifted" from one man's patch and another resident mowns the loss of some two hills of potatoes.

Piscatorial artist Robert Walpole won a horse at a raffle, Wednesday night, which has a record of 2.25—a block. "Bob" was offered a good round sum for the animal but there was a difference of $2 in price so "Bob" will sharpen up the animals shoes and get ready for the sleighing season.

A serious conflagration at Scotch Plains Tuesday night was only averted by the presence of mind of Thomas Paff and other neighbors. It was early in the evening when a kerosene lamp in Robert Jahn's house began to flicker and cut up capers, and soon exploded, scattering the burning fluid about the room. The curtains and woodwork caught fire, and it was with much difficulty that the flames were extinguished. Eight children, which constitute the greater part of the household, rushed into the street and yelled fire, but the fire was put out before it became necessary to send for the firemen. The damage was slight.

DUNELLEN.

Bernard Sirisky is spending a few days with his parents in Raritan.

Miss Florence Maxwell is visiting her sisters in Elizabeth for a few weeks.

Edward Arch, an infant granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stevens, died on Tuesday night at 10 o'clock from convulsions. The funeral took place from the house on Washington avenue yesterday afternoon.

Principal Whitney, wife and son, all received new bicycles by express yesterday.

Less than a dozen people went from here on the Mauch Chunk excursion Labor Day.

Over fifty of Dunellen's population attended the State fair at Waverly, yesterday.

Mrs. Paul Kratzel, who has been a sufferer from pleurisy for the past four weeks, was slightly improved yesterday.

Friendly games of checkers are occasionally indulged in at W. H. Coles' coal office, and some expert players of the town take part.

Mrs. Barbara Wiedenhauft, of Westfield, has been spending a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kratzel, of Front street.

George Harding, of Asbury Park, is now domiciled with Constable and Mrs. Warden. He is employed as a brakeman on the 5:30 a. m. train for New York.

Attorneys Reed & Coddington have advertised at sheriff's sale the house on Jackson avenue occupied by Jos. J. Benton. The sale will take place on Tuesday, Sept. 15th.

Sent it to His Mother in Germany

Mr. Jacob Esbensen, who is in the employ of the Chicago Lumber Co., at DesMoines, Iowa, says: "I have just sent some medicine back to my mother in the old country, that I know from personal use to be the best medicine in the world for rheumatism, having used it in my family for several years. It is called Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It always does the work." 50 cent, bottles for sale by T. S. Armstrong druggist.

In a recent letter to the manufacturers Mr. W. F. Benjamin, editor of the Spectator, Rushford, N. Y., says: "It may be a pleasure to you to know the high esteem in which Chamberlain's medicines are held by the people of your own state, where they must be best known. An aunt of mine, who resides at Dexter, Iowa, was about to visit me a few years since, and before leaving home wrote me, asking if they were sold here, stating if they were not she would bring a quantity with her, as she did not like to be without them." The medicines referred to are Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds and croup; Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, pains in the side and chest, and Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for bowel complaints. These medicines have been in constant use in Iowa for almost a quarter of a century. The people have learned that they are articles of great worth and merit, and unequaled by any other. They are for sale here by T. S. Armstrong druggist.

NIGHT IN THE REDWOODS.

The eyes that all day upward look to feast
On sloping boughs, nor yet at twilight ceased,
Now see in trunk and branch and leaf and spray
Diviner meanings than were felt by day.
The trunks that tower high look up and out
Like Faith above the undergrowth of Doubt;
The stately boughs, the sprays so far above,
Encompass Faith with arms of tender Love;
The little leaves are servants fond and true,
Cup-bearers of the summer sun and dew;
These giant limbs, each spangled with a star,
Seem spirit steps to heavenly lands afar;
And those wide-spreading arms held high in air
In quiet wait the answer to a prayer.
How still the scene! A century of calm
Lies wrapped within this night of blissful balm.
All still, save in the soul a breath, a call,
A thrill that holds the heart in solemn thrall;
One swelling pulse, one mighty undertone.
God's voice down through the redwood branches blown.

—Clarence Urmy, in Century.

WEDDING GIFTS.

"OOH! presents!" said the old married man to the bride egroom. "Don't think you'll get what you want. I'll tell you my experience.

"As the time for our marriage drew near I used to call at the house every available evening and whisper confidentially to the curly head which exactly fitted my shoulder that I was the luckiest fellow on earth. On one occasion Agnes sighed and murmured dreamily that that was just what she felt.

"That was on the 5th.

"On the 12th I stopped in a minute at noon to see if she loved me as much as at 11:15 the night before. She replied that she did—that love was unalterable—but that she must hurry upstairs now or the dressmaker would get her skirt flute-shaped instead of organ-piped.

"On the 14th the presents began to arrive—also the relatives. It became an unsettled problem which of the two were more numerous. Aggie had cousins once removed, I had several uncles and aunts. All were well off; in fact, it was a curious coincidence that we were the only poor branches on our respective family trees. I was in an insurance office—fire insurance, not life insurance—and when I had communicated to her the news of my recent promotion she had promptly declared in the face of her family's unaccountable preference for Henry Walker (who was not so good a fellow as I by any manner of means) that to be Mrs. Joseph Lounsbury and live in a small house and on a very small income and bliss was precisely her ideal of existence. So we were not marrying as a speculation; nevertheless, since mariage came so seldom in one's life, we had hopes that our moneyed relatives would do the handsome thing.

"They did. First came a complete set of knives, forks and spoons in a polished wood case. They were from the cousin Aggie had been named for. 'Such a sensible present!' said her mother; 'they will last a lifetime.'

"'Yes,' said I, 'it will take us a good while to wear all those out two at a time.'

"'Don't you suppose we're ever going to entertain any company, Joe?' asked the girl of my affection, tapping me on the cheek with one of the forks.

"The same night I had a note from her saying: 'Dearest Joe, you ought to see the lovely after dinner coffee spoons Second Cousin Milly has sent—no two alike. Orange plush case. Isn't it exciting? Don't tell, dear, but I almost wish they'd been something else, for I think some of the girls are going to give me spoons.' The rest of this letter was not interesting—to you.

"This was the beginning of an avalanche of spoons—Charter Oak spoons, nutmeg spoons, soldiers' monument spoons, witch spoons, bust spoons, portrait spoons (I called these last our picture gallery and suggested that they should be framed in ribbons and hung up in the parlor). One of our friends sent a pair of salted-almond spoons hoping that we would exchange them if they were duplicated, but it turned out that those were the only ones we had. The sugar spoons were all marked. There were five of them.

I TRIED THE LOCK.

"It is a time-honored custom in our office when one of us is married for the rest to 'combine' and buy a picture; and you could generally tell what year a man's wedding came off by a glance at his parlor wall. Williams, who was married in '84, had 'Far Away;' Brown's, a few years later, was 'The Three Fates.' Ours was, of course, the latest thing out. It had a silver frame.

"As the days went by and pieces of silver piled up on us I was more than once reminded of the couple whose courtship was conducted in Browningese, and who were fitted out by their admiring friends with a Browning tea set, with quotations around the edge. 'Oh, the little more, and how much it is!' The Fords had a run on china, but a good deal of it got broken the first year. The Smiths' speciality was etchings; they had enough for every room in the house—only, they never had a house; they have boarded ever since they were married. Finally the climax came, when my old Uncle John sent us a solid silver tea set. I hadn't expected anything from him, unless perhaps a Bible or a Webster's unabridged, for he didn't enjoy giving anything away. Aggie was getting too tired to be very enthusiastic, but her mother was delighted, and it was no use thinking that I would just as soon have had the money.

"'This makes 103, dear—nine more than Susie Fish had,' said her sister.

"'One hundred and two,' said Aggie.

"'No, dear, 103—102 came this morning.'

"'Oh, I know I never shall get this list right!' exclaimed Aggie, diving for her blank book.

"'Look out, or you'll be handing that book to the parson for a prayer book,' said I.

"'Wouldn't be a bit surprised,' she answered, smiling; Aggie could smile when she was tired.

"Well, we were married. A man breathes easier when it's over with. 'But, Aggie,' I said, as the carriage door slammed on us, 'if it ever happens to us again let's leave out the heathen superstitions.'

"'I know it,' said Aggie. 'I begged them not, but they would smuggle some in. See any in my hair?'

"'Some in your hat brim.' I brushed her off, and she seized the newspaper I had carefully brought along to look like an old married man, and conjured with it a minute, holding it out for an improvised handle. 'Here,' she said, 'the very children in kindergarten know how to make paper dustpans—now brush the carriage seat.' When we got out I gave the hackman a dustpanful of rice with a bill on top. 'There, burn it,' said I.

"'Did you see him chortle in his joy?' said Aggie, giggling; 'Joe, do you feel like a married couple.'

"'Lots,' said I.

"Our ten days in Washington had only one bogie—the blank book. Aggie said she must finish her notes. All I could do was to sit by and fret, and put on the stamps; and she told me I hindered her more than I helped, and she was awfully glad to have me around, it made her feel better.

"We began housekeeping in a cheerful way in a little house on a new street. It was something like to come home to one's own dinner table. We had so much silver that it looked funny with our plain china—nobody had given us a lot of ice-cream sets and things. I tell you, marriage is a lottery when it comes to wedding presents. I liked seeing Aggie's face in the sugar bowl, though. Every night the little maid (imported to live up to the spoons) brought them and all the rest upstairs in a tray and we packed them away in the chest we had made, and a pretty penny it cost, with its combination lock, which went into the end of the closet where nobody could get at it. One night we came home at twelve from a reception, and as we stole upstairs not to wake the sleeping handmaiden, Aggie so sleepy herself that she tripped on her wedding gown and I had to hold her, we came upon the whole array on the floor outside our door.

"'Isn't it imposing? so safe!' said I, but Aggie said, desperately: 'I shan't care anything about going out evenings any more if I've got to put that silver away after I get home.'

"'Let it stay there.'

"'Oh, I can't. Mamma thinks we're so careless. We don't appreciate things enough. She says if anyone had given her such elegant things when she was married she wouldn't have dared to close her eyes!'

"'Take more than that to keep my eyes open.' But I helped Agnes shove the tray under a chair, and drape the train of her wedding dress over it.

"'What on earth are you doing, Aggie?' I asked, on coming in for dinner one day. All I could see was one foot and a skirt ruffle in the closet.

"Aggie scrambled up enough to catch me round my knee. 'Oh, Joe, I'm so glad you've come!'

"'What is it? You're ready to cry.'

"'That's what I like about you; you don't have to be explained to. Henry Walker wouldn't have known I felt like crying if I'd screamed it at him!'

"That made me feel pretty good (though dinner wasn't ready). 'But what—?'

"'It's the silver! I came up to change the forks and spoons so they should get worn alike, and I've shut the paper with the combination in the chest, and I can't remember what it was!'

"I got down beside her. It was hotter than Mexico in that closet. I turned and tried the lock. 'Do keep your dresses out of the way, they tickle the back of my neck.' No good. 'Well, I guess we'll use the old forks to-day,' said I; 'I don't believe they will fade away yet awhile.'

"'Oh, I'm so sorry—but they're every one shut up in that chest.' So we laughed. What else was there to do? It was funny when Deming came home with me to tea—we'd asked him some days before. It wouldn't have been funny with some girls. The table looked principally white china, and the kitchen knives and forks didn't go round. Ever cut omelet with a pewter spoon? It is great.

"It wasn't quite so funny when three hot days had gone by and we had nearly smothered sojourning in the closet, and no news of the combination. 'Don't tell mamma,' pleaded my wife. I began to think I should have to call in a blacksmith, when one evening Aggie startled me by jumping out of bed crying: 'I've got it, I've got it!'

"'Got what—a nightmare?'

"'I've got the combination! I've been working on it all the time, and it just came to me in my sleep. Get right up, Joe, and hold the light, and mind you don't set anything on fire.' In another two minutes the front of the chest fell down, and behold our household gods! 'If anybody wants to steal them between now and daylight, they can, that's all,' said Aggie; 'but I'm not going to shut that lock again to-night for anybody!'

"In the fall there was a burglar scare about town, and Agnes' mother came over and gave her a lecture upon locking the windows. She said we really ought to have a burglar alarm. To please her, I had one put in. Election night I went down to town, telling Aggie not to sit up for me, for I should wait for the returns. It was one o'clock when I opened the front door very softly, not to disturb Agnes. 'Br-r-r-br-r-keplunk!' I had forgotten the alarm.

"Before I had time to say a word or even turn down my coat collar, my wife appeared at the head of the stairs. She pointed a pistol at me. Her hair hung loose, and she was in her—well, never mind; but she looked distractingly pretty.

"'If you come one step further I'll fire!' she cried.

"'It's Joe, Agnes,' said I, meekly.

"'I don't believe it! Take off your hat!'

"I took it off, and made her a low bow. 'Don't shoot your husband, he's doing the best he can.'

"Agnes laughed hysterically. 'Oh, Joe, I was so frightened.'

"I rushed upstairs and caught her. I took away the pistol, and wrapped her up in her dressing gown. 'Do you think you ought to appear before burglars in this costume?' I inquired. She blushed. 'I never thought of that.'

SHE POINTED A PISTOL AT ME.

"'And to think you should point a pistol at your own husband!'

"'It wasn't loaded, Joe.'

"'Agnes Lounsbury,' said I, 'do you mean to say you were so rash as to aim at me with a pistol that wasn't loaded?'

"'But I shouldn't have fired it, anyway, it wasn't cocked.'

"'Well, this ends the watchman burglar alarm business,' said I. 'We've had about as much of it as we want. To-morrow we'll decide what silver we want to use every day, and the rest shall go down to the bank.'

"We're able to breathe now. The silver stands on the sideboard, and as yet nobody has carried it off; if they do, Agnes' mother will say she expected it, for we aren't the careful people they used to be in her generation. Once in awhile Aggie quarrels with me because some dish or other that would make a show for company is at the bank, and I don't see my way clear to bring it home under my arm. 'You can have them all home and trust to luck if you'd rather,' I say.

"'I'd rather they were at the bank, because then I should have them, you know.'

"'Don't see it,' said I; 'but it's just as you say.'

"When our anniversary came around we had a present and a note from one of Agnes' elderly friends. The note ran this way:

"'My dear Mrs. Lounsbury: We send you our best congratulations on your anniversary. My husband will have his little joke, you know; and, as some one told him that the Lounsburys had so much silver given them on their wedding that it was a positive embarrassment to them, he says you ought to be ashamed of being such plutocrats at your age, while the older generation has not even accumulated souvenir spoons, and sends you this little gift to remind you of the fact—'

"'Oh, Joe! it's silver;' for I had punched a hole in the paper. 'No, it isn't, no, it isn't, it's plated. We can keep it. It's a pudding dish, or for oysters, you know. How kind. And plated too. It didn't cost much, Joe, did it?'

"'A few dollars, I should think.'

"'How good! Perhaps even less, Joe?'

"'Perhaps so; it's rather light weight.'

"'Isn't it delightful? We'll have some oysters in it to-morrow night, and ask them over to tea.'

"'I should feel dreadfully to have that taken,' I heard her murmur that evening.

"'What for?'

"'Because it's such a comfort to have one thing that you don't care whether it's stolen or not.'

"'You're getting sleepy, Aggie. But I know one thing that "goes on, goes on forever."'

"'What?'

"'Our storage rent. I reckon in a few years we'll have paid for the whole outfit, and then we'll fetch it home and keep open house for burglars with a clear conscience.'

"'Don't be ridiculous, Joe,' said my wife."—N. Y. Tribune.

Cold Baths.

Most medical men consider that a cold bath every morning is apt to do more harm than good to any but persons of a very vigorous constitution. The sensible thing to do is to see that the temperature of the water in cold weather is not lower than that of the air. A daily bath is most healthful, but it should not be so cold as to give a shock to the system.—Chicago Tribune.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

THE SULTAN YIELDS

Orders Expulsion of Armenians from Constantinople Stopped.

PEREMPTORY NOTE FROM ENGLAND

Gladstone's Opinion—Calls the Sultan the Great Assassin of Turkey and His Conduct a Disgrace to the Powers.

Athens, Sept. 11.—In consequence of the receipt of a peremptory British note, the sultan of Turkey has issued an irade ordering that the expulsion of Armenians from Constantinople be stopped.

Paris, Sept. 11.—A dispatch from Constantinople dated Sept. 9 and delayed in transmission, says: The protests of the British and Italian embassies at the deportation of Armenians have had but little effect. The Turkish government has sent a circular to its ministers abroad saying that in view of insuring the maintenance of order here, it has been decided to send to their native countries all unemployed strangers, and the provincial officials have been instructed to watch them and prevent their return to Constantinople. Commissions have been sent to the ports of landing in order to establish the identity of all the deported persons, and a constant watch will thereafter be kept upon their movements. Measures will also be taken to keep out of the Turkish empire the emissaries of the Armenian revolutionary committees who are working in Bulgaria and elsewhere.

TO DEPOSE THE SULTAN.

Rumor That the Powers Are Considering Such a Step Said To Have Been Confirmed.

London, Sept. 11.—It is reported that a private dispatch arrived here last night from Constinople confirming the rumors recently current that the powers are seriously considering the question of deposing the sultan. It is added that important developments are expected from the probable action of the Sheikh-Ul-Islam, whose fiat is necessary for the legal removal of the caliph.

DISGRACE TO EUROPE.

Gladstone Says His Opinion of the Great Assassin of Turkey Is Well Known.

London, Sept. 11.—A few days ago Mr. Gladstone was requested to address a mass meeting to be held at Liverpool for the purpose of condemning the sultan of Turkey for permitting the massacres of Armenians. In reply to the request Mr. Gladstone has written a letter in which he says: "My opinion of the great assassin and of the disgrace the European powers have allowed him to bring upon them are well known to my countrymen, but I do not think that benefit would accrue from my taking part in meetings, however valuable and even obligatory such meetings may be for those still engaged in the active duties of public life."

Miners' Strike Threatened.

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 11.—The miners of this district threatened to go out on a strike on October 1, and trouble is anticipated. One of the mines, Carbondale, has imported 150 men, colored and Italians, for the alleged purpose of keeping prices for mining down to 80 cents instead of 96 cents, the usual winter schedule. The miners say they will not submit to a lower rate than 90 cents.

Condition of the Cereal Crop.

Washington, Sept. 11.—The conditions of winter and spring wheat as gathered from reports to the department of agriculture at present is 74.6 against 75.4 in 1895 and 85.7 in 1894. Corn, 91. The present report of the statistician of the department shows a decline in the condition of corn from the August statement of five points, or from 96 per cent. in August to 91 in September.

Death of an Old Hartford Lawyer.

Hartford, Sept. 11.—Franklin Chamberlin, a retired lawyer of this city, died last evening, aged 75. He was born in Dalton, Mass., April 14, 1821, and was graduated from the Harvard law school in 1844. He was admitted to the bar in Boston in 1851. After practicing law in Springfield, Mass., and New York, he removed to this city before the war and soon established a lucrative law practice.

Life Saving Station in Danger.

Washington, Sept. 11.—Superintendent Kimball is informed that the Cobbs Island, Va., life saving station is in grave danger of being washed away by the inroads the sea has made on the land. It is reported that it is now only fifteen feet from the sea, and the crew for safety have been compelled to move into houses inland.

Relay Bicycle Race.

Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 11.—The relay race yesterday from Pittsfield, Sheffield and return and North Adams and Pittsfield and return, 103 miles, was finished in 6 hours and 49 minutes, beating former records by 21 minutes.

Four Sloops Sunk in Boston Bay.

Boston, Sept. 11.—Four sloops were sunk in Dorchester bay yesterday as the result of the storm. They are the Alert, Addie, Mina and Gypsy. There are also two catboats and two sloops ashore at Cow Pasture, Dorchester.

Secretary Francis Goes to Rhode Island.

Washington, Sept. 11.—Secretary of the Interior Francis left Washington last evening for Jamestown, R. I., to visit his family.

The Dolphin at Newport.

Newport, R. I., Sept. 11.—The United States dispatch boat Dolphin has arrived here.

HILL DECLINES TO SERVE.

Will Not Go to the Buffalo Convention with His Hands Tied.

Albany, Sept. 11.—That senator David B. Hill has declined to serve as a delegate from the Third Albany district to the democratic state convention is made certain and his reasons are set forth in the following telegram sent by the senator to Norton Chase, chairman of the Albany county committee: "I observe in the morning papers that I have been elected delegate from the Third Albany district to the state convention under instructions to vote for the Chicago platform and candidates. This action is taken in opposition to my wishes and judgment as expressed to you yesterday, and I decline to accept the election upon the conditions imposed or upon any conditions which would restrict my freedom at Buffalo to act in such manner as I consider best for the interest of my party." He was instructed to vote to endorse the Chicago ticket and platform.

USELESS FOR FITZ TO TALK.

Corbett Says He Will Not Meet Him Until After the Sharkey Fight.

Asbury Park, N. J., Sept. 11.—James J. Corbett, speaking of the talk of a match between himself and Fitzsimmons, said last evening: "It is useless for the Australian to talk challenge. For a year and a half," said Corbett, "I lost valuable time trying to arrange a match with him. I had no other contest on hand and could easily have accommodated him if he had wanted to fight. Now, as soon as I get a match on, Fitzsimmons tries to regain the reputation he lost and makes this challenge to fight me. He knows I am matched to fight Sharkey and takes advantage of that fact. However, if Fitzsimmons is so anxious to fight I will accomodate him thirty minutes after the Sharkey contest is over. My belief is that he will never get in the ring with me."

CLEVELAND DISAPPOINTED.

Ex-Senator Payne's Death Interferes with His Shooting Expedition.

Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 11.—The report that President Cleveland was to spend a few days as the guest of ex-Secretary Whitney at the mountain home of young Harry P. Whitney at Lenox gained circulation last evening. Advices from Lenox stated that the president was expected Tuesday. Young Whitney and wife left Lenox last evening for Cleveland to attend the funeral of his grandfather, the late Senator Payne, for whom he was named. The latter's death interfered with the plans of the president and Mr. Whitney, who were to spend a few days hunting on the 8,000-acre preserve on Washington mountain.

Japan's Enormous Imports.

Tokio, Japan, Sept. 11.—During the first half of the current year Japan's imports from abroad exceeded her exports by nearly 27,000,000 yen. A preponderance of imports is by no means a new feature of Japan's foreign trade, but nothing on so large a scale has been previously reported. The causes are apparent, namely: On the one hand the flush of prosperity that always follows victorious war, and, on the other hand, the dull state of the American market.

A Cuban Filibuster Executed.

Havana, Sept. 11.—Luis Parol Martinez, a member of an expedition landed by the steamer Three Friends, was executed yesterday. He died as a Christian. He was a nephew of the deceased Spanish General Golfin. The steamers Buenos Ayres and San Fernando have arrived here with another detachment of troops for Cuba, consisting of 109 officers and 3,980 men.

Probably Filibusters.

Philadelphia, Sept. 11.—It is now fully believed that the twenty-five men seen hurriedly boarding a tug at the Race street wharf Wednesday night, the tug immediately steaming down the river and out the Delaware capes, were filibusters. The officers are satisfied that the men left for the purpose of joining the insurgents.

Worsted Mills Resume Operations.

Woonsocket, R. I., Sept. 11.—John R. Dunn's Jenkesville worsted mill in this city, employing 125 hands, has resumed operations in full after a month's suspension. W. E. Hayward & Co.'s woolen mill in East Douglass, Mass., employing 200 hands, idle for some time, will be in full operation next week.

SILVER MEN CONTROL

Pennsylvania Democrats Throw Over the Gold Plank.

THE CHICAGO TICKET INDORSED

Action of the State Convention Reconvened Yesterday at Harrisburg—Deal Made with the People's Party—An Effort To Oust Harrity.

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 11.—The democratic state convention which was reconvened yesterday for the purpose of filling vacancies on the state ticket that have occurred since the Chicago convention, and also for the primary purpose of nullifying the gold platform adopted by the original state convention at Allentown on April 29, was characterized by a great amount of turmoil. The free silver advocates were largely in the majority, and everything pertaining to the convention was in conformity therewith. The new platform endorses Bryan and Sewall and pledges to them a "cordial, united and vigorous support," accepts the Chicago declaration of principles as the "expression of opinion of the majority of the duly accredited representatives of the democracy of the United States," declares that the democrocy of Pennsylvania is bound by the action of the Chicago convention, because her delegates participated in the proceedings of that convention to the end, and affirms a belief that Bryan and Sewall will be elected.

Join Forces with Populists.

An important outcome of the convention was an agreement to join forces with the people's party. The fusion programme was arrived at after several conferences had been held during the day between a sub-committee of the state democratic committee and the people's party's executive committee of this state. The populists' proposition, which the covention accepted, was that if the democrats agreed to place upon their electoral ticket the names of four populists they (the populists) would place upon their electoral ticket the names of twenty-eight silver democrats, the thirty-two electoral votes (in case of election) to be cast for Bryan. The populists suggested Thomas Sterrell of Erie and Louis N. Ireland of Allegheny for electors-at-large, and Dr. John J. Taylor of Philadelphia and Robert J. Thompson of Indiana for district electors. The two former were formally nominated, but the convention refused to nominate Messrs. Taylor and Thompson, regular democratic candidates in these cases being named. However, J. T. Ailman of Juniata, one of the people's party candidates for congressmen-at-large, was placed upon the democratic ticket for this office, and this may be accepted by the populists in lieu of the district electors. Secretary Matt Savage of the democratic state committee announced at if the four electors should be demanded it would be a question for the democratic state executive committee to determine.

Wanted Harrity Ousted.

The nominations made are as follows: Judge D. C. Dewitt of Bradford county and J. C. Ailman of Juniata county, congressmen-at-large, to succeed Benjamin C. Potts of Media and John M. Braden of Washington, resigned. Thomas Sterrell of Erie, Louis N. Ireland of Allegheny, and Thomas G. Delahanty of Philadelphia, electors-at-large, to succeed James Denton Hancock of Franklin, G. W. Guthrie of Pittsburg, and William M. Singerly of Philadelphia, resigned. The vacancies caused by the resignations of a number of district electors were also filled. An incident of the convention was the defeat of a resolution calling upon National Chairman Jones to oust William F. Harrity of Philadelphia as the national committeeman from Pennsylvania and appoint a successor "who will be in hearty sympathy with the Chicago ticket and platform."

Anniversary of Battle of Lake Erie.

Newport, R. I., Sept. 11.—The anniversary of the Battle of Lake Erie was observed by the decoration of the statue of Oliver Hazard Perry with flowers and flags by Oliver H. P. Belmont, who had the artillery fire the national salute in front of Belcourt yesterday, while last night he entertained several friends at dinner and gave an elaborate display of fireworks. The statue was illuminated and a band gave a concert in the park.

Victim of Burglar.

Winsted, Conn., Sept. 11.—Miss Mary Hoffman, the 18-year-old daughter of Robert Hoffman, who was bound by a burglar and found unconscious in her father's house here Tuesday afternoon, passed a restless night. She appeared quite rational this morning, but again passed into a comatose state. No arrest have been made.

Select Knights of New York.

Batavia, N. Y., Sept. 11.—The Select Knights closed their eighteenth annual session last night and the delegates have started for their homes. Grand treasurer Frank M. Gordon of Williamson, N. Y., was re-elected. The next session will be held at Elmira, September 9, 10, 11, 1897.

To Run in Congressman Sorg's Place.

Middletown, O., Sept. 11.—In the Third district democratic congressional convention John L. Brenner has been nominated by acclamation to fill the vacancy caused by Sorg's withdrawal.

Customs Clerk Short in His Accounts.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 11.—Charles Bryan, cashier of the custom house, is alleged to be short $3,000 in his accounts, as a result of dealing in wheat options.

SPORTS

FRIDAY, Sept. 11. Sun rises 5:36 a. m., sets 6:16 p. m. Lanterns must be lighted between 7:16 p. m. and 4:36 a. m.

Cyclists desiring to join the League o American Wheelmen will be furnished with application blanks and necessary information by addressing the Cycling Department of the Daily Press.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Mr. Hutchins, of Leggett's pharmacy, rode his wheel to Waverly fair yesterday.

Wheelmen appreciate the good work being done on Front street. It is now one of the best streets for wheeling in town.

J. B. Morse, of Plainfield, has purchased a ladies Cleveland Swell Special of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

William J. Kiely, of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company, took an afternoon off yesterday to see the sights at the State fair at Waverly.

Sandford Robinson, of West Second street, took part in the cycle races at Flemington Wednesday and won the quarter-mile race in 33 seconds, thus winning the Hunterdon county championship for the above distance.

Two young men, brothers, hailing from Orange, were on their way home Somerville yesterday afternoon when one of the brothers struck a large stone which threw him off of his wheel. His left arm was severely scraped and scratched, while about the legs and body there were several bruises. The wheel was not injured, and the two brothers rode to Leggett's pharmacy where Mr. Leggett dressed the wounds. In a little while the young men were able to ride home.

AROUND THE BASES.

The baseball season in Plainfield is drawing to a close and not many more games are likely to be played.

Tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock the Y. M. C. A. baseball team will meet the Plainfield Athletic Club team, and a good game is promised. The latter team has been putting up good ball and they feel confident that they can beat the former team, as they have beaten the Dunellen A. C., who came very near winning last Saturday's game with the Y. M. C. A. boys. Following is the batting order of the Y. M. C. A. team: Townley, C.; McKelvey, 2b.; W. MacLoughlin, c f.; J. MacLaughlin, 1b.; Cory, 3b.; Symons, l.f.; Fletcher, s.s.; W. Townley, r.f.; Burt, p. This will probably be the last game of the season and it should be well patronized.

GOLF.

The Y. M. C. A. football team met last evening at the Y. M. C. A. building. Fred H. Freeman was chosen captain, C. W. Nichols, manager, and Thomas U. Smith, assistant manager. Plans for the season were discussed.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

Chas. C. Brower won third money in the 2:26 class at Waverly yesterday with "Highland Boy."

A Timely Reminder.

Each season forces upon our consideration its own perils to health. The advent of fall finds many reduced in strength and vigor, poorly prepared to continue the business of life. The stomach and bowels, the great highway of animal economy, is especially liable to disorder in the fall. The nervous system has also suffered in the struggle. Typhoid fever and malaria in particular find in the fall that combination of earth, air and water that mark this season as especially dangerous. The falling leaves, the decaying vegetables continue their share of contamination. Hood's Sarsaparilla furnishes a most valuable safeguard at these important points, and should be used in the fall before serious sickness has laid you low.

Theories of cure may be discussed at length by physicians, but the sufferers want quick relief; and One Minute Cough Cure will give it to them. A safe cure for children. It is "the only harmless remedy that produces immediate results." For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

If you have ever seen a little child n the agony of summer complaint, you can realize the danger of the trouble and appreciate the value of instantaneons relief always afforded by DeWitt's Colic & Cholera Cure. For dysentery and diarrœa it is a reliable remedy. We could not afford to recommend this as a cure unless it were a cure. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

From all accounts Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a Godsend to the afflicted. There is no advertisement about this; we feel just like saying it. The DEMOCRAT, Carrollton, Ky. For sale by T. S Armstrong, Druggist.

LOCK UP YOUR BICYCLES

THREE VALUABLE MACHINES STOLEN LAST EVENING.

Two Were Taken Off of a Front Piazza—Lawyer Angleman Missed His Wheel From a Conspicuous Place in Daylight.

The bicycle thief has at last reached Plainfield. Not only does he appropriate wheels, but he helps himself to lanterns. Of course, it is impossible to say whether it is a certain gang that is at work but, at any rate, three bicycles disappeared last night and now the three owners are walking and vowing all sorts of naughty things against the thieves.

Lawyer Winfield S. Angleman has his offices on the second floor of the building at the corner of Somerset and Front streets. He usually leaves his wheel downstairs in the entry way with the bicycles of several other occupants of the building. Yesterday afternoon he left his wheel, a new '96 Crescent, with several of the others and when he came back later the wheel was gone. Its number is 195,570.

Brereton Platt and Fred Stack board on East Fifth street, near the corner of Watchung avenue. It has been their custom to leave their wheels out on the piazza behind the vines and with the heavy piazza chairs in front of them. They thought that in order to remove the wheels the thief would make such a noise moving the chairs that he would be heard. But he wasn't. He came late last evening and forgot even to leave his card, consequently his victims are at a loss to discern his identity. Platt's wheel was a '95 Cleveland, model 20, No. 32,891. Stack had a full-nickeled Lyndhurst.

Dr. D. C. Adams, of Grove street, was attending a lodge meeting in the Babcock building last evening when some one kindly removed the lantern from his bicycle, which was left in the vestibule. So the doctor walked his wheel his home.

Last week Thomas A. Cuming, of Putnam avenue, lost his lantern in the same way and there are others.

Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards and family, of East Front street, have returned from their summer vacation.

ART IN THE HOME.

There Should Be Books and Bookcases in Every Room.

A bookcase should, if possible, find a place in every room of the house, unless, perhaps, we except the dining-room, usually kept for the purpose of dining, as it at once adds the charm of comfort and homeliness, besides being a most useful possession. Without books a home lacks its best ornaments, and to fill an odd corner there is nothing so nice as a pretty, well-designed bookcase. Naturally, we should not use the same design for the different rooms. In this, as in all things, appropriateness has to be considered. It must suit the style of the room, and be in keeping with the other furniture.

For the library it is usual to have fitted bookcases, in oak or walnut, which are sometimes carried from floor to ceiling, but may be made only half way to form a dado, the top shelf being furnished with handsome molding and forming a ledge for the display of a few choice ornaments.

In the sitting-room half a dwarf bookcase, with nicely carved pedestal moldings, looks extremely well, and will be found very handy for books of reference.

A still simpler bookcase may be made by fitting three shelves into a recess and finishing the edge with a small bead molding, or even a good silk fringe, and suspending a silk curtain from the lowest shelf to the floor, behind which newspapers, etc., may be placed. This style, again, is very useful in the bedroom, and it is so readily made that anyone who has an idea of carpentry can manage to erect one for himself at a very small cost. Then, again, there is the small, hanging bookcase, or, rather, shelves, which are usually found in bedrooms and girls' sitting-rooms, and are always useful and pretty wall decorations.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

What Troubled Him.

The habit potentates have of traveling incog. frequently causes suffering where it is least expected. It is said of the emperor of Austria that once, traveling in this manner, he put up at an inn. After eating a few slices of ham and biscuit he went to bed. In the morning he paid his bill and departed. A few hours after several of his suite arrived, and, hearing the rank of his guest, the landlord appeared much troubled. "Pshaw, man!" said one. "Franz Joseph is accustomed to such adventures and will think nothing of it." "But I shall," said mine host, "and never forgive myself for having an emperor in my house and letting him off for three-and-six-pence!"—London Answers.

A Question of Importance—the question of prices.

We don't want anybody to think of this as a "cheap place." It is nothing of the kind. There isn't anything as thoroughly cheap as cheap hats. We can't afford to sell them. But there is such a thing as selling reliable hats at moderate prices. You'll find that method in operation here. You'll find that all our hats will stand the wear test. We sell nothing that we are doubtful about. There's good big money's worth in any hats here, from the ordinary sorts at $1.50 up to the genuine Youman at $5.00

NO LEAVES TO BE BURNED

TOWN IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION START THEIR FALL WORK.

Proposed to Utilize the Paupers in Gathering Falling Leaves to be Taken to a Central Point and Then Carted Away.

The Town Improvement Association held their first fall meeting yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Y. M. C. A. rooms. Judging from the number present it was clearly shown that the objects for which the association was organized have not been lost to view, and the discussion of various subjects was very lively.

The president, Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph, presided, and Mrs. S. R. Krom was in her place as secretary. After the minutes of the previous meetings had been read and approved, the treasurer, Mrs. Alexander Gilbert, read her report which showed that since the last report $19.50 had been received, which now leaves a balance of $54.09 in the treasury. Mrs. J. D. Titsworth made a report regarding the framing of ordinances, and she stated that owing to the fact that the city ordinances had not yet been compiled in corrected form, the committee was unable to do anything. She also stated that complaints had been received regarding the weeds and grass which had been alowed to grow along sidewalks. It was moved that an ordinance covering the matter be framed, but it was finally thought best to place the matter in the hands of the committee.

Under the head of new business, the subject of burning leaves was discussed. Many plans for their disposal were offered, and among them, it was suggested that a large vacant lot be secured and the leaves placed there. When the question was asked how they would be placed there, it was suggested that the paupers of the city be employed to carry them in bags.

Mrs. Pierre Malli made a statement regarding the keeping of yards. She said that people in her section had been rather lax of late and no improvement had been noticed. She also spoke in relation to sidewalks on West Third street and Paradise Alley. She thought that if the proper ones were informed, the matter would be attended to. The next subject under discussion was the spraying of trees, which took the form of a review of the past work. It was thought by all that the work had been effectual and been the means of saving many trees, which otherwise would have been destroyed.

It was stated that Mr. Tobin would not be able next year to do the spraying for the same price, and other arrangements would necessarily have to be made. The matter was left on the table until the next meeting.

Mrs. Pond thought it would be well to invite all the members to the next monthly meeting, when a discussion of the burning of leaves would be more fully considered.

Mrs. Randolph expressed herself as being in favor of the idea and after it was decided so to do, the meeting adjourned.

Shooting at Carrier Pigeons.

William H. Carman, of Dunellen, has a lot of carrier pigeons which he prizes very highly. In all there were about fifty old and young on Sunday last, and the majority of these were registered. Out of a total of twenty liberated on Sunday just for exercise, only fourteen came returned to the loft, and three of the number carried gunshot wounds on the body, showing conclusively that some one or more had shot into the flock. There is a penalty attached to shooting carrier pigeons, and if the practice continues Mr. Carman will doubtless bring the guilty ones to the front and deal with them as law and justice directs.

His Family Home Once More.

After a two months vacation at the mountains and seashore, some at home and others abroad, Stephen R. Hope, janitor of the Bryant School building, has again got his family of school children domiciled in the building, where the fall and winter work has been taken up with much vim. On the opening day in the Bryant School 406 pupils were registered, and on the following day the number was increased to 416. Since then there has been a steady but slow increase in the number of pupils, but a few more could be accommodated on the pinch, Pride.

Ruskin says that, "in general, pride is at the bottom of all mistakes." Contrawise, too, it may be remarked that pride is a preventive of mistakes: pride in your personal appearance and the preservation of the greatest of all blessings—sight—will prevent your making the mistake of neglecting attention to your eyes. Of what this attention should consist you will learn at Collier's, 103 Park avenue, where optical examinations are free.

GOLD DEMOCRATS MEET.

PASS RESOLUTIONS CONDEMNING THE REGULAR STATE CONVENTION.

Officers Elected to Carry on a Campaign Exploiting the Issues Which They Believe are at Stake in the Coming Election.

A meeting of Sound Money Democrats, opposed to Bryan and Sewall and free coinage, was held last night at the Revere House.

James E. Clark presided. A constitution was adopted and the following officers chosen: President, Albert H. Atterbury; vice-presidents, James E. Clark, Rowland Cox, Ernest L. Walz, George J. Tobin, Louis G. Timpson, Thomas H. Keller; treasurer, Edwin W. Conklin; secretary, Carl Pfeiffer.

The following address was adopted:

We, Democrats of Plainfield, N. J., organized in support of the platform and candidates of the Indianapolis convention, hereby state our position as follows:

First, We repudiate the platform of the Chicago convention; it is undemocratic and revolutionary, and the delegates exceeded their powers in adopting it. We commend the New Jersey delegates for their earnest efforts to avert this action and for declining to participate in it. They were sent to choose Democratic candidates on a Democratic platform.

Second, The self styled "regular" branch of the Democratic party in this State has stulified itself. At our convention in May we committed ourselves unqualifiedly to the cause of gold and now in September the seek to commit us to free coinage of silver. We refuse to tolerate such trickery.

Third, We adhere to the principles declared by the Indianapolis Convention, a convention representing the honor, traditions and strength of the Democratic party. The candidates, Palmer and Buckner, are worthy of the platform; they are Democrats of the highest standing and deserving of hearty support.

AN ATTEMPTED HOLDUP.

KAUFFER KNOCKED HIS ASSAILANT DOWN WITH A TENNIS RAQUET.

He Was Returning to West Dunellen Late in the Evening When an Ugly Tramp Sprang Suddenly at Him.

The "tanks" at Greenbrook have long been the gathering place for the hordes of "Wandering Willies," "Weary Waggles," etc., that visit this part of the country during the summer. Several instances of attempted holdups have been reported and the tramps have given a rather unsavory reputation to the place.

Dr. H. J. Kauffer has been spending the summer at the Maltby cottage, West Dunellen, and has twice been hailed by tramps and ordered to halt. He kept on, however, and no attempt was made to stop him. Last Tuesday night he had a different experience.

The Doctor was returning home late at night on his wheel after visiting some friends in Dunellen. He was bringing his tennis raquet home and his friends jokingly told him to beware of highwaymen as this would be the third and all important time. He laughingly answered that he would use his tennis raquet to defend himself with.

He was speeding along past the "tanks" when the light of his lantern showed the figure of a man crouching in the road. The glimpse was but momentary and then the figure sprang at the rider. Almost unconsciously, Dr. Kauffer brought the tennis raquet down on the unprotected head of the highwayman with terrible force. The raquet was almost shattered by the blow while the attacking man uttered a loud groan and fell against the rear wheel of the Doctor's bicycle.

Dr. Kauffer did not wait to see whether his professional services were needed. He is a dentist and thinks maybe he knocked some of the highwayman's teeth out. He rode as if fifty tramps were in hot pursuit and did not stop until he had reached the cottage.

On examining the raquet, he found it spattered with blood. Traces of blood were also found in the rear wheel. Dr. Kauffer does care for a fourth experience.

Robbed in the Crowd.

One middle-aged woman from Dunellen, who mingled with the crowd of speciators at the Republican banner raising Thursday night, had her pocket picked by a sneak theif. She did not notice that her wallet was missing until she got to the North avenue station and looked for her return ticket home. Then she recognized the fact that she had been robbed. Of course there was no clue that would establish the identity of the thief, and as the wallet only contained a little change, she did not consider it worth while to notify the police, neither would she divulge her name.

Walks Lame Now.

William DeMeza, of West Second street, is still very lame as the result of a fall from a wheel Thursday night. He was riding home from New Brunswick and had almost reached Metuchen when a buggy, in which were two drunken young men who were running the horse, approached. DeMeza attempted to get out of their erratic path and struck a rut. What followed may be well understood by any cyclist. DeMeza left a large portion of his cuticle there while his trousers were cut to pieces.

Better Service Now.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—In behalf of the residents along the trolley line of East Fifth street, they desire to compliment the electric road on the improvement noticed in running the cars "at a moderate rate of speed." The new cars are not objectionable; the old ones want looking after or replaced by new ones. The curves need lubricating. E. C. M.

Plainfield Carpenters Laid Off.

Couldn't Take Care of Himself.

Tony Connelly was evidently so drunk last evening that he couldn't take care of himself. Patrolman Cooney assisted him to the lockup and Judge DeMeza suspended sentence on him this morning.

SANDBAGGERS AT WORK.

THEY TRIED TO WAYLAY CLARENCE THORN NEAR RAHWAY.

The Assailant Did Got Take Good Aim and So Struck Thorn's Shoulder Instead of His Head—The Circumstances.

With blanched face and trembling limbs, Clarence Thorn, of East Second street, joined his comrades at the Rahway station last Thursday evening after having passed through a lively and not particularly pleasant experience.

Thorn had left his comrades to walk home with a friend who lives on the road to Milton. After saying good night, he started back to Rahway alone. He had not gone very far when somebody brushed against him. It was very dark, but Thorn could see that the man had on a slouch hat and had his collar pulled up around his ears.

Thorn suggested that he be more careful and a few words passed between them. Then the stranger made a quick movement and something whizzed by Thorn's ear. It was evidently aimed for his head but it missed that and landed heavily on his shoulder, forcing him down on his knees. All the stories that he had ever heard of sandbaggers flashed through Thorn's mind and with one wild yell he jumped forward and rushed into the darkness.

"Kill the ————!" shouted his assailant, and four shadowy forms sprang forward. To attempt to resist would be foolhardy, and Thorn covered the ground at an amizang rate of speed. The attack had been so sudden that he had had hardly time to collect his wits. Panting from his long run he at last reached the rest of the party, rather lame in the region of his right shoulder and considerably excited to say the least.

The story of the attempted sandbagging was told and then the party returned to Plainfield, keeping a good lookout for tall strangers with slouch hats.

DIDN'T GET THE JOB.

A Poor Man Sent on a Fools Errand by a New York Employment Agency.

William Fleming, a good looking man aged twenty-three years, of No. 538 West 49th street, New York City, was duped through a New York employment agency, yesterday. He applied to the agency on Greenwich street for work of any kind, and was sent out to "B. T. Barrett's farm, back of Dunellen, N. J." Fleming packed up all of his earthly possessions, and went to Dunellen, reaching there soon after noon yesterday. He carried a big satchel in which he said was all he owned. Arriving there he inquired for and found Barrett's place, and was then told that a man had been engaged before he arrived.

The man was of course vexed, but he took a philosophical view of the situation, and said he would get satisfaction when he got back to New York. So he came to Plaingeld on a trolley car, and then returned to the by steam cars.

McCutchen, of Rockview terrace, are tie for the honor.

He wants to vote for McKinley and Hobart.

Need New Overcoats.

Now that the cold weather is coming, the drivers of the fire department are in need of new overcoats. Their old ones are completely worn out and the firemen play far too an important part in Plainfield's welfare to be neglected.

GRIST OF CITY COURT.

CADI DE MEZA ESCAPES WITH LIGHT JUDICIAL DUTIES TODAY.

The Excise Law Violators Who Pleaded Non Vult Were Let Off With a Reprimand—Three Profane Men Arraigned.

City Judge De Meza escaped comparatively easy from his city judicial duties this morning for, instead of a dozen long cases to occupy the entire Saturday morning, it only took about an hour to settle the little business that came up.

The trial of Mary McGrath, for disturbing the peace, was adjourned one week on account of the unavoidable absence of her counsel, ex-Judge W. A. Coddinton.

Sentence was pronounced on Nathan Richmond and Samuel Kline, alias Samuel Evan, the alleged illegal liquor sellers. It may be remembered that they pleaded non vult through their counsel, ex-Councilman W. L. Hetfield. Mr. Hetfield was present this morning and made a plea for mercy in behalf of his clients. The Judge suspended sentence on them with a warning that any further offense in that neighborhood would result in a heavy fine and a long term of imprisonment.

There was only one other case, but that was a remarkable one. There were three prisoners, James Sebring, George Hall and Henry Smith, and they were all charged with being disorderly and using profane language on West Front street early last Sunday morning, about 1 o'clock. They had been over in the borough visiting the different saloons and were going home.

Now, according to the police, Patrolman Vanderweg and Flannagan and Constable Rockafellow, the men were arguing loudly swearing and acted generally in a way not in keeping with the hour when everybody else was trying to sleep. But when the men told their story, you would think them the most abused set you ever heard of. The testimony was very contradictory and the Judge took a week to consider the matter before announcing his decision.

TELLS A DIFFERENT STORY NOW.

The Giles Girl Says She Did Not Go Willingly With Luccio.

The story that Louise Giles told to Justice Newcorn yesterday puts still a different face on the matter.

According to her story, she wrote to Ernest Luccio, the Italian implicated in the case, sometime ago telling him that she could not go with him any more, as her parents objected.

When he met her that eventful Monday night, she was afraid to refuse to accompany him. And all her actions, she now claims, were forced, including the marriage. She was afraid to refuse for fear he would do her some injury.

Luccio is now waiting at the county jail and will be brought to Plainfield in time for his hearing Monday afternoon at three o'clock.

Didn't Organize.

The Republican Campaign Committee, together with the sub-committees, met last evening for the purpose of organizing, but owing to the fact that many of the members were away it was impossible to accomplish much. —The Grace P. E. church will begin its regular Sunday evening services tomorrow evening at 7:45. Rev. Alden S. Bennett, of Waltham, Mass., will preach morning and evening.

DID BATTLE WITH A TUB.

AN EXCITING EPISODE IN A WEST FOURTH STREET HOUSE.

Two Colored Men Use Anything They Can Get Their Hands on to Win the Fight They Indulged In—Arrested.

With everything that came handy for weapons, two colored residents of West Fourth street went for each other last evening in a highly exciting manner. The two dusky skinned individuals, who were implicated in the racket, were Walter Carter and Solomon Lewis.

What the cause of the quarrel was no one seems to know exactly, not even the combatants themselves. At any rate they became excited over something. Words led to blows and the tenament house on West Fourth street, in which they both live, was turned topsy turvy by their vigorous movements. Carter seized a tub and used it with considerable effect on Lewis' eye, leaving as a remembrance a deep cut and a black eye. Lewis twirled a chair about his head but Carter was tougher than the chair and the latter gave way. Kitchen utensils, stove pokers, and the like began o fly around like flies in a butcher shop. Carter gained possession of a board about four feet long and spanked his opponent most delightfully.

The racket was in full blast when someone told Patrolman Cooney and he took a hand in the game. The scrappers quieted down surprisingly on the appearance of the officer and made no resistence when he arrested them both and locked them up. They appeared before City Judge DeMeza this morning. As Lewis' face was damaged to about the extent of five dollars, the Judge allowed him to go on payment of a five dollar fine. Carter was evidently the upper man in the fight and in default of ten dollars to pay his fine he was escorted to the county jail for thirty days.

They were caught by Cuny in a spring cage, in which he placed a canary as a decoy. The birds were used as evidence and then liberated by the game warden.

RACE FOR PRESIDENT

Progress of the Campaigns of the Different Parties.

MAJOR M'KINLEY'S MANY VISITORS

He Shakes Hands with Three Governors and Receives Several Large Delegations—Mr. Bryan and Party's Southern Itinerary.

Canton, O., Sept. 12.—Yesterday was a grand day for Canton and for Gov. McKinley, and to-day promises to be one almost as active for the presidential nominee. Yesterday three governors, instead of two, as was first announced, clasped hands with Major McKinley, and visitors from the Green mountains of Vermont joined with others from Narragansett bay, from northwestern Pennsylvania and from Ohio in greeting and cheering the republican candidate for president. Major McKinley had more than 3,000 callers and shook hands with all of them and listened to their cordial words and expressions of good wishes. The first delegation to arrive was that from Vermont. They were headed by Senator Proctor, and accompanied by Gov. Woodbury, Gov.-elect Grout, Congressman Powers, Lieut.-Gov. Mansur and Lieut.-Gov. elect N. W. Fiske. An hour and a half after the Vermonters had departed the sound of marching feet and the inspiring music of bands were again heard, and 2,500 citizens of Lorain county, O., arrived. Following closely after the Lorain county people was a delegation from Erie, Pa., consisting of the Lincoln club of that city and delegates to the League convention recently held in Erie. Not more than one-third of the Ohio and Pennsylvania vistors had departed when a long line of carriages drove up and Gov. Lippitt of Rhode Island and Gov. Bushnell of Ohio, with their richly uniformed staff officers, alighted. Maj. McKinley met the two governors at his doorstep and greeted them cordially. The members of the two staffs were introduced to Major and Mrs. McKinley. Mrs. Bushnell accompanied the governor. While these social functions were going on Major McKinley introduced Gov. Bushnell to the great crowd gathered in the yard. Speechmaking and exchange of compliments followed.

DEATH OF PROF. F. J. CHILD.

He Was One of Harvard University's Best Known Instructors.

Boston, Sept. 12.—Prof. Francis J. Child of Cambridge, Mass., one of the best known of Harvard university instructors, is dead. Prof. Francis J. Child, Ph. D., LL. D., was perhaps the most learned gentleman in the Harvard community. It was not ouly his long service at Harvard which made him so widely known, but his work on "English and Scottish Ballads," which took many years for preparation, is the standard collection. He was born in Cambridge, Feb. 1, 1825, and fitted for Harvard at the English High school in Boston. He was in the class of '46 at Harvard with Prof. Charles Eliot Norton, Prof. George Martin Lane, senator George F. Hoar, Prof. Fitz-Edward Hall and other noted men. He joined the teaching force at Harvard as a tutor in mathematics and afterwards he was made a tutor in rhetoric and history. In the years 1849-50 he traveled and studied in Europe, and in 1851 succeeded Prof. E. T. Channing as professor of rhetoric and oratory. He exchanged this chair for English literature in 1875. Since that time he has been known to undergraduates largely through his courses in Anglo-Saxon and Shakespeare. His contributions to literature, beside his work on balladry, have been largely as an editor. He superintended the American edition of the British poets, edited the works of Spencer and prepared annotations for many other literary works.

RECEPTION TO NANSEN.

King Oscar Unwillingly Made To Appear as a Partisan in Norway.

Berlin, Sept. 12.—A dispatch to the Tageblatt says that the people of Sweden are highly indignant that the reception given to Dr. Nansen, the Arctic explorer, in Christiania, should have been utilized for political purposes. King Oscar was unknowingly made to appear as a partisan of Norway. The king gave an audience to a representative of the Tageblatt, at which his majesty angrily resented the conduct of the Norwegian radicals. He was particularly indignant at the manner in which they had placed him in a false position in order to make political capital, seeing that he had subscribed largely to the expenses of Dr. Nansen's expedition, and that he had always abstained from taking sides in the agitation having for its object the separation of Norway and Sweden.

A number of others were slightly wounded. The losses to the rebels are not stated.

HOLLAND'S PERMANENT WAR.

No General Is Allowed to Win a Final Victory.

A correspondent says that a number of men were talking about England's little wars at the club, and, most pertinently, a man, a Boston man, who has only been ashore four or five days after a voyage of something like 115 days from Java in a sailing ship, chipped in: "I've got a yarn to spin in that connection." You will notice the nautical way he spoke, after his experience at sea.

"As all the world knows, the Dutch have for years and years been trying to conquer the island of Sumatra. Sumatra is the largest island in the world, bar Australia"—that's what he said; "I am, geographically speaking, too weak to state it as a fact—"and as the Dutchmen have made Java a great source of revenue, they have been trying to conquer Sumatra as well.

"I got to know our consul at Batavia, the principal Javanese port, and, through him, a lot of Dutch officials, and I thought I'd like to take a shy at going to Acheen, the one place in Sumatra where the Dutch have a safe foothold, and see how so long-drawn-out a war was conducted, for the Dutch have every modern appliance for romping over such savages as the natives of Sumatra, and only the interior climate is against their easy success.

"I got a tip from the inside that I had better not waste any time, as under no circumstances would the Dutchmen at Acheen let me go to the front, where military operations were going on. That point, as I understand it, is some 300 miles inland.

"'And why?' I asked.

"'For the very good reason,' said the man who gave me the tip, 'that this war is a permanent thing for Holland, and a soft thing for the ring. There are government officials in Amsterdam and Dutch government colonial officials out here who each make from 50,000 to 200,000 florins a year out of the war in the way of supplying military stores, and the transportation of troops, or by means of any various little games that big politicians out for the dust have a way of playing. Not very long ago, in a moment of enthusiasm on some one's part, a Dutch general was appointed to the command of Sumatra because he boasted that he could put an end to the war in a few months. He started in at full speed, and was keeping his promise so well that a vigorous (but very quiet) row was kicked up in the innermost circles, and he was recalled. Therefore, I didn't bother to go and investigate the Dutch campaign in Java."—Boston Post.

Willful Waste.

The story writer had been out very late, and when he arrived home explained his tardiness at length and with great minuteness. His wife listened without comment until the end. "Well," he said, after a gloomy pause "doesn't that explanation satisfy you?" "Perfectly," she replied. "It was lovely. Only, John, dear, I think it very extravagant of you to squander so much originality outside of your business."—Chicago News.

Can't Eat

This is the complaint of thousands at this season. They have no appetite; food does not relish and often fails to digest, causing severe suffering. Such people need the toning up of the stomach and digestive organs, which a course of Hood's Sarsaparilla will give them. It also purifies and enriches the blood, cures that distress after eating and

Internal Misery

Only a dyspeptic can know, creates an appetite, overcomes that tired feeling and builds up and sustains the whole physical system. It so promptly and effectively relieves dyspeptic symptoms and cures nervous headaches, that it seems to have almost "a magic touch."

Distress After Eating.

"I have been troubled with indigestion for some time. After eating anything that was sweet I was sure to experience great difficulty and distress. Last fall I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and am glad to say that my stomach trouble has entirely disappeared. I can now eat a hearty meal of almost any kind of food and have no trouble afterwards. Hood's Sarsaparilla has also cured me of nervous spells." JOHN H. HOMRIGHAUSEN, Wheatland, Iowa. Losing Flesh

You naturally lose flesh in the summer and running down is so easy. You get a little weaker each day without hardly noticing it. There is loss of appetite, headache, weakness of the muscles, disturbed sleep, weakness of memory, and these are the beginning of nervous prostration. Iron and tonics and bitters may afford some temporary relief, but what you need is a food for body, brain and nerves.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil with the Hypophosphites, furnishes just the nourishment needed for those who are run down and pale and thin and weak. If you lose flesh in summer take Scott's Emulsion now. Don't wait till fall or winter before beginning.

CHANGES IN OUR COLLEGES.

The Rigidity of Discipline Has Been Relaxed.

If we look over the period covered by these memoirs (lives of Presidents Barnard and McCosh) we can see what changes have come to pass, says the Atlantic. Briefly stated they are these. It is most remarkable that pecuniary resources have increased enormously and this has made possible better buildings, larger libraries, more teachers. Private gifts, land grants and legislative appropriations have all contributed to this result. With more liberal expenditures, there has been greater freedom in every detail. The rigidity of discipline has been relaxed, manners are not so stiff, there is far less of petty regulation, the teaching is not so severe, the methods of living are much more civilizing. "The curriculum" has gone.

Either absolute election or a very large amount of choice is now permitted. With the abandonment of one fixed course the required amount of Greek and Latin has been greatly diminished and it is demonstrated that classical studies have gained more than they have lost by this change. History, English, French and German receive an amount of attention that was not given to these subjects 30 years ago. On the other hand, there is less attention to public speaking. Of great importance is the wide introduction of laboratory methods in the study of science, especially in physics, chemistry, physiology, botany and geology. Athletics have made marvelous advances. Finally, the admission of women to the advantages of higher education, either by coeducation, or by "annexes," or by separate foundations, is one of the greatest gains of the period under review.

SPIDERS FOR PARTNERS.

A Sirup Bottler Who Utilizes the Services of 6,000 Insects.

A sirup bottler has improved upon the prison lesson of Bruce, says Science. He has taken the spider into partnership in the working of one of his important departments. Flies, cockroaches and other insects, attracted by his sweets and encouraged by the genial air of his bottling room, used to interfere with his work, get into his bottles, steal his goods and "worry him to death." Some 6,000 spiders now make their home on the ceiling and walls of his bottling department. Said the bottler to an interviewer:

"These creatures know more than a great many people. Spiders do not care for sweet things and never drop into my vats or get into my bottles. I never disturb them except to feed them occasionally. They appear to know my call and will come out and feed from my hand or take a fly from my finger.

"They shut themselves up during most of the winter months in their little nests you see stuck like daubs of mud about the ceiling. When winter comes I brush away all the webs. They prefer to weave new ones every spring.

"I have been running this spider farm only two years, but I find my little partners indispensable. They will not endure in the place a single fly or insect that is a plunderer of sweets and sirups."

QUEENS UNCOMFORTABLE.

The Red Tape of the Palace Was Odious to Marie Antoinette.

In Baron Rothschild's recent book of anecdotes he tells some curious tales of the extremely stringent rules of etiquette which prevailed at the French court in the reign of Louis XVI. Marie Antoinette christened the Comtesse de Noailles "Mme. Etiquette." Once when she fell from a donkey in her private grounds, she jumped to her feet and cried out laughing: "Go and fetch Mme. de Noailles; she will tell us what is prescribed for a queen of France when she falls off a donkey."

One cold winter night, when the queen was undressing, the maid was handing her the chemise du nuit, when the lady in waiting came in, to whom, as being of superior rank, the garment had to be given over, says the Mirror. She could not touch it, however, until she had removed her gloves, and before that operation had been performed the Duchess d'Orleans, a princess of the blood, turned up, and after her the Comtesse de Provence, who was of higher rank still, so that the chemise had to be handed down from one to the other, while the queen stood waiting and shivering. At last, unable to contain herself any longer, she exclaimed: "It is obious! What a nuisance!"

Old Time Paris Prison.

The officials of the department of the Seine have undertaken the complete reorganization of the Parisian prisons, and many famous buildings of Paris are about to come down. The prison of La Petite Roquette, where children are now sent, is to be done away with, and the youthful prisoners are to be passed on to the Ecole de Montesson. This is a beautifully situated establishment on the borders of the Seine, in healthy air, where the children will be taught trades. Mazas, Ste. Pelagie, Grande Roquette and the big central prison infirmary are all to be abolished and the prisoners transferred to Fresnes, where a huge building is now being constructed with 2,000 cells.

How Electricity Kills.

Experiments have been made by a French scientist upon dogs in order to determine the cause of death in electric shock. The conclusion reached is that for a given animal in normal condition as to health a definite amount of electrical energy will produce fatal results. It is thought that the action of the electrical discharge is to contract the arteries and to increase the pressure of the blood, and that death is due to inability on the part of the heart to sustain the increased pressure of the blood so produced. Post-mortem examinations seem to show that the passage of the current does not cause any anatomical disintegration.

NEW QUARRYING METHOD.

An Albany Man Now Cuts Stone with Wire Rope.

Those who have indulged in deep sea fishing know how the fish line cuts deeply into the hard wood of the gunwale as it is hauled in while taut. Even an iron protection, after a time, shows the wear of the rope, which is comparatively soft. This gives a clew to the invention of an Albany quarryman for cutting stone. Instead, however, says the Detroit Free Press, of hemp, he proposes to use wire rope, and with this he will carve the marble and stone right out of its native bed. The wire is wound in strands, and has a very rough surface, powerful machinery gives a strong and steady strain, and the stone, yielding to the constant wear, parts, with smooth edge. It would be easy enough to cut the blocks after they are removed from the quarry, but where the cleverness of the inventor comes in is devising mechanism that can be applied to the stone while in the quarry. This is effected by sinking two parallel channels in the quarry to a depth of little greater than that of the lowest level of the stone to be cut. The channels may be from 20 to 100 feet, or more, apart. At the bottom of each is made a small hole to receive the foot ends of the shafts of the machine. This is the only preparation of the quarry that is necessary. The ropes, which are coiled on huge drums, are then passed around the channels, and as the drums revolve the cutting proceeds. Suitable brakes are provided for the regulation of the speed and pressure. The ordinary speed of the strand is 800 feet a minute, so that a mile length of it passes in six minutes. While the strand is moving, crushed stone or chilled shot and water can be introduced to increase the attrition. Far better, however, than either of these is a composition obtained from the tailings of a magnetic iron separator, which costs about one-tenth as much as the chilled shot. It does not leave the lines caused by the shot, and it can be used over and over again.

PUBLIC SERVICE IN CHINA

Two Merits of the Competitive Educational System.

Ex-Secretary John W. Foster, who was the confidential adviser of the emperor of China in the peace negotiations with Japan, contributes a paper on "The Viceroy Li Hung Chang" to the August Century. Mr. Foster says of the viceroy:

"He does not regard the competitive educational system of admission to the public service as a perfect method, and more than once he has recommended to his emperor material modifications in the existing system. But it must be confessed that it has stood the test of centuries with much benefit to China, and its practical operation has demonstrated that it possesses two merits of inestimable value to any nation; first, it brings all the offices of the empire within the reach of the lowest subject; and secondly, it diminishes the incentives to, and opportunities of, corruption and favoritism in securing entrance into official life. But in China the competitive examination ends with the admission; beyond that step promotion must come through other methods. Li Hung Chang secured the right of admission to office through his assiduous application to study, and every succeeding step in his upward career has been attained by his own genius and capacity."

CURIOUS MENTAL FEAR.

Wheelman Afraid His Steed Would Shy at Steam Roller.

"A man who has ridden horseback for many years," said a physician, "doesn't quickly lose his feeling of uncertainty as to what his steed is going to do in an emergency after he has taken to riding a bicycle. I had a curious illustration of this. I was riding my wheel up the boulevard when I met a big steam roller at Ninety-second street. Horses that will rub noses against a moving train will shy at a steam roller for some unknown reason. Horsemen recognize steam rollers as things to be avoided at any cost. Now I have been riding a wheel for a year, but as soon as I saw that roller coming down the boulevard I instinctively turned my wheel into a side street to avoid it. For the moment I felt that I was in danger of being thrown. Then I realized the advantage that a wheelman has over a horseback rider when it comes to steam rollers, and I turned around and rode past this particular roller with great satisfaction."

She Disliked Steamboats.

The wife of a physician who lives in Washington tells a story of a distant kinswoman who was her guest during the Christian Endeavor convention. The kinswoman lives in an inland New England town, and when she came to Washington she spent one night of the journey on board a steamboat. It was the first time she had ever traveled by water. She reached Washington extremely fatigued. The doctor's wife remarked it. "Yes, I'm tired to death," said the kinswoman. "I don't know as I care to travel by water again. I read the card in my state room about how to put the life preserver on and I thought I understood it, but I guess I didn't, though. Some way, I couldn't seem to go to sleep with the thing on."

Li Hung Chang's Pipe.

The Brussels correspondent of the London Daily Chronicle says that an amusing incident occurred at the royal dinner given to Li Hung Chang the other evening. After passing into the state drawing-room at the conclusion of dinner, the Chinese envoy, apparently in ignorance of the rule of court etiquette which strictly forbids smoking in the state apartments, pulled out a long pipe, which, duly filled and lighted by his secretary, was returned to the owner, who began drawing it with evident satisfaction to himself. King Leopold, with kindly tact, had cigarettes thereupon passed round, and in a few minutes the whole company were puffing vigorously.

HOT AFTER THE TURK

Agitation in England at Last Assuming Formidable Shape.

THE GREAT ASSASSIN MUST BE STAYED

A Petition to the Lord Mayor of London Asking Him To Call a Meeting of Citizens To Take Action in the Matter—Asquith's Opinion.

London, Sept. 12.—A petition addressed to the lord mayor is being signed asking him to summon a meeting of citizens to assure the government in taking effective measures to stop the reign of terror in Turkey of the unanimous support of the citizens. Miss Frances Willard has written a letter to 10,000 local Women's Christian Temperance unions in the United States and Canada appealing to them to organize meetings to co-operate with England in stopping the massacres of Christians by Turks.

Asquith Criticizes the Government.

The Right Hon. Herbert Asquith, formerly home secretary, has sent a message to the Chronicle on the Turkish question, saying that Great Britain should have refused to hold further terms with a goverment which has become a mere instrument for executing the purposes of a will that is either criminal or insane. The European powers, he adds, cannot condone the past crimes of the porte or ignore future dangers. Mr. Asquith concludes his message with an expression of the hope that there will be shortly witnessed such a manifestation of public opinion as will give strength and authority to decided action on the part of Great Britain. The Chronicle to-day publishes nine columns of letters against the sultan and reports of meetings held to express indignation against the massacres of Christians. In a leader the paper censures ex-Prime Minister Rosebery for his silence on the subject of Turkish atrocities.

Sir Philip Currie Interviews the Sultan.

Constantinople, Sept. 12.—After the selamlik yesterday afternoon the sultan gave a private audience to Sir Philip Currie, the British ambassador.

Bancroft Delayed.

New York, Sept. 12.—It will be impossible for the cruiser Bancroft, now fitting out at the navy yard for the Bosphorous, to get away before next Tuesday on account of the amount of work yet remaining to be done. A dispatch to that effect was sent to the naval officials at Washington last night. The officers of the Bancroft had experienced, it is said, some difficulty in obtaining her full complement of men owing to the fact that sailors do not seem anxious to sign for a three years' cruise in European waters, but she has now her full quota.

German Army Manoeuvres.

Berlin, Sept. 12.—The night operations of troops taking part in the military manoeuvres at Goerlitz have been abandoned owing to a cloudburst, which has rendered the country roads and fields impassable. The troops have already bivouacked for three nights and the heavy rains and their consequent discomfort have had a bad effect upon them.

California Fruit in London Market.

London, Sept. 12.—Four thousand half cases of California fruit were offered for sale at the Covent Garden market yesterday 2,000 of which were disposed of, the remainder, all pears, being held over until next week. Of the fruit sold, Bartlett pears brought from 4s. 6d. to 6s. 3d. Lots of peaches, aggregating 400 half cases, were sold at 4s. to 6s. 6d.

Did Not Die of Fright.

Cherryfield, Me., Sept. 12.—The report that Capt. John Leighton of Millbridge died of fright during the excitement over the grand stand accident on the Fair grounds here Wednesday was a mistake. He had an attack of heart disease, to which he is subject, and was carried home unconscious, but has now recovered his usual health.

Running on New Time Scale.

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 12.—The mills of the J. & P. Coats Thread Co. are now running on a new time schedule. The finishing department, employing 700 help, is reduced from sixty hours per week to forty-eight and one-half hours. The carding, mule-spinning and twisting departments are not affected.

Fails Again To Lower His Record.

Watertown, N. Y., Sept. 12.—The pacing stallion Joe Patchen, at an adjourned meeting yesterday at the Jefferson county fair grounds, paced an exhibition mile in an attempt to lower his record of 2:03. He made precisely the same time made by him in each of his two trials Thursday—namely, 2:06¼.

Destructive Free Turnpike Agitators.

Springfield, Ky., Sept. 12.—The free turnpike agitators are on another raid. Between midnight and 1 o'clock a mob numbering from seventy-five to 125 destroyed the toll gates on the three turnpikes leading into Wilsh[illegible], a little village twelve miles from here.

Providence Paper Sued for Libel.

Providence, R. I., Sept. 12.—Henry Thaxter has begun suit for $5,000 against the Telegram Publishing company of this city for libel. The paper published an article a couple of weeks ago accusing him of horse-thieving.

Killed by a Fall from a Glacier.

Zermatt, Switzerland, Sept. 12.—Prof. Gruner, while ascending the Lisk mm with two guides, fell from a glacier and was killed.

CHANGES IN OUR COLLEGES.

The Rigidity of Discipline Has Been Relaxed.

If we look over the period covered by these memoirs (lives of Presidents Barnard and McCosh) we can see what changes have come to pass, says the Atlantic. Briefly stated they are these. It is most remarkable that pecuniary resources have increased enormously and this has made possible better buildings, larger libraries, more teachers. Private gifts, land grants and legislative appropriations have all contributed to this result. With more liberal expenditures, there has been greater freedom in every detail. The rigidity of discipline has been relaxed, manners are not so stiff, there is far less of petty regulation, the teaching is not so severe, the methods of living are much more civilizing. "The curriculum" has gone.

Either absolute election or a very large amount of choice is now permitted. With the abandonment of one fixed course the required amount of Greek and Latin has been greatly diminished and it is demonstrated that classical studies have gained more than they have lost by this change. History, English, French and German receive an amount of attention that was not given to these subjects 30 years ago. On the other hand, there is less attention to public speaking. Of great importance is the wide introduction of laboratory methods in the study of science, especially in physics, chemistry, physiology, botany and geology. Athletics have made marvelous advances. Finally, the admission of women to the advantages of higher education, either by coeducation, or by "annexes," or by separate foundations, is one of the greatest gains of the period under review.

SPIDERS FOR PARTNERS.

A Sirup Bottler Who Utilizes the Services of 6,000 Insects.

A sirup bottler has improved upon the prison lesson of Bruce, says Science. He has taken the spider into partnership in the working of one of his important departments. Flies, cockroaches and other insects, attracted by his sweets and encouraged by the genial air of his bottling room, used to interfere with his work, get into his bottles, steal his goods and "worry him to death." Some 6,000 spiders now make their home on the ceiling and walls of his bottling department. Said the bottler to an interviewer:

"These creatures know more than a great many people. Spiders do not care for sweet things and never drop into my vats or get into my bottles. I never disturb them except to feed them occasionally. They appear to know my call and will come out and feed from my hand or take a fly from my finger.

"They shut themselves up during most of the winter months in their little nests you see stuck like daubs of mud about the ceiling. When winter comes I brush away all the webs. They prefer to weave new ones every spring.

"I have been running this spider farm only two years, but I find my little partners indispensable. They will not endure in the place a single fly or insect that is a plunderer of sweets and sirups."

QUEENS UNCOMFORTABLE.

The Red Tape of the Palace Was Odious to Marie Antoinette.

In Baron Rothschild's recent book of anecdotes he tells some curious tales of the extremely stringent rules of etiquette which prevailed at the French court in the reign of Louis XVI. Marie Antoinette christened the Comtesse de Noailles "Mme. Etiquette." Once when she fell from a donkey in her private grounds, she jumped to her feet and cried out laughing: "Go and fetch Mme. de Noailles; she will tell us what is prescribed for a queen of France when she falls off a donkey."

One cold winter night, when the queen was undressing, the maid was handing her the chemise du nuit, when the lady in waiting came in, to whom, as being of superior rank, the garment had to be given over, says the Mirror. She could not touch it, however, until she had removed her gloves, and before that operation had been performed the Duchess d'Orleans, a princess of the blood, turned up, and after her the Comtesse de Provence, who was of higher rank still, so that the chemise had to be handed down from one to the other, while the queen stood waiting and shivering. At last, unable to contain herself any longer, she exclaimed: "It is obious! What a nuisance!"

Old Time Paris Prison.

The officials of the department of the Seine have undertaken the complete reorganization of the Parisian prisons, and many famous buildings of Paris are about to come down. The prison of La Petite Roquette, where children are now sent, is to be done away with, and the youthful prisoners are to be passed on to the Ecole de Montesson. This is a beautifully situated establishment on the borders of the Seine, in healthy air, where the children will be taught trades. Mazas, Ste. Pelagie, Grande Roquette and the big central prison infirmary are all to be abolished and the prisoners transferred to Fresnes, where a huge building is now being constructed with 2,000 cells.

How Electricity Kills.

Experiments have been made by a French scientist upon dogs in order to determine the cause of death in electric shock. The conclusion reached is that for a given animal in normal condition as to health a definite amount of electrical energy will produce fatal results. It is thought that the action of the electrical discharge is to contract the arteries and to increase the pressure of the blood, and that death is due to inability on the part of the heart to sustain the increased pressure of the blood so produced. Post-mortem examinations seem to show that the passage of the current does not cause any anatomical disintegration.

NEW QUARRYING METHOD.

An Albany Man Now Cuts Stone with Wire Rope.

Those who have indulged in deep sea fishing know how the fish line cuts deeply into the hard wood of the gunwale as it is hauled in while taut. Even an iron protection, after a time, shows the wear of the rope, which is comparatively soft. This gives a clew to the invention of an Albany quarryman for cutting stone. Instead, however, says the Detroit Free Press, of hemp, he proposes to use wire rope, and with this he will carve the marble and stone right out of its native bed. The wire is wound in strands, and has a very rough surface, powerful machinery gives a strong and steady strain, and the stone, yielding to the constant wear, parts, with smooth edge. It would be easy enough to cut the blocks after they are removed from the quarry, but where the cleverness of the inventor comes in is devising mechanism that can be applied to the stone while in the quarry. This is effected by sinking two parallel channels in the quarry to a depth of little greater than that of the lowest level of the stone to be cut. The channels may be from 20 to 100 feet, or more, apart. At the bottom of each is made a small hole to receive the foot ends of the shafts of the machine. This is the only preparation of the quarry that is necessary. The ropes, which are coiled on huge drums, are then passed around the channels, and as the drums revolve the cutting proceeds. Suitable brakes are provided for the regulation of the speed and pressure. The ordinary speed of the strand is 800 feet a minute, so that a mile length of it passes in six minutes. While the strand is moving, crushed stone or chilled shot and water can be introduced to increase the attrition. Far better, however, than either of these is a composition obtained from the tailings of a magnetic iron separator, which costs about one-tenth as much as the chilled shot. It does not leave the lines caused by the shot, and it can be used over and over again.

PUBLIC SERVICE IN CHINA

Two Merits of the Competitive Educational System.

Ex-Secretary John W. Foster, who was the confidential adviser of the emperor of China in the peace negotiations with Japan, contributes a paper on "The Viceroy Li Hung Chang" to the August Century. Mr. Foster says of the viceroy:

"He does not regard the competitive educational system of admission to the public service as a perfect method, and more than once he has recommended to his emperor material modifications in the existing system. But it must be confessed that it has stood the test of centuries with much benefit to China, and its practical operation has demonstrated that it possesses two merits of inestimable value to any nation; first, it brings all the offices of the empire within the reach of the lowest subject; and secondly, it diminishes the incentives to, and opportunities of, corruption and favoritism in securing entrance into official life. But in China the competitive examination ends with the admission; beyond that step promotion must come through other methods. Li Hung Chang secured the right of admission to office through his assiduous application to study, and every succeeding step in his upward career has been attained by his own genius and capacity."

CURIOUS MENTAL FEAR.

Wheelman Afraid His Steed Would Shy at Steam Roller.

"A man who has ridden horseback for many years," said a physician, "doesn't quickly lose his feeling of uncertainty as to what his steed is going to do in an emergency after he has taken to riding a bicycle. I had a curious illustration of this. I was riding my wheel up the boulevard when I met a big steam roller at Ninety-second street. Horses that will rub noses against a moving train will shy at a steam roller for some unknown reason. Horsemen recognize steam rollers as things to be avoided at any cost. Now I have been riding a wheel for a year, but as soon as I saw that roller coming down the boulevard I instinctively turned my wheel into a side street to avoid it. For the moment I felt that I was in danger of being thrown. Then I realized the advantage that a wheelman has over a horseback rider when it comes to steam rollers, and I turned around and rode past this particular roller with great satisfaction."

She Disliked Steamboats.

The wife of a physician who lives in Washington tells a story of a distant kinswoman who was her guest during the Christian Endeavor convention. The kinswoman lives in an inland New England town, and when she came to Washington she spent one night of the journey on board a steamboat. It was the first time she had ever traveled by water. She reached Washington extremely fatigued. The doctor's wife remarked it. "Yes, I'm tired to death," said the kinswoman. "I don't know as I care to travel by water again. I read the card in my state room about how to put the life preserver on and I thought I understood it, but I guess I didn't, though. Some way, I couldn't seem to go to sleep with the thing on."

Li Hung Chang's Pipe.

The Brussels correspondent of the London Daily Chronicle says that an amusing incident occurred at the royal dinner given to Li Hung Chang the other evening. After passing into the state drawing-room at the conclusion of dinner, the Chinese envoy, apparently in ignorance of the rule of court etiquette which strictly forbids smoking in the state apartments, pulled out a long pipe, which, duly filled and lighted by his secretary, was returned to the owner, who began drawing it with evident satisfaction to himself. King Leopold, with kindly tact, had cigarettes thereupon passed round, and in a few minutes the whole company were puffing vigorously.

HOT AFTER THE TURK

Agitation in England at Last Assuming Formidable Shape.

THE GREAT ASSASSIN MUST BE STAYED

A Petition to the Lord Mayor of London Asking Him To Call a Meeting of Citizens To Take Action in the Matter—Asquith's Opinion.

London, Sept. 12.—A petition addressed to the lord mayor is being signed asking him to summon a meeting of citizens to assure the government in taking effective measures to stop the reign of terror in Turkey of the unanimous support of the citizens. Miss Frances Willard has written a letter to 10,000 local Women's Christian Temperance unions in the United States and Canada appealing to them to organize meetings to co-operate with England in stopping the massacres of Christians by Turks.

Asquith Criticizes the Government.

The Right Hon. Herbert Asquith, formerly home secretary, has sent a message to the Chronicle on the Turkish question, saying that Great Britain should have refused to hold further terms with a goverment which has become a mere instrument for executing the purposes of a will that is either criminal or insane. The European powers, he adds, cannot condone the past crimes of the porte or ignore future dangers. Mr. Asquith concludes his message with an expression of the hope that there will be shortly witnessed such a manifestation of public opinion as will give strength and authority to decided action on the part of Great Britain. The Chronicle to-day publishes nine columns of letters against the sultan and reports of meetings held to express indignation against the massacres of Christians. In a leader the paper censures ex-Prime Minister Rosebery for his silence on the subject of Turkish atrocities.

Sir Philip Currie Interviews the Sultan.

Constantinople, Sept. 12.—After the selamlik yesterday afternoon the sultan gave a private audience to Sir Philip Currie, the British ambassador.

Bancroft Delayed.

New York, Sept. 12.—It will be impossible for the cruiser Bancroft, now fitting out at the navy yard for the Bosphorous, to get away before next Tuesday on account of the amount of work yet remaining to be done. A dispatch to that effect was sent to the naval officials at Washington last night. The officers of the Bancroft had experienced, it is said, some difficulty in obtaining her full complement of men owing to the fact that sailors do not seem anxious to sign for a three years' cruise in European waters, but she has now her full quota.

German Army Manoeuvres.

Berlin, Sept. 12.—The night operations of troops taking part in the military manoeuvres at Goerlitz have been abandoned owing to a cloudburst, which has rendered the country roads and fields impassable. The troops have already bivouacked for three nights and the heavy rains and their consequent discomfort have had a bad effect upon them.

California Fruit in London Market.

London, Sept. 12.—Four thousand half cases of California fruit were offered for sale at the Covent Garden market yesterday 2,000 of which were disposed of, the remainder, all pears, being held over until next week. Of the fruit sold, Bartlett pears brought from 4s 6d. to 6s. 3d. Lots of peaches, aggregating 400 half cases, were sold at 4s. to 6s. 6d.

Did Not Die of Fright.

Cherryfield, Me., Sept. 12.—The report that Capt. John Leighton of Millbridge died of fright during the excitement over the grand stand accident on the Fair grounds here Wednesday was a mistake. He had an attack of heart disease, to which he is subject, and was carried home unconscious, but has now recovered his usual health.

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 12.—The mills of the J. & P. Coats Thread Co. are now running on a new time schedule. The finishing department, employing 700 help, is reduced from sixty hours per week to forty-eight and one-half hours. The carding, mule-spinning and twisting departments are not affected.

Falls Again To Lower His Record.

Watertown, N. Y., Sept. 12.—The pacing stallion Joe Patchen, at an adjourned meeting yesterday at the Jefferson county fair grounds, paced an exhibition mile in an attempt to lower his record of 2:03. He made precisely the same time made by him in each of his two trials Thursday—namely, 2:06¼.

Destructive Free Turnpike Agitators.

Springfield, Ky., Sept. 12.—The free turnpike agitators are on another raid. Between midnight and 1 o'clock a mob numbering from seventy-five to 125 destroyed the toll gates on the three turnpikes leading into Versailles, a little village twelve miles from here.

Providence Paper Sued for Libel.

Providence, R. I., Sept. 12.—Henry Thaxter has begun suit for $5,000 against the Telegram Publishing company of this city for libel. The paper published an article a couple of weeks ago accusing him of horse-thieving.

Killed by a Fall from a Glacier.

VOLUNTEER CAPTAINS TO WED.

Romantic Ending of a Reporter's Hunt For News.

Invitations were issued yesterday for the wedding of Sarah Isabelle Mimms to Edgar Apgar Ransom, Jr., at No. 234 Washington street, Newark, next Wednesday night. Ransom, whose home is in Jersey City, was a reporter for "The Jersey City Journal" and was assigned to report a meeting of the Salvation Army which was conducted by the bride-elect, who was a captain in the Army. He was captivated by the comely Captain and became interested in the Salvation Army work. Captain Mimms was one of the first to secede from the Salvation Army, and she became a captain in Ballington Booth's Volunteers. She had not discouraged her young admirer's attentions, but declared that she would remain in the Volunteers. Ransom determined to make her his wife. He abandoned newspaper work, joined the Volunteers and recently received his commission as captain.

Water by the Million Gallons.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company sent 23,000,000 gallons of water to Elizabeth in August which is only "a drop in the bucket" compared to the draft made on the wells in other months. In two weeks' time the Elizabethtown Water Company will tap their new wells near the Hummock, and then the city of Elizabeth will excel any city in the county in the purity and volume of its water.—Contractor.

Large Attendance.

The attendance at the North Plainfield public school is still increasing. There are now over sixty scholars in the High School, and at present the room is not sufficient. The scholars have now adopted themselves to the rules and studies of the school and everything is running in a satisfactory manner.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation, can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

The police have promised to make things lively for those who invade the orchard and garden of Halstead Compton, of West Front street, in the future. It has been the custom, so they state, of some of the employes of the Pond Tool Works to visit the above-named orchard at the noon hour. The police have determined to break up this practice, and it will go hard with the offenders if they are caught.

—People have often asked why it is that the 8:01 a. m. train to New York often slows up and stops just west of the Park avenue bridge. It is simply because the 7:58 train has not got beyond the mile post, and in railroad parlance it would be considered a misdemeanor for an engineer to proceed unless he was properly signalled.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

SCOTCH PLAINS.

Miss Evalyn Baker is a sufferer from hay fever.

Grocer James A. Baker is still ill at home, suffering from a complication of diseases.

Fred Clark's grey stallion, which has a trotting record, is sick and has been turned out to pasture.

Miss Avis Berry, of Brooklyn, has returned home after a two weeks visit with her grandfather, Robert Walpole.

Turton & Co.'s grocery horse ran away from the stable yesterday, and turning into the roadway broke the wagon.

Miss E. Dodge, of New York, will arrive at the West Side Hotel tomorrow or Monday to remain for an indefinite period.

Dr. Westcott reports the health of the town up to a fair standard. There are few cases of sickness and these are not of a serious nature.

One resident made a careful canvas of the population here yesterday and his return sheet showed that out of a total of 246, 213 had gone to the State fair.

W. S. Emery's handsome grey team of family mares captured second prize at the State fair, on account of their evenness in height, color and general appearance.

Anthony Dobbins, aged sixty-five years, died in Newark on Wednesday. The funeral took place from his late home yesterday, and his body was interred in the Baptist cemetery here at 2:30 o'clock.

The only, the inevitable and incomparable "Bob" Walpole is again astonishing the natives. Today he has gone to Greenwood Lake fishing, and if "Bob" don't get 'em they'll want to burn some more candles on the mount.

There will be a big time at Billy Lee's Hotel on Monday evening next. Prof. O'Reilly will furnish the music for the sixty or more couples which have already signified their intention of attending from this city, South Plainfield, Newark, Elizabeth, and other adjacent places.

Billy Lee is deserving of credit for his untiring efforts to get up a ball game. The Cranford people evidently do not care to be "downed," or else they would at least answer the challange sent them. Why not let the two teams come togather and once for all settle the much talked about controversy.

"Gen. George Washington" Jackson, the colored hostler, went to the Waverley fair on Thursday, and the extreme heat and colored lemonade combined unfitted him for work yesterday, so he went about town admonishing people to "Just Tell Them That You Saw Me, and They Will Know the Rest."

Alexander Shotwell, of apothecary fame, and George Feller, both of Plainfield, were up in the mountains back of this place yesterday looking for fish. They looked in the wrong place, however, and both started for home with a peck or less of cuckles on their garments. "Alex" said, as the barouche drew up at Emery's watering trough, that he had had a real nice time.

Sent it to His Mother in Germany

Mr. Jacob Esbensen, who is in the employ of the Chicago Lumber Co., at DesMoines, Iowa, says: "I have just sent some medicine back to my mother in the old country, that I know from personal use to be the best medicine in the world for rheumatism, having used it in my family for several years. It is called Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It always does the work." 50 cent, bottles for sale by T. S. Armstrong druggist.

In a recent letter to the manufacturers Mr. W. F. Benjamin, editor of the Spectator, Rushford, N. Y., says: "It may be a pleasure to you to know the high esteem in which Chamberlain's medicines are held by the people of your own state, where they must be best known. An aunt of mine, who resides at Dexter, Iowa, was about to visit me a few years since, and before leaving home wrote me, asking if they were sold here, stating if they were not she would bring a quantity with her, as she did not like to be without them." The medicines referred to are Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds and croup; Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, pains in the side and chest, and Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for bowel complaints. These medicines have been in constant use in Iowa for almost a quarter of a century. The people have learned that they are articles of great worth and merit, and unequaled by any other. They are for sale here by T. S. Armstrong druggist.

Poison Ivy; insect bites, bruises, scalds, burns, are quickly cured by DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, the great pile cure. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

The public schools will open the fall term next Monday with a full complement of teachers and scholars. During vacation days some necessary repairs have been made about the buildings and grounds, all of which are now in good sanitary conditon.

NEW MARKET.

The hoodlums here have been on the warpath for a night or two past be cause a troupe of Kickapoo Indians from the Bowery have been painting the town crimson with war whoops and tales of Indian medicine cures. The troupe gathered in several dollars each night from the sale of medicines, and it was nearly all profit.

PEST BREEDING SPOT

Threat To Close the League Island Navy Yard.

SANITARY CONDITION VERY BAD

Several Cases of Typhoid Fever Developed on Uncle Sam's Warships—The City of Philadelphia Said To Be Responsible for the Nuisance.

Washington, Sept. 12.—Unless the city of Philadelphia abates the unsanitary nuisances that affect the League Island navy yard it is probable that the naval authorities will be compelled to abandon the fitting out of New ships at that point. The matter has reappeared through a report received from Surgeon Siegfried of the battleship Massachusetts, reporting that on August 31 he had been compelled to transfer from the ship to the Brooklyn hospital the fifth case of typhoid fever since the vessel was commissioned at League Island, June 10. It appears that the battleship Indiana, also fitted out at League Island, has also had sixteen cases of typhoid develop aboard in her very brief career. One of the Massachusetts' men died shortly after the vessel left the yard. The surgeon attributes the disease to the bad drainage of Philadelphia and the condition of that part of the city nearest League Island, and recommends that no ships be commissioned or fitted there until the conditions are changed. Surgeon-General Tryon, in his endorsement of the report, corroborates the statement and adds that the four cases of typhoid which developed this summer on the Bancroft were directly traceable to the Schuylkill water supply. It is stated at the navy department that the Dolphin invariably developes cases of malaria after leaving Washington yard, which is at a focus of sewers.

SCUDDER GETS THE DECISION.

Verdict of Patent Examiners in the Line-Casting Machine Case Reversed.

Washington, Sept. 12.—The commissioner of patents has reversed the decision of the examiners-in-chief in the case of W. S. Scudder vs. Ottmar Mergenthaler as to the priority of invention in line-casting machines and has awarded the case to Scudder. He finds "that Scudder conceived the invention as an organized product of the intellect as early as May, 1890; that he proceeded thence, under all the circumstances of the case, with reasonable diligence to the construction of his complicated, costly, but entirely successful, second machine in October, 1892, and therefore priority of invention is awarded to Scudder and the decision of the examiners-in-chief is reversed." The patent controverted by the interference decided by the commissioner, it is said by one of the parties interested in the case, is for a minor part of the typesetting machine, and the decision will have no practical bearing upon the situation until after the expiration of the basic patent of the Morganthaler machine.

Home from Her Labors in Japan.

Rockville, Conn., Sept. 12.—Miss Eliza Talcott, a prominent missionary in Japan the past twenty-five years, who won much honor by successful work as a nurse in Japanese hospitals during the Chinese war, has reached her home in this city. Miss Talcott's work is highly commended by Dr. Taylor, the medical expert sent by the English government, and leading Japanese surgeons. Miss Talcott returns to Japan as soon as her health will permit, under the direction of the American board.

ADIRONDACK LANDS.

An Important Order Affecting Thousands of Acres of Valuable Forests.

Albany, Sept. 12.—An important order affecting title to thousands of acres of Adirondack lands has been made by state comptroller James A. Roberts. He holds that cancellations made in 1892 by former state comptroller Edward Wemple of state tax sales in township 36, Hamilton county, of Adirondack lands were void and that therefore the sales are still in full force. It is stated that about 40,000 acres of valuable timber land are involved in this order. This decision of the present state comptroller may be far reaching, involving the question as to whether most of the cancellations made where the state was the purchaser at the sale, are not also void. If an appeal is made to the courts and the comptroller's ruling upheld, probably title to 200,000 acres of valuable lands within the Adirondack preserve would be restored to the state. The decision given by Comptroller Roberts will be a factor in the litigation between A. C. Hall of this city and others, who obtained possession of the lands in this case under cancellation, and the Hamilton Park company, owners of the title, to the latter of whom the lands now revert. Comptroller Roberts' action is in accordance with the decision of the court of appeals which held that the cancellation was authorized, but did not, it was claimed, decide the ownership.

THE MATABELE REVOLT.

Natives Tired of the War and Willing To Surrender.

Cape Town, Sept. 12.—Advices received here from the Matoppo Hills say that on Wednesday last seven chiefs and forty headmen were present at conference with the British officials. The natives were offered peace on the surrender of their arms and on giving up those who had been guilty of murdering settlers and others in cold blood. The chiefs agreed to this, and said they were beaten and sick of the war. Some of the impis, however, are unwilling to surrender and are making towards the Zambesi, but a number of these men are deserting.

Mr. Barrett had been a character actor, but of late years had been stage manager, having been employed by Margaret Mather, Charles Frohman, A. M. Palmer and Nat Goodwin. His wife, Belle Barrett, and daughter, Effie, who was known as "the child actress," survive him.

FRECKLES—SUNBURN.

Women at the Seaside and Mountain Should Wear Veils and Gloves.

"What is sunburn, doctor?" was a question which a Mercury representative asked an eminent specialist recently.

"Sunburn," said the polite doctor, "is only a universal freckle, and if you know what freckles are you know what sunburn is as well as I do myself. Lentigo (our name for freckles) is an excessive deposit of pigment in the skin, appearing as small, round, or irregularly-shaped pin's-head or pea sized, yellowish, brownish, or blackish spots. They are seldom seen before the third year, and with advancing years they may disappear permanently.

"Persons with fair skins, and particularly those with red hair, are especially liable to their development; nevertheless they appear in brunettes and mulattos. A freckle is shown by microscopical examination to consist essentially of a circumscribed collection of normal pigment cells in the rete mucosum. Chloasma (liver spot) differs from it simply in the size and shape of the patches.

"But I cannot describe sunburn as a universal freckle without calling attention to one important distinction. Freckles are sometimes due to a morbid condition of the system. I have had patients not ordinarily subject to freckles who developed them when their digestive organs were seriously out of order.

"On the other hand, those who are in perfect health bronze much more readily than those whose constitutions are unsound or who are sickly. I may add that one bronzes more quickly from exposure to the sun during the morning hours than in the afternoon, while exercising than when at rest, and when the atmosphere is surcharged with moisture than when it is dry.

"But sunburn is much more than this," continued the pleasant physician. "To say that it is only skin-deep would be altogether superficial. You must not forget its deep social significance. A coat of tan marks and distinguishes a man who has had his holidays. Are you a man of means? Are you a man of good taste? To prove that you are both you must show a brown face in the autumn."

"And how about the ladies, doctor?"

"My dear sir, veils and gloves at the seaside for ladies who have plump and round necks. It is simply a question of full dress next winter. And yet I may say that I knew a very original young lady who scored a positive triumph at a fancy-dress ball by appearing with her bare arms delicately bronzed on the upper side. It seemed to make her skin look all the fairer; and doubtless a suggestion of healthy outdoor life is the crowning charm of beauty."—N. Y. Mercury.

HIS LOT AN EASY ONE.

But the Pestered Butler Couldn't See It That Way.

A butler who had been 25 years in the same family went one morning to his master and said that he wanted to leave, says the Weekly Telegram. The master, much astonished, asked what his reason was.

"Do you want your wages raised, John?"

"No, sir."

"Is it the food that you're complaining of?"

"No, sir."

"Well, what is it, then?"

"I'd rather not say, sir."

"Now, John," said his master, losing his patience, "you've been a long time in my employ, and I insist upon your telling me."

"Well, sir," said the butler, finally, "if you must know, it's all along of the missus. It's nag, nag, nag from morning to night, and I can't stand it any longer."

His master sighed and then said, solemnly: "John, go upstairs to your bedroom, lock the door and then go down upon your bended knees and thank Heaven that you're not married to her!"

Floor Had Been Polished.

"Jane."

It was the voice of Mr. Billtonger, and in its accents were both pain and anger.

"Jane, it is three weeks since we moved. Haven't you swept the floors yet? I've stepped on another tack."

From her post of vantage at the head of the stairs Mrs. Billtonger looked down in undisturbed calm.

"The hall floor has just been polished," she said. "Don't step on it with that tack in your foot or you will scratch it."

Two days later it cost Mr. Billtonger $27 for repairing the damage he did to his hall floor on that awful night.—Chicago Tribune

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable. NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

THE CURFEW IDEA.

How the Movement Is Received Throughout the West.

Regarded as a Good Instrument for the Regulation of the Morals of the Rising Generation—Interesting Particulars.

The curfew ordinance, designed to keep children off the streets at night, with which the children of this state are now threatened, and against which they are organizing a protest, has come to be accepted as a matter of course in the smaller cities and towns of almost every state west of the Mississippi river. Perhaps no movement in recent years has spread so widely in the west and met with such general approbation as this curfew law. It was first introduced in a Minnesota town a year and a half or so ago. In the past six months curfew ordinances have been adopted in various towns in Oregon, Washington, Idaho, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Minnesota, Michigan, Missouri, Indiana and Georgia. The idea does not appear to have been generally taken up in any eastern or southern state, although isolated cases have been noted of the passage of the curfew ordinance in the south. But in the west the curfew idea is spreading at such a rate that it is likely to be adopted universally soon in the states west of the Mississippi. Heretofore the large cities have not thought it best to adopt such a law, although in many cities it has been brought up for consideration and in some cities a curfew ordinance has passed the city council by a small majority and been vetoed by the mayor. The other day, however, Omaha, Neb., adopted the ordinance by a unanimous vote of the city council. Lincoln and South Omaha already have such an ordinance, and so generally is approval of the idea spreading that, with Omaha's example, it seems probable that even the big cities of the west will before long revive the curfew for the purpose of regulating the habits and morals of the rising generation.

An effort was made recently to bring the subject to the attention of the legislature of this state and to get it to take some action in the way either of the enactment of a state law or of an expression of approval of the curfew principle. Nothing definite resulted at the time, but the news that a curfew ordinance was proposed spread among the children of the state, and various protests from societies of young people have reached the legislature and the executive.

The general principle of the curfew ordinances is the same wherever they have been adopted, but the ordinances differ in details. The idea is to provide that children under a certain age, varying in different towns from 13 down to 15 years, shall not be on the streets of the town after a stated time, ranging from 7:30 p. m. to nine p. m., unless accompanied by a lawful guardian. The penalty for violation of the ordinance also varies in different towns, but as a rule it is provided that the offender shall be taken home by the police for the first offense and be punished by fine or imprisonment or both for the second and subsequent offenses.

When the curfew idea first began to spread the suggestion of passing such an ordinance was in many cases received with ridicule. It was denounced as paternalism in its worst form, because it delegated to the municipality duties which belonged solely to parents. This argument was met by the statement that the ordinance was directed against the young hoodlums that exist in every town, who congregate on street corners and in public places after nightfall to the discomfort and annoyance of many people and to their own detriment, to say the least, and often to the danger of the community. This argument usually was convincing to the opposition. It was also urged that the hoodlums exercised considerable influence in causing ordinarily well-behaved children to become unruly, and that good children were very apt to be influenced to remain on the streets after the time they should be at home. Another advantage set forth was that the law would be of great assistance to parents who, under ordinary circumstances, failed to exercise proper supervision over their children. The curfew ordinance and its penalties could be used as a mild threat to enforce obedience in the matter of being at home nights.

All these arguments have been reiterated in the various towns where the curfew ordinance has been introduced, and very much information as to the working of the ordinance has been adduced. Usually, when it has been proposed to institute the curfew, the town officials have written to the authorities in places where the idea has already been in force some time for information as to its results, and the information obtained has been made public for the benefit of those interested. All the testimony gathered from every town where the curfew has been instituted appears to be in favor of the law, and it seems everywhere to have proved successful and gained general public favor. Even the children are said to be pleased with the law. It is not enforced in an oppressive manner, and a good deal of latitude is allowed in its enforcement.—N. Y. Sun.

Egg Puffs.

Soften a tablespoonful of butter to a creamy consistency by working it with a fork; beat three eggs to a froth and add them to the butter; add also a level teaspoonful of salt and six tablespoonfuls of flour. Beat all these together until they foam, then put them into buttered earthen cups or small tin pans, and bake in a hot oven for about half an hour, or until they are cooked through and nicely browned. Serve hot for breakfast or luncheon.—N. Y. Ledger.

PROVIDENCE AND A PISTOL.

Rather Remarkable Story Which Carries a Moral Teaching.

A half dozen or so men were sitting out in front of an uptown hotel the other evening telling stories, and a Star reporter was taking them all in with an avidity peculiar to his class.

"When I was 21," said a tall man, evidently from a southern state, "I had an ungovernable temper and a half-brother three years older than myself. We were both church members, but that didn't seem to bring us any closer together, for he was a Methodist and I was a Baptist. You may have observed," he threw in as a decoration to the story, "that Christian charity and brotherly love don't always thrive on denominational feed. However, as I was saying, we were of different denominations, and we got along fairly well together until we began arguing on our respective faiths. Then we got hot, and I always lost my temper. I may say that he did very nearly the same, but he wasn't quite as bad as I was in that regard.

"One day we were out hunting with only one gun, a squirrel gun, between us, and I had the gun. I may add here that we lived on a farm, and a one-gun hunting party was not at all unusual. We had sat down on a rock near the edge of a stream to rest, and in some way I slipped and went into the water. It made me mad to begin with, and when he began chaffing me and telling me that a Baptist ought to be used to a little thing like that, I got ten times worse and hit him a lick in the face. He ran off a few yards and picked up a bowlder about as large as your double fist, while I made a grab for the gun, which I had set up against a willow tree under the bank.

"Of course, we did not know what we were doing by this time; only I remember of telling him if he raised his hand to throw the stone I'd shoot him. He was nervy, though, and I hadn't more than got the words out of my mouth than he let the bowlder come at me, and, true to my word, I banged away at him. We weren't 40 feet apart, and it was a stand-off between the bowlder and the bullet as to which was the more dangerous, but Providence, I reckon, was watching over us, for, as I fired, the bowlder flew into a dozen pieces, and both of us were left standing looking at each other in a dazed, helpless way. Then, still not understanding what had happened, but realizing how nearly our tempers had brought us to bloodshed, we rushed into each other's arms and began crying over each other.

"When we had got over the excitement and collected our wits sufficiently to make an investigation, we discovered that by the merest chance—by Providential interference, I mean—my bullet and his bowlder had met in their flight and nullified each other. On one piece of the broken stone we found the blue mark of the bullet, and in another place we found the battered bullet. He took the bullet and I took the piece of marked stone, and we have kept them to this day, as sacred souvenirs, and as very potent reminders never to discuss our respective beliefs. I'm just as strong a Baptist as ever, and he is equally a Methodist, but we both believe that greater than either Baptist or Methodist is the Providence that watches over us all."—Washington Star.

DANGER IN EXCESS OF EXERCISE

People May Overexert Themselves and Defeat Their Purpose.

Housework, chores, gardening, walking, climbing, cycling, running, swimming and many other sports give just the kind of exercise that is indicated in certain conditions, due regard being had to the physiologic effects of varying dosage. Oertel has shown how the simple exercise of walking may be adapted to sufferers from cardiac debility by prescribing the distance and speed and the number and length of the rests on definite paths graduated according to their slope. His interesting and original work has not only given a new direction to the treatment of certain cardiac affections, but is destined to have an important influence in establishing accuracy in the prescription of exercise. Whoever has studied the map of the environs of Reichenhall, Bavaria, prepared by Oertel for the application of his method, will acquire a vivid idea of what precision of dosing in exercise means. In this map the different paths suitable for the work are marked in four different colors, to indicate those that are nearly level, those slightly sloping, moderately sloping, and steep, and figures are placed along each route to show the space that should be traversed in each quarter hour.

The locality itself is prepared for its remedial use by placing benches for resting at suitable distances, and by marking on certain trees near the path circles, colored to correspond with the map, to indicate the difficulty of that certain section. By systematic practice on the easier paths, the heart and system are progressively trained and strengthened. Intelligent analysis may do the same work for cycling, horseback riding and many other familiar exercises. In this way the dosage is practically reduced to a definite number of kilogrammeters in a given time, and a step has been taken in placing the prescription of exercise upon a scientific basis.—Appleton's Science Monthly.

A Singular Coincidence.

A gentleman from the north was spending a few days in Houston. He was stopping with a leading citizen whose acquaintance he had made. As they entered the house, the stranger asked:

"Haven't you got any old relics of the Texas revolution?"

"Allow me to introduce you to my mother-in-law," responded the Houston man, as the old lady, the widow of a Texas veteran, entered the room.—Dallas (Tex.) Sifter.

TRADE MORE ACTIVE

Encouraging Increase This Week in Mercantile Lines.

PRICES ALSO REFLECT BETTER TIMES

Active Demand for Seasonable Staples Reported at a Number of Points—Supply of Money Larger, But Rate of Premium Remains Unchanged.

New York, Sept. 12.—Bradstreet's weekly review of the condition of trade will, to-day, say: The feeling among jobbers and manufacturers last week that an improvement in demand for seasonable staples was in sight was evidently well founded, for at more than a dozen centers south and west demand is now more active, the volume of sales has increased and the general outlook is much more favorable for business later in the autumn. Notwithstanding the Labor Day interruption, the week's volume of business is slightly heavier, several cities reporting a larger demand this week to replenish depleted stocks than during two preceding months, notably among jobbers in groceries, hardware, dry goods, millinery, hats and shoes. The most marked improvement is at Chicago, St. Louis, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Pittsburg, Charleston and Augusta, although other cities have reported a better feeling and prospects for more active demand. No such gain has taken place in financial as in commercial circles. While there is an increased demand for mercantile discounts the supply of money is larger, though rates for money remain unchanged west and south, with no change or higher quotations at eastern cities.

Prices Show Encouraging Features.

There is a more encouraging look to the prices movement also. Wheat is up again on continued active export movement and very general tendency on the part of crop reporters to make out a nominal shortage in the world's production this year. Short crop views as to oats and cotton have like effects, the latter finally having some in raising print cloth quotations, since surplus stocks of cotton goods have begun to have less weight. In addition, there are higher prices for anthracite coal and for petroleum. Enormous prospective supplies of Indian corn and hogs depress prices for them and for pork and lard. Quotations for coffee are also off on the week, and several sales of larger lots of wool have been made at cut prices, some for export. Oregon producers are said to be carrying 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 pounds of wool in warehouses, awaiting higher prices. Flour and sugar prices are unchanged.

Speculative Market.

Large arrivals of gold from Europe, making the total receipts of specie over $22,000,000, with the increase of the treasury gold reserve to $108,000,000, have maintained the bullish sentiment of the New York speculative stock market. The market has been a professional one, but the symptoms of approaching ease in the local money market, with the declaration of the regular Manhattan and Western Union dividends and the favorable annual report of the St. Paul railroad have tended to support prices. Bank clearings for the current week reflect, in part, business conditions of several week's ago. The week's total is $739,000,000, which is 8 per cent. less than last week, 24 per cent. less than for the like period one year ago, 11 per cent. than in the week two years ago, 4 per cent. less than in the second week of September, 1893, and 35 per. cent. less than in the like period of four years ago.

Business Failures.

Business failures throughout the United States this week number 308, which, while 28 fewer than last week, is 95 more than in the like week of 1895, 85 more than in the corresponding period of 1894, and 8 more than in the second week of September, 1893, after three months of panic. More than twice as many failures are reported this week as in the corresponding week of 1892.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Harry L. McGee, of Orchard place, Washington Park, rode down to Belmar yesterday on his wheel and will remain there over Sunday.

The programme for the Crescent Wheelmen's meet on September 26, is being prepared and N. R. Titsworth is at work securing the advertisements.

Another wheel is added to the list of those stolen, Thursday evening. It was the property of A. F. Randolph, of 212 West Front street, and was stolen on East Fifth street, about six o'clock. It was a Spalding, '95 model, No. 40215.

The Morris County Wheelmen, of Boonton, N. J., have decided to hold their first annual race meet on October 10. It promises to be one of the best meets ever held on the Boonton athlectic grounds. The chairman of the race committee is E. Waddock, P. O. box 681, N. Y. city.

Henry Vosseller and Clarence Thorn, both of East Second street, leave tomorrow on a ten days tour on their wheels. They start in the morning for Delaware Water Gap, then to Scranton and Wilkesbarrie, to Port Jervis, down to the Water Gap again, along the Delaware river to Philadelphia and then home.

One of the latest novelties of the times is the bicycle package express recently introduced by the U. S. Express Company. One has been received in this city for the local company and will be in the parade this afternoon. It has three wheels and the steering is done by the two front wheels, on which the box is stationed.

Willard Martin and George Eckhardt, of the borough, had an unpleasant experience on Thursday while riding a tandem to Bound Brook. They reached the latter place all right, but on the return the front wheel of the machine collapsed and the two young men were obliged to walk home. Personally, they were not injured.

The opening date for the proposed cycle show in Madison Square Garden, which will be run without the saunction of the Cycle Board of Trade, is set for Monday, Jan. 11 next. Regarding a rumor to the effect that it had been decided by the Garden Directors to hold an annual show of their own for the next ten years, regardless of the Cycle Board of Trade, Manager Frank Sanger said yesterday there was no foundation for it. Only the 1897 show has been determined upon. The National exhibition, under the auspices of the Cycle Board of Trade, will take place in the Grand Central Palace Feb. 6 to 13, inclusive. Plans and details for this show are already in the hands of manufaturers and dealers.

The old saying that "It's a poor rule that won't work both ways," has apparently no place in Chairman Gideon's scrap-book. There were several parties in Philadelphia anxious to get a sanction for a race meet in the latter part of September, but Chairman Gideon refused to accede to their requests, owing to the fact that a National circuit meet was to be held at Plainfield on the date for which sanction was desired there, and the chairman asserted positively that no sanction could be granted for the same date for which a National circuit meeting sanction had been granted within one hundred miles of the latter. Those who desired a sanction took the chairman's decision respectfully but sorrowfully, and the date had to go over. Among those who had applied for a sanction were Thomas Benner, father of the little Benner brothers. Mr. Benner could not see just how a meet at Plainfield could be interfered with by a meet at Philadelphia, but the chairman would not vary the slightest from his decision, so Mr. Benner had to be content with October 3d for the date of his race meet.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Henry Brown, of Rockview avenue, wishes to challenge through the Press any or all of Plainfield and North Plainfield's amateur sprinters to run 100 yards for the amateur championship of Greater Plainfield. The details are to be arranged later. Replies to the challenge may be sent to the Press office, care of the Sports Department.

Among the successful exhibitors of pit game birds at the State Fair, Waverly, was John F. Angleman, of this city. Mr. Angleman's birds were very much admired and were awarded three premiums in competion with birds from all parts of the United States and Canada. This was Mr. Angleman's first exhibit and he has reason to be proud of his success.

GOLF.

The Hillside tennis and Golf team in charge of Captain Waltz will go to Morristown today and play the team at the latter place.

The formal opening of the new clubhouse of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club will be held on the afternoon of Saturday, September 26th.

The golfers of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club will meet a new adversary this afternoon in the six-men team from the Morristown Field Club. The team that went from here consisted of Henry B. West, Fred W. Walz, J. H. P. Wharton, Evarts Tracy, Howard W. Beebe, and Laurens H. VanBuren.

PUNTS AND KICKS.

The Y. M. C. A. football team will meet for practice on Monday evening at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium.

The Westfield Football Association is receiving applications every day for positions on the team. The association has been reorganized and expects to put a very strong team in the field this season. Considerable interest is being taken this season in the game and Manager Mangam is looking forward to pick out a strong team and bringing many victories home to Westfield.

LAWN TENNIS.

Raymond Carpenter and Raymond Carroll bid fair to retain their title of champions of Watchung Park at tennis playing. Will and Ed. Loizeaux put up an excellent game but the two Rays were too much for them in a very exciting match played on the Loizeaux courts yesterday. The victors won by the score of 6-8, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 8-6.

AROUND THE BASES.

Remember that the Y. M. C. A. and P. A. C. ball teams will play this afternoon at 4 o'clock on the Washington avenue grounds. You can see the cycle parade and ball game, too.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

Another one of those much admired carps was yanked bodily out of Tier's lake yesterday by a local fisherman. The fish tipped the scales at two and three quarter pounds.

William M. McCutchen, of Rockview terrace, returned yesterday after summering at Belmar.

Herbert Schutt, of Duer street, has recovered from his recent illness and is able to resume work.

David Gendell and Donald Ashbrook, of Philadelphia, are guests of George A. Horne, of Willow avenue. They rode here on their wheels.

Fred Slater, Jr., of the Borough Public School, is the author of a very creditable drawing of the school building. The work in detail is exceedingly clever.

Mrs. E. E. Brown, of Evona, lost her pocketbook while attending the Ladies' Aid Society at Liberty Street Mission was found by Luther Morris' boy and was returned to her.

Miss Alice Callahan, of 157 Woodland avenue, and Miss Lizzie K-pler, of South avenue, have passed their examinations at Trenton successfully and have entered the Normal School for a course from two to three years.

—Rev. B. W. Hand will speak at both services in the Liberty Street mission tomorrow evening. Theme, "Faith."

—The Jersey Central is flagging and curbing the grounds around the Grant Avenue station. The curbing on the West Front street side is about completed.

From all accounts Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a Godsend to the afflicted. There is no advertisement about this; we feel just like saying it. The DEMOCRAT, Carrollton, Ky. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

THE DERVISHES.

They Fight to the Death in the Face of Great Odds.

The dervishes have lost nothing of their old valor. They heed death as little as ever. I saw them, says a writer in the London Times, stand undismayed in the open and fight with dogged determination in the face of our deadly volley fire; they fought on with rifle and spear and knife when charged by the cavalry; each wounded dervish, as he lay bleeding to death on the ground, was a dangerous and treacherous foe until he had breathed his last. They even did what some authorities have denied that any troops, however brave, would ever do—they stood in groups firing steadily into our ranks while our Maxim guns poured their streams of bullets on them, mowing them down like grass.

I doubt whether any other men in the world would have stood, as these men stood, for nearly two hours, against such fearful odds as were opposed to them. But if one may judge from this fight, the dervishes have changed their old tactics; they have, to great extent, abandoned the reckless rush of spearmen which used to distinguish Soudanese warfare, and rely more on rifle fire, in which their practice has considerably improved. If trained and disciplined (but it is very doubtful whether that savage beast of prey, the Baggara, ever could be trained) these men would make magnificent infantry. They display now as much amazing coolness when acting on the defensive as they did in their furious charges of former campaigns.

DR. IJOHNSTONE'S POSITION.

Is Not an Englishman and Never Made the Assertion Alleged.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Your correspondents, "J. E. M." and "J.H.F.," who feel so keenly the force of the eloquent and logical address of Dr. Johnstone that they are impelled to attempt lessening its effect by personal abuse of the speaker, should be sure of their facts before they rush into print.

Dr. Johnstone is not an Englishman, but is proud of the fact that he is an Irishman, born on Irish soil and educated in Irish public schools and Dublin University. He formerly declared his intention to become an American citizen, almost immediately on landing upon American soil six years ago, and was naturalized at the earliest possible moment. He was not in New York on Queen Victoria's last birthday, and was not absent from his school on the next day. He never made at the Park Club the remarks attributed to him. Irishmen are not selected to laud the Queen of England, nor prone to decry the Monroe Doctrine.

If your correspondents have no other method of meeting arguments to show the frailty of their cause, they would better remain silent.

Borough Cadets Proposed.

There is considerable talk among the boys of the North Plainfield public school regarding the formation of a cadet company, similar to the one in the High School on this side the brook. It is understood that the plan is meeting with general favor.

To Offer a Reward of 100 Dollars for a case of catarrh that cannot be cured, amounts to nothing except to sell article. Do you know of any such reward being paid? A Question of Importance—the question of prices.
We don't want anybody to think of this as a "cheap place." It is nothing of the kind. There isn't anything as thoroughly cheap as cheap hats. We can't afford to sell them. But there is such a thing as selling reliable hats at moderate prices. You'll find that method in operation here. You'll find that all our hats will stand the wear test. We sell nothing that we are doubtful about. There's good big money's worth in any hats here, from the ordinary sorts at $1.50 up to the genuine Youman at $5.00.

QUALITY, NOT QUANTITY.

WHAT THERE WAS OF THE BICYCLE PARADE WAS GOOD.

But the Threatening Weather Kept Many Away and the Entries Were Almost Exclusively Among Local Riders.

Yes, the Daylight Bicycle Carnival is over and Plainfield will again resume its wonted quietness until something else comes to disturb its serenity. Fate seems to have a grudge against this fair suburban town, for again last Saturday afternoon the clouds gathered and the rain began to fall. The drops were scattering, however, and the main storm held off until evening. It might just as well have poured though, for the leaden skies and the threatening appearance broke up all the well-laid plans for the Carnival.

The Carnival was held, of course. It had to be as long as it didn't rain. But the host of visiting wheelmen, who had promised and were expected to come, failed to appear. Their experience the week before was too well remembered and the heavy clouds were too suggestive, so they stayed away. That left Plainfield to go it alone and she did it very creditably, too, considering the circumstances.

There were lots of strangers in Plainfield, however, despite the unpropitious weather. They came, mostly as spectators and not as participants, while many of them remained as guests of their Plainfield friends.

There were about 300 wheels in line, not including the several hundred cyclists that followed for intervals during the march. The entire line of march was covered rather faster than had been intended, but that was owing to the wish to complete it before the momentarily-expected rain should arrive.

At about 1 o'clock, Saturday afternoon, blue sky appeared and it looked as if Farmer Dunn was telling the truth and the weather would be clear. Then the visitors began to arrive, but it clouded up soon after and those who had prepared to come waited for further developments. At 2 o'clock the streets in the vicinity of the parade headquarters at the Revere House began to assume a lively appearance. The vanguard of the the big army of spectators that was to crowd the place two hours later had arrived, and from that time until the parade started there was a steady stream of humanity pressing steadily forward in that direction. Everybody was in holiday attire except the crowd of cyclists, who threaded their way through the long caravan of wagons and carriages of all sorts and kinds, clad in the conventional wheeling costume.

At 3 o'clock the Plainfield Cornet Band marched up Park avenue and took their position in line. Forty minutes later Sergeant Kiely, looking extremely well in his natty and becoming uniform, mounted his wheel and headed the platoon of mounted police that led the parade.

After the detachment of Plainfield's "Finest," came Grand Marshal F. L. C. Martin, in black coat, white knickerbockers and cap, with his handsome white and gold sash slung over one shoulder. Next came the First division headed by Marshal Louis G. Timpson.

Marshal Timpson and all the other marshals wore dark coats, white knickerbockers and caps. They were also designated by their gorgeous red sashes.

Grand Marshal Martin's special aide was Edgar I. Serrell, who was kept busy speeding along the column delivering messages.

The First division consisted of the ladies and their escorts. Some of the decorations were very pretty. Miss Rita Nash, gowned in pink, rode under a "Liberty Bell" of pink roses supported by two uprights. Her wheel was also decorated with pink streamers. Miss Mamie Jones represented a "Snow Girl." She was dressed in white and her gown and white wheel were decorated with bunches of white cotton. Three young girls were gotten up as sunflowers in yellow and black. Others made little attempt to decorate their wheels, but wore fancy costumes. Miss Clara Peck represented a Japanese maiden. Miss Mildred Terrell made a charming little Quakeress. Miss Mamie Thatcher, daughter of the only George, was a wild-eyes Zulu with blackened face. There was also a pretty gypsy. Miss Lyda Pangborn was dressed to represent an old woman in red.

While the visiting clubs were few, the Crescent wheelmen turned out well and presented a very fine appearance. Their captain, Chas. C. Lister, acted as marshal of that division. The Wheelmen were all dressed in uniform, White caps, the regular blue uniform coat and white duck trousers. Their wheels were also decorated in white. They had two tandems in line, the one manned by Clarence E. Teel and Thomas Hanna looking particularly well with its white decorations and nattily dressed riders. There were about sixty of the Crescent Wheelmen in line.

Owing to the unavoidable absence of Marshal F. R. Stevens, the Fourth and Sixth divisions were united under the command of Marshal Charles B. Morse.

First came W. E. Brock on his tricycle, invented by himself, gaily bedecked in red, white and blue. Clarence Roome and LeRoy Brewster rode a tandem, artistically hung with the tri-colors. Douglass Martin and Linden Stuart, with blackened faces and tattered clothing, were mounted on an old solid-tire tandem and presented a very dilapidated appearance. The Crescent Wheelmen Juniors were in this division with thirty-eight members in line. Captain William Nash commanded the club from the interior of a regular house on wheels and gave his orders to his bugler, Roy Radford, through the windows. William H. Pope had a very prettily arranged red, white and blue canoe with sails formed of the tri-colored tissue-paper rope. Stanley Peck represented a very remarkable young woman named "Maria Susan." Harry Slauson was dressed as a clown. A small, but very good looking, "George Washington" was Seldon Thayer in a costume of the eighteenth century, with its cocked hat and silk coat embroidered with pansies.

William Vanderweg and Albert Utzinger were gotten up as girls, "Gold" and "Silver," and made a great hit. "Uncle Sam" was in line, rather youthful, perhaps, but well gotten up. He was represented by Egbert D. Murphy. A genuine old hayseed of the "Uncle Josh" type, bestrode a high wheel and gazed at the crowd with wide-open mouth. Underneath this disguise were the form and features of Charles Palmer. Abbott Brainard was a brave soldier, while the decorations on Owen Fleming's wheel were rather mixed.

Then came Homer Smith. Only his head was visible and that was equipped with a black wig and face like that of a pickaninny. The rest of his body and wheel was concealed by an immense watermelon, made of paper stretched on a frame. Rowland Rockfellow was grand in a red, white and blue suit, while Harry Montrose was disguised as a clown and followed on a high wheel.

The members of the Alis football team made an excellent showing. They came up in red sweaters, football pants and campaign hats, while their captain, Royal T. Phillips, led them carrying a football. They had eight in line. Orville T. Waring, of the team, led his greyhound by a ribbon.

Marshal Thomas A. Cuming led the Y. M. C. A. Cyclers, of which he is the captain. There were twenty-six of them in line, while the New Brunswick Y. M. C. A. Cyclers sent a delegation of ten and a float, representing a large and ferocious looking dragon. Marshals N. R. Titsworth and M. F. Elderton looked out for unattached wheelmen, and they had their hands full.

The G. O. P. elephant was in line, while his designers rode inside of him on a tandem. He seemed a very quiet animal and paid no attention to the tramp that rode near by with a sign out "I'll take either gold or silver." A. R. Johnson's wheel was handsomely decorated with green moss and red roses while an umbrella of the same was stretched over his head.

John Poole, of the Scott Press Works, had a steam yacht of black and orange built over his wheel, and he careered along the street in a most nautical fashion.

Fred Barker was really humorous. Most of his person was enclosed in a barrel. His head stuck through a hole in the top, his bare arms were thrust through openings in the sides, while his legs, encased in flesh-colored tights, protruded through the bottom. On the side of the barrel was painted "Oh, mamma, I've been in swimming and lost my clothes." His appearance was everywhere hailed with shouts of laughter.

Henry Vosseller was gotten up after the fashion of "Weary Waggles" and was known as "the tramp that slept in the Astor bed." He had all sorts of labels fastened around him.

A real live looking bullfrog rode along quite comfortably and informed those who asked that he came from that wicked town of Somerville. There was a two-wheeled cycle which was apparently once an old velocipede. It was ridden by a remarkable character.

Willie Mortimer looked fine in a suit of yellow and white, while his wheel was decorated with rosettes of the same colors.

TOSSERS IN TEENS WON

THE Y. M. C. A. NINE CHAGRINED BY A DEFEAT BY THE P. A. C.

Their Confidence About Winning Was Rudely Shaken by the Youngsters Who Put up a Lively Game All Around.

Surprises are always in order, and when the Plainfield Athletic Club team defeated the Y. M. C. A., ball team, last Saturday afternoon, one of the greatest surprises of the season was met. The former team is composed of young men in their teens, and when they expressed confidence of winning Saturday's game, people were inclined to laugh. They won, however, and the game was fairly contested. Of course the P. A. C's. played in great luck, but that was circumstance, and not fault. For five innings neither side scored a run. There was no heavy batting and the ball never seemed to get away from the fielders. As each inning was played and no runs were secured, everybody began to wonder whether there would be any runs. The ice was broken in the sixth inning, however, and the Y. M. C. A. team secured four runs. In the next inning their opponents also made four runs. The Y. M. C. A. boys succeeded in making three runs in the eighth and ninth innings, while in the last inning after two men were out, the P. A. C's, batted out five runs, thereby winning the game 9 to 7.

It was a great game and no better has been seen in Plainfield this year. The Y. M. C. A. team felt their defeat so much that they at once arranged another game for next Saturday. Those on the winning team that distinguished themselves were Mumford, Lederer, Bolsterli, Sutphen and the battery, Winn and Erickson. The Y. M. C. A. team played a good game but could not seem to bat safely. In the field they put up their usual game. Their opponents played for all they were worth and were determined to win if possible. In the last inning they hit the ball very hard and every time the ball was out of the reach of the fielders. It is quite likely that next Saturday the Y. M. C. A. team will be strengthened and every effort will be made to defeat the team that captured the honors on Saturday. The attendance was small, but it's safe to say that next Saturday there will be a large crowd present. The score of Saturday's game by innings follow.

MADE A SIGHT OF HIMSELF.

An Intoxicated Man Gets in the Way of Church Goers.

A man intoxicated on Sunday is a comparatively rare sight on Plainfield's streets. Such a person visited the neighborhood of the First Baptist church while the congregation was attending the morning service. The sexton called Patrolman McCue who arrested the inebriated individual and locked him up. It was John McGee, who is employed on the Brower farm up Park avenue. He had a bottle of whiskey in his pocket, the contents of which he was imbibing when arrested.

This morning he was brought before Judge DeMeza who suspended sentence on him when he promised to return to the farm at once and behave himself.

DR. LEWIS FORMALLY CALLED.

Plainfield's Well-Known Divine to Devote His Time to Sabbath Reform.

At the annual meeting of the American Sabbath Tract Society held at Alfred, N. Y., August 23d, the society instructed its executive board to call Dr. A. H. Lewis, of this city, to devote his entire time to Sabbath reform work, and at the meeting of the board yesterday afternoon in the Seventh-day Baptist church, of this city, the call was formally extended to Dr. Lewis, and he will in all probability accept it at the next meeting of the board in October. Although he has two years more to serve the church as its pastor under his engagement with them, the church will no doubt will accept his resignation.

A Still Alarm of Fire.

The chimney to Wm. VanSickle's house on East Third street caught fire this morning and a still alarm was sent in. No. 2 hose wagon responded and the flames were extinguished with the contents of one fire extinguisher. The alarm was sent in at 9:15 o'clock.

ASSAULTED IN AN OFFICE

JOHN F. M'INTYRE BEATEN BY A MAN HE HAD BEFRIENDED.

The Assaulter's Name Was Wm. Burke, and He Accused McIntyre of Saying That He Was Drunk—Burke Missing.

A well-known Plainfield business man was atrociously assaulted in his office Saturday night by a man whom he and his mother had befriended in time of need. Now the man who committed the assault is in hiding, while the Plainfield man is confined to his home with the injuries he received.

The victim in the affair was John F. McIntyre, of North avenue, of the firm of Hand & McIntyre, real estate dealers, and his assaulter was Wm. Burke. Some time ago Burke was sent to the hospital with illness. When he came out Mrs. Alice McIntyre, of 140 North avenue, mother of John F. McIntyre, took him to her home and took care of him, as he was without friends. He arose in the morning when he pleased, his meals were prepared for him, and he enjoyed life at the expense of his benefactor until he fully regained his health. Burke's occupation was that of a gardener and while living with Mrs. McIntyre he graded the lawns of several of her new houses and did other jobs.

After he had left her comfortable home, he sent in a bill for $300 for the work he had done and sued her for it. The case was tried, as was told in The Press at the time, and Burke secured a verdict for $17. Then Mrs. McIntyre sent in a bill for his board. Rather than take the trouble and expense of appealing the case, Mrs. McIntyre was advised to pay the $17, which she agreed to do.

McIntyre was sitting in front of the office of Charles H. Lyman on North avenue Saturday evening when Burke came along.

"You said I was drunk when I worked on your mother's place," growled Burke.

"I didn't say anything of the kind," returned McIntyre. "But were you drunk?"

"No, I wasn't," shouted Burke.

"All right, that settles it," was the answer from the real estate man. "So go on away, I don't want to have anything to do with you," after saying which he picked up his chair and retired into the office. Burke followed.

"This is a private office" said McIntyre and he gave Burke a little push. Then Burke's fist shot out catching his benefactress' son in the eye, and the office was the scene of a lively little scrap. McIntyre was going to return the blow when Burke, who is much taller and larger that his antagonist, seized his wrists and used his head as a battering ram to the detriment of McIntyre's physiognomy. Things were lively for a minute or two and then Burke skipped out leaving his victim half senseless with his face a mass of bruises.

Fred Barker, night operator of the N. Y. and N. J. Telephone Company, heard the racket and saw Burke run away. Then the shrill voice of his police whistle sounded aloud on the night air. Policemen came from every direction, but the man they wanted had gone and is still missing.

Burke appeared before Justice Mosher today and had a warrant issued for the arrest of Mr. McIntyre, charging him with assault and battery. The hearing will be held tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

CUT A BLOOD VEIN.

Vincent Rittenhouse Catches His Hand in a Bicycle Wheel.

While waiting to turn out in Saturday's bicycle parade with the Alis football team, on which he plays halfback, J. Vincent Rittenhouse, of East Sixth street, met with a serious accident which will prevent him from practicing for some time. The team had gathered in the yard of their captain, Royal T. Phillips, on Madison avenue, and Rittenhouse was among them. There was a ladies' wheel standing in the yard and he started to lift it by the rear wheel. The wheel turned suddenly, catching his hand under the mud guard, the sharp end of which cut open the back of his hand. He was escorted to Dr. Davis, on Park avenue, who found a large vein had been cut, causing the wound to bleed profusely. Five stitches were taken and the wound dressed.

A Newspaper Woman.

Mrs. Josephine Woodward, of Cincinnati, is the guest of her old school friend, Mrs. J. H. Howell, of Myrtle avenue. Mrs. Woodward is a very talented woman and is a member of the staff of The Commercial Tribune, of Cincinnati. Friday afternoon she entertained a number of Mrs. Howell's friends by reading a paper describing her trip to Havana last winter in the interests of The Commercial Tribune. The paper was a very interesting one and greatly pleased those who heard it.

OPENING UP A NEW TERRITORY.

New Impetus to the Building Industry in the Fourth Ward—New Streets.

A new impetus to the building movement has branched out in the Fourth ward, and the exact location is adjacent to the beautiful Elysian Lake, where much of the unimproved property has been purchased by Messrs. McClay and Davis, two New York capitalists, who are about to begin extensive operations there. The land has laid in a dormant state for a long time, and now that it has passed into other hands it will be fully developed and it is hoped made a paying investment.

Messrs. McClay and Davis bought a tract of about thirty acres adjoining the lake on the east, and this is to be cut up into building lots and during the fall and winter some nine or ten cottages will be erected so as to be in readiness for spring. West Fifth and West Sixth streets, from Clinton avenue west, are to be opened up through the tract, and a continuation of New Brunswick avenue will also be made from the southeast. Another new street will be cut through the grounds running parallel with West Fourth street. The work of opening up the new streets and extensions was begun today and will be pushed rapidly forward to completion.

IN LINE FOR BARGAINS.

Plainfield Boys Who Are Anxious to Buy a Wheel for a Mere Song.

For the last month strange rumors have been flying about regarding the sale of bicycles by Seigel, Cooper & Company, the big Chicago firm which has opened its mammoth store on Sixth avenue between Eighteenth and Ninteenth streets, New York, today.

The story was that some standard wheel was to be sold for almost nothing during a short period of time. What the price was to be no one knew until Saturday night when the store was opened for inspection only. Then it was learned that from 9 o'clock until 10, the wheels—the make is not known—would sell for $10.

Everybody wanted a wheel at that price and the crowd was of course something terrific. Fred Barker, the night operator of the N. Y. and N. J. Telephone Company, in Plainfield, was lucky enough to get first position in line. Among the other familiar faces noted in the crowd were those of Thad. Doane, Jr., William Townley, Edward Loizeaux, Will Loizeaux, George A. Horne, Walter B. Rittenhouse, James A. Stafford, Alvah Davis, Raymond Carroll, Charles H. Angleman, and a host of others.

These bargain hunters went in to New York on the trains leaving here at 2:11 and 3:27 o'clock this morning and stood in line until the time of opening.

The sale did not take place this morning, but was postponed until Wednesday. A crowd of 30,000 people gathered around the store and fought until the doors were opened. Then they crowded in, breaking down heavy railings, show cases, and scattering the line of policemen. The fifty wheels on exhibition were torn to pieces by the terrible mob in their eagerness and not one left the store.

ESTABLISHED A PRIVATE SCHOOL.

Garwood Promoters Bound to Have Educational Facilities Provided.

A free school was opened at Garwood today. For sometime the Garwood Land Improvement Company has been trying to influence the county authorities to establish a school there but the latter refused and so the committee has opened a kindergarten and primary school for the free use of the children of the company's tenants. Mrs. Carrie G. Anderson, of New York, who has had considerable experience in that kind of work, will have charge. She has taken up her residence at 453 West Sixth street, this city.

This movement of the Garwood Land Improvement Company is something new and shows that the committee has some thought for its tenants and is keeping up with the march of civilation. The school will be a great aid in making the community a quiet and law abiding one.

To Help the Army.

Rev. S. Parker Cadman, pastor of the Metropolitan Temple in New York, will deliver a lecture in the Y. M. C. A. Hall on September 26th for the benefit of the Salvation Army, whose funds for carrying on local work are depleted and their means of raising revenue limited. His subject will be "Life in London." The admission fee will be twenty five cents. Dr. C. R. Barnes will preside at the meeting.

The whole system is drained and undermined by indolent ulcers and open sores. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve speedily heals them. It is the best pile cure known. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

LIVED AN EVENTFUL LIFE

JOSEPH TUCKER DUNHAM PASSES OVER THE GREAT DIVIDE.

Was the First Man to Enlist in the Civil War From Rhode Island and the First Soldier to Return to Plainfield.

The sudden death of Joseph T. Dunham, of 930 Park avenue, which occurred yesterday afternoon at 12:25, was received with feelings of sadness by the entire community. For some time past Mr. Dunham had complained of rheumatism, and he suffered considerably in consequence. However, he felt well otherwise and was able to attend to his business. Last Monday afternoon he, together with his brother, M. M. Dunham, enjoyed a drive about the country. They returned about 7:30 that evening. After that he had his supper, and while eating some corn from the cob he was unable to raise his left arm. Just for the time he paid no special attention to it. A little later he was stricken with apoplexy and was carried to his home. His left side was paralyzed and he was totally blind. Dr. Tomlinson was called at once and prescribed. Tuesday evening a consultation was held and it was then decided that he could not survive the illness, and from that time life gradually left the body.

Joseph Tucker Dunham was the oldest of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus M. Dunham's five children, and was born in April, 1841, on the old Jonathan Dunham farm at New Market, where he remained for a few years. Later the family moved to Plainfield and occupied the house on West Second street next to the one occupied by G. W. Force. It was then that Mr. Dunham attended school under Rev. Mr. Bond and W. J. Davidson. When the public school opened Mr. Dunham was the first scholar on the roll. A few years later, when the family moved into the house which stood where Music Hall is now located, Mr. Dunham went to sea and for three years he followed the life of a jolly tar on a sailing vessel. While making what proved to be his last trip across the ocean he fell from the mast of the ship and sustained severe injuries. When the vessel reached Constantinople he was removed to a hospital where for five months the Sisters of Mercy gave him the best of care. This closed his sea life and he returned to Westerly, R. I., where he entered the machine shops of Cottrell & Babcock. He was then about twenty years of age and he served his time as a machinist.

He had just completed his time when President Lincoln issued the first call for nine-months men. Mr. Dunham, being exceedingly patriotic, enlisted at once and was the first volunteer to enlist from Rhode Island. He served well during the nine months and then returned to Plainfield.

He was the first soldier to return here from the war and considerable interest was mainfested. He was met at the station by Editor Foster Cushing, of the Plainfield Union, and was taken to his home in Mr. Cushing's wagon. This was on Saturday afternoon, and nearly everyone in town called on Mr. Dunham to hear his story of the war. He had only been home a short time when President Lincoln issued a second call for two years service. Mr. Dunham responded promptly and enlisted with a New York State regiment. He served his time and answered to the third call issued by the President. He then remained till the close of the war. He was called into the engagements at Bull Run and at Chancellorsville, and at one time he was one of the prominent sharp shooters, and among his old relics is the rifle he used at that time.

At the close of the war he returned to Plainfield and engaged in the wholesale fish business in Fulton Market, New York. For sometime he commuted back and forth, but finally took up his residence in Brooklyn, where he lived until five years ago. About three years ago he purchased the property where he now lives. He remained in the fish business for several years and during this time he secured a patent on a combination tag and envelope and shipping tags. He then changed his business to the latter and he continued in the tag business to the time of his death, at 59 John street, New York.

About thirty years ago Mr. Dunham was married to Miss Mary Clark, of Nile, Allegany County, New York, and she now survives him. An interesting incident is told regarding a bomb shell which Mr. Dunham brought home from the war. It was left at his parents home, and it was supposed that the shell had entirely exploded. One day Mr. Dunham's mother was cleaning the shell and had placed it on the stove containing

BRYAN AT ST. LOUIS

Two Thousand People Surround the Church He Attends.

SPENT THE DAY WITH RELATIVES

Left Early This Morning for Louisville, Making Speeches at the Principal Stations Enroute---In Conference with Prominent Politicans.

St. Louis, Sept. 14.—Grand avenue was the Mecca of nearly 2,000 people yesterday, who were attracted by the notice that William J. Bryan would attend divine service at the Grand Avenue Presbyterian church. Mr. Bryan and a few friends were escorted to the church by Hon. John I. Martin, the sergeant-at-arms at the Chicago convention. and was seated in a pew near the altar. Rev. Dr. Cannon preached a brief, but eloquent sermon on the gospel of the day. On leaving the church Mr. Bryan was compelled to doff his hat in response to the subdued applause of the crowd on the sidewalk. Entering the carriage Mr. Bryan was driven to the residence of his cousin, John E. Davenport, passenger agent of the Clover Leaf route, where he ate dinner and passed the afternoon and evening in social conversation with a number of his relatives who had traveled from Salem, Ill., for the purpose of meeting their distinguished kinsman. It was after 9 o'clock last night when Mr. Bryan returned to his hotel, where he had a short conference with Gov. Stone, Chairman Brady of the city committee, Chairman Cook of the state committee and other prominent politicians.

Bryan Leaves St. Louis.

At 6 o'clock this morning the party left on a special train via the Louisville Nashville road and he will make short addresses at the principal stations enroute to Louisville. The train is due at Henderson at 2 o'clock this afternoon and is expected to reach Louisville at 8 o'clock to-night, where a big demonstration is being prepared for Mr. Bryan. In his speech on leaving Lincoln Friday night Mr. Bryan said he might not return to his city before election day. He told a reporter of the United Associated Presses to-day that he would be back in St. Louis October 3 to attend the meeting of the association of democratic clubs and would speak at Burlington, Ia., on October 8, and if it were possible he would visit Lincoln between these dates. Saturday night, whil Mr. Bryan was speaking at Sportsman's park, the speakers' stand sagged and threw some of those on it into momentary confusion. Very few of the audience noticed the incident or understood why Mr. Bryan paused in his remarks, as the stories circulated after the meeting that considerable excitement was caused were without foundation.

The Washington Meeting.

Washington, Sept. 14.—The meeting which Mr. Bryan is to address from the steps of the capitol next Saturday will be the ratification of the work of the Chicago convention by the democratic clubs of the district of Columbia. Mr. Sewall will be invited to be present. At a meeting of the executive committee last evening further arrangements for the meeting were made. Mr. Bryan will reach Washington from Richmond at 3:45 o'clock and be driven at once to the capitol. The meeting will be called to order at 4 o'clock, and is expected to continue four hours. Mr. Bryan will speak at about 5 o'clock.

J. T. DUNHAM DEAD.

He Was the First Volunteer To Enlist from Rhode Island.

New York, Sept. 14.—Joseph Tucker Dunham, a well known business man here, is dead at his home at Plainfield, N. J., of apoplexy, in his 55th year. He was at one time engaged in the wholesale fish business in this city. Dunham was prominent in the Grand Army, and was the first volunteer to enlist from Rhode Island. In former years he traveled very extensively through Europe.

Horse Trampled on Him.

Newark, N. J., Sept. 14.—While unhitching a horse near his home in Johnson avenue James McAttear of Kearny was knocked down by the animal and almost killed by being trampled upon. His skull was fractured and he received such internal injuries as may ultimately result in his death.

Maine Election To-day.

Augusta, Me., Sept. 14.—The election in Maine to-day is a most exciting one. Although both sides make big claims, there is no doubt that they are very much in the dark as to what the actual result will be. The republicans claim the election by about 25,000 majority.

TO RECEIVE 50,000

Major McKinley Preparing for a Large Influx of Visitors.

DELEGATIONS FROM MANY STATES

Ohio, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Michigan, West Virginia, Kentucky and Indiana Will Be Represented This Week---The Candidate's Sunday.

Canton, O., Sept. 14.—Major McKinley enjoyed a well-earned rest yesterday. In the morning Major McKinley took a drive with Mrs. McKinley and made a visit to his mother. He did not go to church. In the afternoon he took a long drive into the country and was much refreshed by it. He is looking well and feeling well after his week of arduous work and is ready for the still harder work of this week. Major McKinley will have a larger number of delegations at his house this week than he has received in the same length of time since his nomination, and many of them will be very large delegations. The total number of political pilgrims to Canton this week will number more than 50,000. Letters asking for dates for delegations come by every mail.

Delegations This Week.

Among those which will come this week are the following: To-day, business men and woolgrowers of Harrison county, Ohio. To-morrow an excursion of more than one thousand voters from Somerset county, Pa., and from western Maryland. Every voting precinct in the county will be represented. The Grand Army posts of Canton and vicinity will make a formal call on the candidate. The same day a delegation from Marshall, Mich., will arrive in Canton. This delegation will represent the voters of Calhoun county. Friday, the great republican meeting of the campaign will be held. Speeches will be made by Senators Cullom and Thurston, Gov. Hastings, of Pennsylvania and Congressman McCleary of Minnesota. Large delegations from nearly every county in Ohio are expected in Canton on Friday, and large numbers are coming from West Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana and Michigan. Arrangements for the accommodation of 50,000 visitors are being made. Next Saturday will be one of the notable days of the campaign in Canton. Six large and distinct delegations will visit Major McKinley. The delegation of Chicago railway men representing all of the railways which enter Chicago will nnmber 2,500, and a hundred coaches have been provided for them. In addition to this delegation there will be a delegation from Butler and Mercer counties, Pa.; a delegation composed of commercial travelers from Pittsburg and vicinity; a delegation from New Albany, Ind.; one from Columbus, O., representing the building trades council.

INCENDIARIES AT WORK.

Residents of Rockville Centre Becoming Very Much Alarmed.

Freeport, N. Y., Sept. 14.—As two men were seen leaving the hammock factory of A. V. S. Hicks at Rockville Centre, which was damaged by fire Saturday night to the extent of $8,000, a few minutes before the flames were discovered, it is thought that the place was set on fire. Several fires, apparently of incendiary origin, have occured in Rockville Centre during the past week and the residents there are much alarmed, many believing that a band of firebugs have taken up their quarters in the place.

Another Armenian Massacre Predicted.

London, Sept. 14.—The Plymouth Mercury claims to have reliable information that a massacre of the Armenians remaining in Constantinople is fixed to occur in ten days or two weeks. It says that Armenians already deported have been murdered by wholesale, the ships on which they were sent out of the country having chutes from which the victims were shot into the water and drowned in batches.

River St. Lawrence Very Low.

Cardinal, Ont., Sept. 14.—The water in the St. Lawrence river is so low that serious blockades have taken place in the canal. Four tugs and twelve barges are lying at the entrance of the canal, the steamer Passport having also been delayed. Only seven feet six inches of water are in the canal. The delay in deepening the Galoupes canal will no doubt again cause a serious loss to marine interests.

Princess Feodore Betrothed.

Hamburg, Sept. 14.—Princess Feodore, the youngest sister of the German empress, has been betrothed to Duke Frederick Wilhelm, brother of the grand duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin. The princeess is 22 years old and the duke 25.

Worcester's New City Hall.

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 14.—The corner stone of the city hall was laid yesterday by the grand lodge of Masons of Massachusetts. Grand master E. E. Holmes and mayor A. B. R. Sprague spoke. There was a military and civic parade of 5000 men.

Van Horne Taken to Scranton.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 14.—George Van Horne, wanted in Scranton for the murder of a woman in that city two weeks ago, who was captured on the streets here Saturday night, was taken to Scranton to-day.

—The Europeans are learning to appreciate oleomargarine, or imitation butter, for, last year, they called for 10,100,897 pounds, valued at $992,468.

—The United States mints, since their establishment, have coined 4,035,205 gold pieces of all denominations, worth $43,933,475; 3,956,011 silver dollars; 15,532,594 pieces of subsidiary silver coins worth $5,413,470; and of minor coins, such as nickel, copper and bronze, 35,087,302 pieces, worth $712,594.

—The total amount paid out for all kinds of pensions in the United Kingdom for the year ending March, 1892, was £7,588,862. Then pensions for the civil list amounted to £2,101,687; for the army, £3,714,673; for the navy, £1,742,812, and for the survivors of former distinguished naval and military men, £29,720. The whole number of recipients of all classes is 162,040.

—The mosaic work with which the crypt of St. Paul's cathedral is paved was made by the female convicts at Woking prison. The quarries of the Isle of Portland, in Dorsetshire, supplied the materials for St. Paul's cathedral, and for the most splendid buildings in London. About 70,000 tons of Portland stone are now exported annually from these quarries.

—Nelson's old vessel, the Foudroyant, has been refitted again at a cost of $100,000 for exhibit at the coming Kiel naval exhibition. Her timbers are in good condition in spite of her 107 years. She was Nelson's flagship for only one year. It was from the yardarm of the Foudroyant that Prince Carraccioli, admiral of the republican fleet, a prisoner of war, was hanged without a trial. It was on the quarterdeck of the Foudroyant that Sir Ralph Abercromby died of his wounds after defeating the French at Alexandria in 1801.

LIVING TOO FAST.

The Physical Condition of the American People.

There are two most undesirable things that belong to the physical side of our nation, and one is very largely dependent upon the other if not the outgrowth of it. These are the disease called neurasthenia, better understood if we call it tired-out-nerves, and the other the serious defects of vision which we all recognize—indeed the oculists (and they are not responsible for it) are fast transforming us into a spectacled nation.

The rush and bustle of this American life is too much for us. We live too fast, eat, sleep, and die too fast. Our civilization makes us live fast. We are a quick-fortune-making people. Wall street has shown us how fortunes can be made in a day and lost in a day. To acquire the one and avoid the other has made many men of 40 assume the appearance of men of 80. It is safe to say that Wall street and the peculiar kind of fever generated in similar localities affords one of the most serious menaces to the people of this country—and I do not except social vices and the evils of liquor.

And yet every college gymnasium in the country, every Young Men's Christian association, is at work measuring and testing its members, and the results of these measurements and tests will return to us much of value. From them we shall learn what we have of physical value in certain classes of our population. True, they come from selected classes and do not by any means cover the whole ground, and yet they are most important to the student of anthropology. Our police records, too, are becoming of more value in that from them we learn more of the physical make-up of the criminal class. In many of our large cities, pursuant to a plan adopted in France and Belgium and other continental countries, exact measurements as well as photographs of all criminals are made. While this is done largely as a means of identifying later, still it is giving to us certain physical characteristics which can almost be called constants of the criminal class.—Prof. E. Hitchcock, Jr., M. D. in Chautauquan.

How to Live a Century

In an address on old age, recently published in the British Medical Journal, Sir James Crichton Browne, M.D., LL.D., says: "Man is entitled to live one hundred years."

Many men have lived a century and not one of them has ever committed suicide. Note that fact. It is a simple question of wear and repair. Accidents excepted, a human life is measured by the body's power to build itself up as fast as use tears it down. In health this is done.

But disease attacks it. Appetite and digestion fail; strength declines; flesh melts like snow. What can stop the wasting and replace the loss?

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with the Hypophosphites of lime and soda.

It is a body-builder. It is the essence of the elements and principles that feed, nourish, reconstruct. It is fuel fat for the vital fire; it makes red blood; it stops the wasting; it puts back the lost flesh.

Hence its brilliant results in cases of anaemia, bronchitis, chronic gastric and intestinal disorders and consumption. The oil (easily digested and assimilated) forms flesh and tissue; while the lime promotes the growth of bone. It is like an architect in wood, in stone and in iron—all at once.

In Scott's Emulsion the taste of the oil is fully disguised. It does not nauseate the most delicate stomach.

No other emulsion is "just the same as," or "as good as" Scott's. There is a radical difference.

Accept no substitute.

THEIR HOUSE BOAT UPSET.

Our Minister to China and His Wife Narrowly Escape Drowning.

San Francisco, Sept. 14.—The Oriental mail brings news that Col. Charles Denby, the United States minister to China, and his wife had a narrow escape from death while journeying from Tien Tsin to Pekin in a house boat. According to a letter received in Yokohama, Col. and Mrs. Denby were being towed up the river by a steam launch, when a collision occurred and the house boat was capsized. Col. Denby was on the deck at the time, and with considerable difficulty he succeeded in getting to the bank of the river. Mrs. Denby was in the cabin when the boat capsized, and, being unable to get out before the boat turned bottom up, was imprisoned in the cabin. She was rescued when almost unconscious by cutting a hole through the bottom of the boat. Had she remained a prisoner much longer she would have died. She was nearly suffocated.

COLLISION AT VINEYARD HAVEN.

Coal Steamer Runs Down a Fishing Schooner.

Vineyard Haven, Mass., Sept. 14.—About noon yesterday the fishing schooner James Dyer of Portland, Capt. Staples, was run into by the steamer Reading of and from Philadelphia, with a cargo of coal. The collision occurred about twelve miles west-southwest from Vineyard sound lightship during foggy weather. The schooner was struck just aft of the main rigging and she sank in about seven minutes. The crew of sixteen men had barely time to save themselves by jumping on board the steamship. One man fell overboard, but was rescued. No one was drowned. The crew was brought here by the Reading.

OIL WORKS DESTROYED.

Trainer, Pa., the Scene of a Big Fire, the Loss Being $100,000.

Chester, Pa., Sept. 14.—The Delaware Oil works, near here, owned by Hiram E. Lutz of Philadelphia, were destroyed by fire yesterday, involving a loss estimated at over $100,000. The plant will be rebuilt. The fire originated in the shipping sheds and spread rapidly over the works. The flames destroyed in addition to the buildings 5,500 barrels of oil, 500 barrels of paraffine wax, two ten-ton ice machines, six tanks of 500 barrels capacity each and which were filled with oil, and engines, boilers, dynamos and other machinery.

Dewey's Opinion of the Cruiser Brooklyn.

Washington, Sept. 14.—Commodore Dewey, president of the cruiser Brooklyn's trial board, has practically completed his report and will deliver it to the navy department in a few days. The commodore says the Brooklyn underwent a test which probably has never been equalled by a warship in the world, and in his opinion she is finer than any vessel of her class afloat. The delay in making the report has been due to the precaution of taking the engines apart after the trial. Every portion of the machinery was found free from the slightest strain, which is considered extraordinary after a run of six hours under full pressure.

For Fraudulent Use of the Mails.

Chicago, Sept. 14.—Charles E. George of the firm of Duncombe & George, lawyers, has been arrested by postoffice Inpector Stuart on a charge of using the mails for purposes of fraud. His victims are said to be numerous, including residents of Rhode Island, Indiana, St. Louis and Cedar Rapids, Iowa. He is accused of inducing certain persons to pay him money to do the legal work in obtaining possession of an estate in Guatemala, which he had discovered they were entitled to and which was said to be worth over $1,000,000.

Funeral of Actor James Lewis.

New York, Sept. 14.—The funeral services over the remains of James Lewis, the well-known actor, who died on Thursday last, were held yesterday at the Church of the Transfiguration. The Rev. George H. Houghton, rector of the church, assisted by Rev. W. R. Scott, officiated at the ceremonies. The edifice was crowded to the doors. The interment was at Woodlawn cemetery. The floral offerings from the friends and admirers of Mr. Lewis were numerous and superb.

May Be Japan's Premier.

New York, Sept. 14.—Baron Nissi, the Japanese minister to Russia, has arrived here on his way home from his post. There is a rumor in diplomatic circles in Washington that Baron Nissi will supersede Count Kuroda as premier of Japan. Baron Nissi's views harmonize with those of the Japanese parliament, and, it is said, Count Kuroda's do not.

51 PRISONERS SHOT

Insurgents Executed at Cabanas Fortress and Morro Castle.

PROGRESS OF THE REVOLUTION

Situation Very Bad for the Spanish Government---Eastern End of the Island May Have To Be Evacuated---Convents as Military Hospitals.

Madrid, Sept. 14.—Capt.-Gen. Weyler cables from Havana that fifty-one insurgents who were confined in the Cabanas fortress and Morro castle were shot yesterday.

Progress of the War.

Havana, Sept. 14.—Reports from the eastern part of the island indicate that the situation is very bad for the Spanish government. All the interior towns occupied by the Spanish troops are besieged by the insurgents. Gen. Linares, the Spanish commander of the eastern department, has telegraphed for reinforcements. He says that unless a strong force is sent him he will have to abandon the eastern part of the island. Gibara, in the province of Santiago de Cuba, has been besieged for some time, and at this date there are reports that the insurgents have stormed the town and taken it. No news from the eastern part of the island is published. The censorship is more rigid than ever. La Discusion, a newspaper published in this city, was heavily fined for publishing the fact that Quintin Bandera crossed the trocha.

Bolondron Captured by Insurgents.

It is reported that Bolondron, in the province of Matanzas, was taken and burned by the insurgent on August 30. On the same day Batabano, in the province of Havana, was attacked and considerable of the town was burned, but the insurgents were obliged to retire beyond the reach of the fire of the gunboats in the harbor. Batabano is the most strongly fortified of any of the towns. A stockade about twelve or fourteen feet high has been erected around the whole town. Outside of this stockade a ditch has been dug about twelve feet wide and three feet deep. The dirt from this ditch has been thrown up against the stockade. A small stream that heretofore ran through the town has been turned into this ditch. The woods and trees have all been cut away from the town for a half mile back.

Convents as Military Hospitals.

Gen. Weyler has published an order closing all the schools until November next. The public do not expect that the schools will be opened in November. It is supposed that the schools will remain closed until the war is over. Belen, the Jesuit college, and the University of the City of Havana are closed with the rest. It is said that these two institutions will be transformed into military hospitals. The sugar warehouses at Regia, across the bay from Havana, have been taken for military hospitals. Weyler has directed that the Beneficencia and the convents of Santa Clara and Santa Catalina shall be devoted to the same purpose. These buildings are private property, belonging to the Sisters of Charity. The Beneficencia is a large asylum for the benefit of the poor. Its occupants are principally orphans. There are a few old people in the institution. The nuns say that the girls in the Beneficencia they will take with them to the convent of Santa Clara, but that they will not give up either the convent of Santa Clara or Santa Catalina until they are driven out by the bayonets of the troops.

Weyler Has 20,000 Sick Soldiers.

The nuns of these two convents belong to the Franciscan order. The general inspector happens to be here at present. He went to the palace and had a very heated argument with Palmarola. He told the officials that they were not Catholics, and that the Catholic church does not recognize their authority. Afterward the bishop went to Weyler to protest against the government taking the convents for military purposes. Weyler told the bishop that if he had any more interference with his orders he would transport the bishop. It is now reported that the bishop intends to leave for Spain. After this interview with the bishop, Weyler said, in the presence of a number of persons, that he had 20,000 sick soldiers scattered all over the country, having no other shelter than the stoops or verandas of village houses, exposed to inclement weather day and night. Six thousand sick soldiers were reported in the hospitals of the city on Sept. 3, and they are constantly being brought in. The mortality among the troops is increasing at a great rate. The troops now are suffering principally from yellow fever, smallpox intermittent fever and dysentery. Gen. Weyler now says that he will take personal command of the 40,000 men that are being sent here and sweep the Vueta Abajo.

Fatal Storm in England.

London, Sept. 14.—A severe thunder storm, accompanied by a whirlwind, passed over the county of Essex yesterday. The rainfall was heavy. Ancient oak trees were torn up by the roots and other damage was done. In the town of Saffron-Walden a number of buildings were blown down, while the roofs of many others were carried off. Two or three lives are believed to have been lost.

Count von Shouvaloff Recovering.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 14.—Prof. Bergman, the German specialist, who has been in attendance upon Count von Shouvaloff, the governor of Russian Poland, who was recently stricken with paralysis, says his patient is slowly recovering.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

(Furnished by Weather Observer Neagle.)

Light Local Showers Tonight and Tuesday; Stationary Temperature.

At 12 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 79 Degrees.

What the bicycle parade, Saturday, lacked in quantity it made up in quality, for the designs and decorations were really original and creditable to the local riders of whom the pageant was almost exclusively composed. Owing to the fact that there were three other big events designed for the bicyclists in the metropolitan district on Saturday, together with threatening weather and the drawbacks incident to a postponement, the parade was not largely entered by outside wheelmen. One discouraging feature to what there was of it was the fact that those in the parade rode too close to each other and altogether too fast for the crowds along the line of march to see the features with any degree of satisfaction. But with the experience gained in the four attempts—two of which were fairly successful—this year there is hope that another season will see better weather on the set date and a parade that will excel anything of the kind ever held before in the country.

W. C. T. U. OFFICERS.

Elected at the Annual Meeting Being Held in This City Today.

The annual meeting of the W.C.T.U., is being held today. The morning session was called to order at ten o'clock and devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Winter, which was followed with remarks by the County President, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson. The report of the treasurer, Mrs. R. K. Case, showed that the receipts were $72.28 more than last year, and that the expenditures were $915.20. All bills are paid to date and there is now a balance of $19 91 in the treasury. Mrs J. H. French, recording secretary, presented her report, showing that there are at present 245 members in the Union and a gain of sixteen during the year. There are also twenty-one honorary members, and 168 meetings have been held during the year. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Eliza Parse; corresponding secretary, Mrs. O.B. Leonard; recording secretary, Mrs. J.H. French; treasurer, Mrs. R. K. Case. Following are the vice presidents elected from the various churches:

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation, can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

QUALITY, NOT QUANTITY.

Henry Leal and Wells Taylor impersonated a "cullud swell" and his "gal." Victor Christofferson, was not recognizable in the rags and tatters of a "knight of the road." He had a monstrous canvas umbrella spread over his head, while the rest of his outfit was fastened on at convenient places.

A remarkable character in skirts, and bearing a very idiotic mask, violently fanned a poor toy pug fastened in a luggage carrier throughout the parade.

The hod carrier was there with his hod in his hand and a pipe in his mouth; he had a ladder fastened to his handles, up which he was apparently climbing.

The last division in line was the one devoted to business floats, commanded by J. Hervey Doane. This display was excellent and a number of firms were represented. Probably the most elaborate was the float of Hillier & Co. the North avenue laundry firm. It was finished after the shape of a house with the rider, George Wilson, inside and was white, with gold decorations while the suggestive laundry packages told of the occupation of its owners. It was certainly very handsome. Its designer was Miss Mary Brown. William H. Addis and Dennis Carney, representing two rather gay colored individuals fresh from school, navigated the float of Addis & Son, which was built on two bicycles side by side and looked something like a lunch counter on wheels.

Manager E. W. Mills, of the United States Express company, had the company's new package carrier in line with little Gordon Kerr seated on top. The new vehicle received much favorable comment. Crane & Clark had a hat ambulance in line. Edward White's package carrier was in this division and was prettily decorated.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle company, had two representations. One was the Punnett Companion, decorated with red, white and blue and with a canopy of the same overhead, while motive power was furnished by "Manager" William Sweeney and Herbert Rockfellow, each wearing a tall silk hat and a white duck suit. Gorgeous was no name for it. Edward Marcellus was mounted on the rear of a tandem, while his trained dog, gaily dressed for the occasion, occupied the front seat. This was the F. L. C. Martin Cycle company's mascot. L. W. Randolph's famous glaces were advertised by a pretty Venetian bower in which sat P. V. Wheeler, a gay courier for the the time being, and also acting as the engineer of this craft.

J. H. Leggett's display was certainly a very pretty one. It was white, wheel and all, while a bower overhead sheltered the rider who was also dressed in the prevailing color. A morter and pestle adorned the front and there were other signs of the trade. The effect was charming.

Woolston & Buckle's float was neat and attractive looking and received lots of applause. Rushton, Hansen & Luthman had a warrior of the ancients out to defend their reputations as painters and he looked very fine in his armor with shield and spear. J. H. McVey's restaurant was remembered by a transparency. M. C. Bird's Central Mills was aptly illustrated by a rider carrying a sheaf of straw. Edsall's Commercial Palace had its float in line and a very pretty one it was.

The judges remained at the Revere House and the parade passed by there again before following the regular line of march. The judges present were Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Mrs. J. H. Howell, Mrs. S. A. Cruikshank, ex-Councilman Ernest R. Ackerman, W. D. Murray and Edward White. At the close of the Carnival they announced the following prize winners.

Best club—First, Crescent Wheelmen; second, Alls Football Club.

Best individual man's wheel—First, A. R. Johnson; second, John Pool; third, W. H. Pope.

Best lady's wheel—First, Rita Nash; second, Mamie Jones.

Best burlesque—First, Homer Smith; second, Fred Barker.

Best juvenile wheel—First, Selden Thayer; second Egbert D. Murphy; third, Mamie Thatcher.

Best tandem—First, C. E. Teele and Thomas Hanna; second, Clarence Roome and LeRoy Breiveter.

Best business float—First, Hillier and Co, second, Leggett's Pharmacy.

Best ladies costume—First, Clara Peck; second, Mildred Terrell.

Best man's costume—First, Henry Vosseler; second, Charles Palmer.

The prize committee will announce the time and place of the giving of the prizes in a few days.

Most of the residents and business men along the line of march decorated to some extent. There were some very pretty arrangements but to individualize without giving all would be unfair to the rest and lack of space prevents a list of all.

Now that it is all over something should be said of the men who worked so hard to get it up. The committee has been hard at work for several weeks and although the weather was against them, yet their efforts proved very successful. Special credit is due to Edward White, the very energetic treasurer, as well as the popular chairman, J. F. McDonald. Nobody realizes how it was done by the untiring secretary, F. R. Stevens, and indeed by all the rest. F. L. C. Martin should not be forgotten, for he was the originator of this Carnival and the previous one. Time, labor and money have been spent by him to make the affair a success and he deserves a vote of thanks from the citizens of Plainfield in recognition of his efforts.

Next year it is to be hoped Dame Nature will be more kind as regards the weather when Plainfield attempts to hold a Carnival.

Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills.

For thirty years Dr. Deane has made a study of dyspepsia, and in thirty years has cured more cases of it than probably any other fifty physicians combined. He gave up the study of theology and took to medicine, because the most eminent physicians of that day gave him up as a chronic dyspeptic, with only a short time to live.

Result of this change—a hearty, healthy, useful life, an enormous practice, and a demand for his pills greater than for all others combined wherever known. For sale at all druggists. Send for a free sample. White wrapper if constipated, yellow if bowels are loose.

For the first time in several weeks James Baker was able to go to his store for a brief time on Saturday night. He is, however, quite weak from his recent indisposition.

Twenty couples from Plainfield and Bound Brook will be at Lee's West Side Hotel this evening and engage in the mazy waltz to the soul-inspiring strains of Prof. Eugene O'Reilly's up-to-date orchestra.

Business is so good at the stone quarries on the mountain near here, that Messrs Cook, Richards and Wahl are all running their crackers eleven hours each day, and it is thought that night work will soon be necessary.

"Bobby" Walpole went to Green wood Lake fishing Saturday, but as he hadn't showed up late last evening opinion is divided as to whether he fell overboard or was overcome by some of his recent fish stories, or both.

Twenty young people from Milburn drove over to Emery's Hotel on a straw ride Saturday night and spent several hours pleasantly in singing, dancing and general conversation. The party was dinnered by Mine Host Emery and left for home soon after midnight.

The managers of the stone quarries near here are willing and ready to bid for the contract to furnish stone for the Mountain avenue macadamizing in North Plainfield, provided an opportunity is offered them.

J. Gertridge left White House Station, beyond Somerville, yesterday morning, and dined at the West Side Hotel. He has been for a few weeks' pleasure drive through New Jersey and was on his way home to Stanhope, Conn.

Scotch Plains is generally considered a law abiding place, but it has nevertheless a gang of hoodlums who are at times bent on raising Cain—and they are able to. Saturday night the gang—and it may here be stated that their names are known—started out on the warpath. They first whipped an apple orchard along the main road leading to Fanwood, so that yesterday morning the owner found a couple of bushels of half-grown winter apples on the ground. They next turned their attention to Fred Clark's cornfield, and out of pure spite or otherwise, went about the field upsetting shocks of corn which had recently been cut. The marauders then deliberately carried two of the shocks into the street and stacked them up. One driver on the way to the depot came near having a serious runaway as the result of someone's foolhardiness.

The Republicans of Scotch Plains met in Excelsior Hall Saturday evening and organized for the fall campaign with a total membership of fifty. Geo. Robinson was the chairman and William Noble secretary. Permanent officers were elected as follows: President, A. D. Shepard; vice-president, Dr. F. W. Westcott; secretary, Wm. Noble. Inasmuch as there are yet no funds to treasure, the election of a treasurer was deferred until the next regular meeting, on Thursday evening of this week, at which time a regular hall will be decided upon and Republican literature will be placed on file.

DUNELLEN.

Joseph Apgar and wife and Mrs. W. H. Coles spent Saturday at Coney Island.

The attendance from Dunellen to the Plainfield bicycle parade on Saturyay was fully 150.

Conductor Rarick's brother is able to move around again after being laid up with an attack of rheumatism.

W. Cannon and Edward Teel expect to go to Sullivan County, the first of next month deer hunting. All the boys will expect one.

Charles Teel has returned home from Buttsville after spending 10 days hunting and fishing. He reports of having good luck at both.

The members of the Dunellen Gun Club held their regular monthly shoot on the grounds of the club, Saturday, and some very good scores were made.

Smith Watson, engineer on train, No 42, due at Plainfield at 8.33, from Dunellen, was taken sick at Jersey City, on Friday. He has, however, recovered and is able to go on duty again.

The public school here opens to-day and early this morning the voices of the school children could be "heard in the land," and with few exceptions they seemed anxious to resume their studies after a two months' vacation.

NEW MARKET.

Last Friday evening some petty thieves or burglars entered the Lehigh Valley Railroad station by breaking out a pane of glass in the baggage room and another one in the ticket office. A westbound freight passed the station at the time the thieves were at work forcing an entrance, and the engineer saw them. On arriving at Bound Brook he telegraphed to South Plainfield and an engine with four or five men was sent to New Market, but the thieves had made their escape. It was also discovered that they had gained an entrance to the freight house, but nothing was missing but a hat belonging to Station Agent J. G. Rupelle. Luther Tappen, the forman on the road being macadamized from New Market to Stelton, found near the tool house Saturday morning a lot of broken glass about a quarter of an inch in thickness, and a little further away was found a slot machine totally demolished. On inquiry, Stanley Day, Jr., informed him that it belonged to Abe Nelson's pool room, which was also entered during the night. Abe says his loss was slight.

It is called Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It always does the work." 50 cent, bottles for sale by T. S. Armstrong druggist.

In a recent letter to the manufacturers Mr. W. F. Benjamin, editor of the Spectator, Rushford, N. Y., says: "It may be a pleasure to you to know the high esteem in which Chamberlain's medicines are held by the people of your own state, where they must be best known. An aunt of mine, who resides at Dexter, Iowa, was about to visit me a few years since, and before leaving home wrote me, asking if they were sold here, stating if they were not she would bring a quantity with her, as she did not like to be without them." The medicines referred to are Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds and croup; Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, pains in the side and chest, and Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for bowel complaints. These medicines have been in constant use in Iowa for almost a quarter of a century. The people have learned that they are articles of great worth and merit, and unequaled by any other. ELLEN OSBORN'S LETTER.

The Ways of Women in a Summer Resort That's Full of Men.

Saratoga Trunks in the Wildwoods—An Elysium Where There Are Three Sturdy Men for Every Woman and Trout in Plenty.

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

Lower Saranac, Aug. 22.—Sometimes in these green arches of the woods I hear the mellow "clank! clank!" of a cowbell and am reminded of the cowbell which Mrs. Frederick Gebhart slung to her four-in-hand in Bar Harbor, just in frolic, just before I left that blase place.

Sometimes I see a figure rapidly approaching over a perfect road, wheel-mounted and reminding me of Newport and the wider world less wild, until it comes nearer and I see that it is—of all things unexpected—a woods guide, slouch hat on head, pipe in mouth, pack basket and 70 pounds of camp kit on back, pedaling serenely along with a frying-pan handle sticking out over his shoulder.

Or I hear the beat of hoofs and drum of rolling coach wheels and think of the carriage parade of Saratoga; or a white gown with blue facings, glinting far through the trees, gives a reminiscent flash of the white breaking surf of blue ocean on the Newport rocks; but when I see the men, then of no place in the world save these glorious woods could I be reminded. One point the Adirondacks have of superiority to all other American summer resorts; during the last part, at least, of the season the men outnumber the women almost three to one. It is the paradise of the daughters of Eve.

Not the mere Saturday-to-Monday flyaways, mind you, who leave five blue Mondays in their wake every week as they depart, but men who stay. And such men! Here at the Saranac there is a considerable colony of invalids—has been since Robert Louis Stevenson stayed here—but after the 15th of August they are all at once quite outnumbered by the big, manly fellows, in fore-and-aft caps and yellow leggins and belted blouses, with even more than the usual masculine profusion of pockets, who come to chase the forest deer and "kill them up," as Jaques puts it. Nowhere else will you see so many fine men at once, save on the Thames just before regatta week, before the crowd of 'Arries appears on the scene.

It is a wilderness strangely modified. One hundred miles from east to west its magic circle covers, 199 miles from north to south, like a big round green button sewn on mother earth, but it is now thrid by railroads, much of the way running through game preserves where the unscared fawns poke their noses through the wire fence and gaze wide-eyed at the passing portent and there are big hotels galore, so that even in the heart of the mighty woods the seven-Saratogaed daughter of the sirens can display all her finery.

The huntress, the fair Diana who herself shoots deer, is fortunately a rare thing here, oftener read of than seen. But it is a fine thing to don one's hunting gown and properly chaperoned, of course, go "floating for deer" late at night through black, moorless stretches of water, the boat making no sound, the paddle thrust noiselessly through the water until at length the dark lantern flashes full on the dun coat and the big startled eyes—and then away flies the deer, for, as I said, the woman Diana seldom shoots.

She is sped on her parting for such an adventure by belaced and beribboned mammas and piazza women as nerveless and uselessly splendid here as elsewhere. Such a gown was worn last evening by the anxious, millioned mamma of a daughter who had been ordered by her physician to fall in love if possible and who had come to the Adirondacks as the best possible place to fill the prescription. She wore—the mamma wore, standing on the piazza, fair, forty and not thin—a beautiful dress in a pale lilac tone, striped with lace down the skirt and across the skirt and down the corsage and over the sleeves. There were braces of lace on the muslin bodice and the belt of cerise ribbon was the one touch of solid color about it. Such gowns are worn in the wilderness.

The two young women, matron and maid hardly distinguishable, off for the floating expedition were far differently clad. One wore a brown cloth costume with a close-cut bodice many buttoned and parting over a chamois waistcoat front. The turn-back cuffs were of the same material, and the hat was a quilled Alpine, best suited for woods wear. Just the least touch more elaborate was the young matron's plain blue serge with its white waistcoat front of soft silk, its chamois belt with enamel pendants, its dotted tie, stiff collar and cuffs and sailor hat, but withal a sensible costume in contrast with the other ladies on the verandas. Both the adventurers wore russet leggings, which seem to go well with short-skirted costumes, especially here where briars do abound, and where even the men are beginning to find them a welcome addition to their ordinary costume.

It is the wilderness, but only 12 hours or so from New York and a week from Paris, and we have evening gowns on parade, fresh from either city, such as one in white satin embroidered in silver sequins, pearls and brilliants which I particularly noted because it was extremely up to date and because its bodice was short and sharp pointed, because the sleeves were like little short capes of considerable circumference, and because an embroidered band followed the line of the low decolletage and was upheld by two similar bands over the shoulders, and principally do I record the fact that the skirt was almost as richly decked as the bodice.

But for the most part the swell costumes affected here, in the woods are day gowns. There are wonderful white costumes and there are marvelous parasols with gemmed handles and wildernesses of lace upon their roofs. There are the new shoes, slightly less pointed than the old, and hence, for the average foot, really smaller in appearance.

The most delightful excuse for flirtation is lake trout fishing. Because if you catch one he may weigh 20 pounds and make you famous, and if you don't you must row very slowly across only the very deepest parts of the lakes, with a very long line letting the hook sink well to the bottom where, in the cooler water, the big fellows lurk. And in this slow progression eye can meet eye and—

The pickerel fishing on Round lake is said to be very fine, too.

And then there is mountain climbing, Mount Ampersand being the favorite height from this point, its summit reached by a trail of incredible hardships, but affording one of the loveliest views in the world, of the green forest all around and Ampersand lake at the foot.

OFF FOR THE "DEER FLOAT."

Comes from cityward a bruit that tennis is now voted altogether slow and golf is supreme. Some of the young people here seem not to have heard of it.

Big hats go with ordinary day gowns, probably always will.

I wonder if the young lady who was advised to fall in love will follow the prescription?

INCANDESCENT LIGHT.

Curious or Commonplace Uses to Which It Is Put.

Incandescent electric lights are used to illuminate the eyes of mounted animals, bears, tigers and lions, shown by furriers. Here obviously a light with a flame would not do, while the incandescent light answers the purpose well and conveniently. The wire is run from the head down through the animal's body and out through one of the feet to a connection with the service wire of the store.

Incandescent lights are used in refrigerators, such as the ice boxes of the wholesale dealer in cut flowers and the butcher. Their use in sidewalk showcases is familiar; in dressing show windows the flexible connection admits of placing the light where it is wanted with each new trimming of the window.

They are used in electric signs, some of which are permanent, while others are formed of letters that are movable, like types, so that the sign can be readily changed as often as may be desired. Electric numbers are made in the same way.

One may see a painter at work at night in a store, paint brush in one hand and electric light—with the wire trailing away back of him—in the other, to enable him to see the better in some nook or cranny that he is painting.

The incandescent lamp is used to light sidewalk awnings. The lamps are strung along the awning; the wire and lamps are simply taken in when the awning is. Movable bill boards are illuminated in the same manner.—N. Y. Sun.

Bugs Rule the World.

"It is an interesting fact," says a correspondent of the Boston Transcript, "that bugs practically rule the world. Man is almost helpless against them. It is reckoned that there are at least 10,000 species of insects in existence; and will anybody mention one of the injurious species that has been seriously diminished in numbers by efforts of human beings? Well, the court surmises not. Look at the mosquito, the cockroach, the moth which attacks clothes. Where are they to-day? Just living at our expense, and suffering the loss of only a few individuals killed. We can't destroy them, we only defend ourselves feebly."

'Possums are destroying watermelons at White City, Fla., and giving more trouble than the razor-back hog, since they cannot be fenced.

ACCOMPLISHED DOG.

Exhibited Intelligence Unusual in the Brute Kingdom.

A Newfoundland named Oscar, belonging to myself, had often listened with much interest to stories of rescue of drowning persons by dogs, says Andrew Lang in Longman's Magazine. I happen to possess an engraving of Landseer's "Member of the Humane Society." Oscar would contemplate it for hours, and study the pose in the mirror. One day two little children were playing alone on St. Andrew's pier, and I was sketching the ruins at a short distance, Oscar running about on the pier. I happened to look up and saw Oscar, as if inadvertently, but quite deliberately, back one of the children (Johnny Chisholm by name) into the water, which is there very deep. The animal then gave three loud howls to attract attention. He had been taught to give "three cheers for Mr. Gladstone," jumped into the water, rescued the child, and carried him, "quite safe, but very wet," to the local photographer's, obviously that the deed might be commemorated by art. Nobody saw the beginning of this tragedy except myself.

Oscar, when brought home, deliberately rapped out "Humane Society" with his tail on the floor; but, much as I appreciated his intelligence, I could not, in common honesty, give him a testimonial. This preyed on his mind; he accompanied a party to the top of St. Rule's tower, and deliberately leaped from the top, being dashed to pieces at the feet of an eminent divine whose works he had often, but unsuccessfully, entreated me to review in an unfavorable sense. His plan was to bring the book, lay it at my feet, and return with the carving knife in his mouth.

A NATURAL BEAR TRAP.

One Place in the Yellowstone Park Where Nature Suffocates Wild Animals.

F. H. Knowlton tells in Recreation about a natural bear trap in the northeastern portion of the Yellowstone National park, on a small stream called Cache creek, about ten miles above its junction with the Lamas river. Knowlton and a friend were going up through a gulch Cache creek had made, when near the head of it, about 50 feet distant, they saw a huge grizzly bear curled up as if asleep. Considering it to be impolite to awaken it, and nothing to offer but prospectors' picks, they climbed up the side of the gulch at once, quietly and expeditiously.

Out of reach of the bear, they stopped and fired rocks and anathemas at it, but as the bear continued in the same position they finally made up their minds that it was dead. It was dead and had been dead about five hours. There was no wound on its body, but a little blood had dripped from the nostrils. They then became conscious of a sense of suffocation from strong sulphur fumes arising from mineral springs thereabouts. The bear had wandered in them, tempted, perhaps, by the skeletons of four other bears, an elk, squirrels, rock hares and butterflies and other insects, and had been asphyxiated by the noxious gases.

The head of the gulch made a sort of a basin in which the gas settled. This gas is not very deep, a man's head being about on the surface of it, since the scoop's rim allows the gas to flow down the stream with the creek, in a sort of a gas river on the water creek.

THE YARD MEASURE.

Standards Have Varied in the Different Ages of the World.

The yard is the British and American standard of length. Down to 1824 the original standard of Britain (and from which ours was copied) was a rod, which had been deposited in the court of exchequer, London, in the time of Queen Elizabeth. In those days, says the St. Louis Republic, all measures intended for general use were taken to the court of exchequer to be examined by the proper officer. That official took the proposed measure and placed it parallel with the standard, and if found correct placed certain marks of identification upon it. By an act of parliament in 1824 the old Elizabethan standard was superseded by another, which had been constructed under the directions of the Royal society 64 years previous. This act provided that "the straight line or distance between the centers of two points in the gold studs in the brass rod now in the custody of the clerk of the house of commons shall be the genuine standard of the yard measure in Great Britain." The act further provided that the measurements of the rod must be made when the temperature of the brass rod was at 62 degrees Fahrenheit.

That standard was destroyed by fire in 1834 and the commission appointed to replace it made the yard measure now in use. The new standard was deposited in the house of parliament in 1855 and authenticated copies of it are in the possession of our government officials at Washington.

More Pie for the Money.

A French journal tells a story of a lady who with a maid went to purchase a still-life picture for her dining-room. She selected a canvas on which were painted a bunch of flowers, a pie cut in two and a half-penny roll, and was paying 500 francs for it when the maid approached to whisper in her ear.

"Madame," said the servant, "you are making a bad bargain. I saw a picture very much like this sold the other day for 400 francs."

"And was it as good as this?"

"Yes, madame, it was better; there was a good deal more pie in it."

Curious Remedy.

A centenarian in the Newry (Ireland) workhouse, being troubled with asthma, tried to relieve himself by opening his chest with a cobbler's knife, as he said "to let out the wind." It was thought to be an attempt at suicide, but the man had done the same thing before and had obtained relief in breathing, he said.

Delicate Dress Goods.

Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being looked at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable, NOT USELESS. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics, the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand redyeing. The finer the material the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the result, it's worth while to experiment. Want a new evening gown for a dollar or two? Laundry drivers will receive your work.

THE ORDER OF "MULES."

Peculiar Anti-Crime Organization of Kentucky and West Virginia.

It Has Become a Terror to Murderers and Cattle Thieves and Evil-Doers of Every Description—Its Origin and Conduct.

Unquestionably the most unique order in the United States is the "Mules," a secret organization of farmers in this county and the several adjoining counties of this state and West Virginia. Organized just after the close of the war, and on somewhat the same plan as the regulators of the far west, or perhaps more after the fashion of the rangers of the Texas plains, the order has constantly grown in favor until now the membership is estimated to reach well on toward 3,000.

Following the close of the war there was for a number of years in the immediate neighborhood an alarming run of lawlessness. The principal occupation of a great majority of the back county communities appeared to be horse stealing and general thievery. Something had to be done to stop it, as the authorities were wholly unable to cope with the offenders. In this extremity the resourceful mind of one of the best known physicians in the county evolved the idea of an organization for the mutual protection of the farmers. The result was soon felt in the presence of the Mutual Protective society, of which only the most responsible farmers and citizens, regardless of occupation, were eligible to membership.

The first proclamation of the new order was a candid statemtnt of its purposes and conditions, and a warning tersely worded for the benefit of all transgressors of the laws of the county and state. A promise of the early breaking up of the several bands of horse thieves then operating in this and the Big Sandy country was also made. This latter provision was the source of considerable sarcasm on the part of the gangs named, who resorted to the white cap manner of placarding their answers of defiance. When the first raid was made on the farmers' stock it was of a more general character than had ever before been attempted, presumably to show the small esteem in which the officers, and the lodge as well, were held.

The members of the order turned out en masse and speedily ran down several of the gang and so closely chased the leaders that they were compelled to flee to the mountains. Convictions soon followed, and the order became recognized as an important factor in the county government. Similar experiences followed, and the membership of the order increased at a rapid rate. New lodges sprang up in adjoining counties, and each community had a branch, with an organization and a code of signals sufficient to enable the warning of the entire membership to the field in the shortest possible order. Whenever a case of horse stealing was reported the order would turn out 400 or 500 strong and scour the whole region until the animals were recovered or the thief captured.

Other and similar offenses were given attention equally substantial. Under these conditions the gangs soon became scattered, their work most hazardous and the morals in general of the county as good as could be asked. Throughout the past 20 years the unceasing watchfulness and energy of the order have maintained the same effect in the mountainous country. Only recently the "Mules" turned out nearly 800 strong in Lawrence county to investigate the supposed murder of an Arab peddler from Cincinnati. They soon resolved the case into one of pure spitework, in which the victim was an innocent sheep, and the object the desire to cast a suspicion upon one of the natives as would cause him to leave the country. A warning was left publicly posted for the benefit of the conspirators. Down in Greenup they are still working on the mysterious case of the murder of one of their members whose body was found nearly two years ago in a creek with a rope around his neck and unmistakable evidence of violence. They will never leave the trail until something tangible is developed. Here in this county but a few months ago the order sent a representative almost to the Atlantic coast to bring back a man wanted for breaking the law. The man was produced for trial at the time originally appointed. Over in Wayne county, W. Va., two convictions were made at a recent term of court as a result of the order's work.

While the work of the order has been most acceptable, and most of the members are sincere in their intentions at their joining, it has also been made the tool of politics to some extent. Numerous men have become members simply to wield a little political influence over the order, to their personal benefit, or in the interest of their friends. Still, it is steadily growing, and surprisingly so in the towns along the river, where their hold formerly was very insignificant. The peculiar designation, "Mules," comes through the adoption some years ago of the outline of an attenuated mule as the emblem of the order.

Once a year the "Mules" hold a meeting of their grand lodge, and this will be held this year at Greenup, early in the coming month. Last year the meeting was held at Lockwoods, in Lawrence county, and it was estimated that 10,000 people were present during the two days' session. The order is yearly adopting more revised rules, and it will probably eventually emerge into a full-fledged secret society of the old-fashioned order. Though they still turn out en masse and ride over the country in the fashion generally accredited the moonshiners of the south, they are unalterably opposed to violence in any fashion and strictly adhere to the enforcement of the law along the ordinary lines.—Ashland (Ky.) Cor. Louisville Courier-Journal.

THE WHITE HOUSE READY.

Thoroughly Renovated Inside and Out for President's Return.

Washington, Sept. 14.—Although the impression prevails that the president's summer absence from Washington will be extended this year somewhat later than usual, the annual renovation of the white house has recently been hurried to completion, and the mansion is now ready for his occupancy if cold weather or other conditions operate to render a continuance at Buzzard's Bay residence undesirable. The entire structure inside and out has been repainted, all the furniture has been renovated and new carpets have been manufactured for the great East parlor and several of the family rooms. The portraits have been cleaned and varnished and a number of improvements are observable in the conservatories, especial pains having been taken, as is customary every four years, to make the building attractive to a newly elected chief executive.

BATTLESHIP INDIANA.

Presentation to Her of a Silver Service To Occur September 21.

Indianapolis, Sept. 14.—The executive committee of the Indiana battleship fund has completed arrangements for the presentation of the silver service given by the people of the state to the battleship Indiana. The ceremony will take place at Tompkinsville, Staten Island, on September 21. The presentation will be made by Gov. Matthews, chairman of the executive committee, and it is expected that a speech will made by ex-President Harrison, under whose administration the battleship was built, and who named it in honor of the state. The invitations to be present were confined to the members of the general state committee of twenty-five and the governor's staff.

On Him Appears To Depend the Future of the Sultan.

ACUTE DEVELOPMENTS NEAR AT HAND

Berlin Does Not Believe a British Fleet Will Enter the Bosphorus to Enforce England's Protest Against Expelling Armenians.

Berlin, Sept. 14.—The emperor will remain several days at Siegsdorf, where he has gone for the purpose of hunting, and Count Kapnist, the Russian ambassador to Austria, who is the probable successor of Prince Lobanoff-Rostovsky, as Russian minister of foreign affairs, has left Vienna for a sojourn at Biarritz. These facts have been gleaned with a view of gauging the value of the excited rumors which have been flying about the bourses that a political deluge in Turkey is imminent. Beyond question, developments of the most acute nature are near at hand, but they will not be reached to-day, nor are they likely to manifest themselves until the czar finishes his tour and returns to St. Petersburg. Lord Salisbury's so-called independent policy in Turkey, which is doubtless seen in the action of Sir Philip Currie, the British ambassador to Turkey, in presenting to the porte a note protesting against the government's expulsion of Armenians from the Turkish capital without consulting with the representatives of the other powers, is not taken here as implying the appearance of a British fleet in the Bosphorus to enforce the order.

Affected with Homicidal Manis.

Advices received here from Constantinople assert that the sultan is afflicted with a homicidal mania arising from an acute spinal disorder and the statements made in these advices seem, according to the criticisms of the press, to be associated with a maniscal outburst of Turkish fanaticism generally. How to guard against such an outburst is the first question to be placed before the foreign diplomats in Turkey. If the powers agree to place the sultan under tutelage, with the appointments of the Turkish ministers and other officials approved by the ambassadors this action must be accompanied by preparations for armed occupation of Turkey. The Kreuz Zeitung asserts that France and Russia will never assent to the plan of placing the sultan under tutelage and will maintain the integrity of the empire and sovereignty of the Turkish monarch, and declares that these two powers already distrust the concentration of the British fleet at Salonica. The sum of the situation is that these and other proposals dealing with the sultan await the issues of the czar's tour.

German Military Manoeuvres.

The representatives of the press returning from Goerlitz concur in the statement that it was with the utmost difficulty that they were able to get accurate information of the results of the military manoeuvres, but agree that the general results were more favorable to the Saxon than to the Prussian army corps. The emperor upon the evening of every day of the manoeuvres criticized the operations with admitted impartiality. The Prussian infantry, which are renowned for their good marching under heavy weights, maintained their reputation. Both the Prussians and the Saxons carried over sixty pounds, consisting of arms, ammunition, knapsack and part of a tent, per man, yet their rifles were closed up well at the end of every day. For the first time the bicycle riflemen were brought into action, covering the retreat of the Prussian cavalry behind Klein Bautzen. Military experts alone, however, can say whether their work was done effectively. It was generally stated on the field that Gen. Count Waldersee had underrated the marching abilities of the Saxons, who throughout were admirable.

Railroad and Steamboat Agents.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 14.—The excursion party of the association of Railroad and Steamboat Agents of Boston, together with their families, who arrived here Saturday, returned to Boston yesterday afternoon by a special train over the Fitchburg railroad. The excursion was one of a series of yearly outings and was strictly social in its nature. While here the members of the party spent their time in viewing points of interest about the town.

A Bohemian Town Sinking.

Breslau, Sept. 14.—The subsidence of the Bohemian town of Bouex continues. The sinking of the town is due to the falling in of old mines, caused by their having been sapped by underground waters. Two streets, with the houses on both sides thereof, and the railway station have been completely wrecked.

Krupp Dismissed Foreign Workmen.

Berlin, Sept. 14.—Herr Krupp has dismissed all the foreign workmen in his gun-making works at Essen on the ground of his alleged discovery that they have betrayed the secrets of the manufacture of Krupp guns to persons who were interested in other factories.

Insurgent Leaders Shot.

Madrid, Sept. 14.—An official dispatch from Manila states that the chief leaders of the insurrection in Corvite have been captured and shot.

New York State Committee Meeting.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Sept. 14.—Chairman Hinkley announces that the state committee will meet in Buffalo, at the Iroquois house to-morrow evening at 10 o'clock.

Bass fishing is said to be good in stream near Sebring's mill, west of Dunellen.

A regular shoot of the Climax Gun Club will be held on the club's grounds near Benner's Hotel, Wednesday. The shooting will be individual in its nature, and some of the crack shooters of the State will participate.

Plainfield Golfers Lost.

The six-men match game of golf on the links of the Morristown Field Club Saturday afternoon between the Morristown Field Club and the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, of this city, attracted a very large number of enthusiasts, especially among the fair sex. A course of six links was used and the playing was excellent despite the fact that the Plainfield team lost by five holes. It required about two hours to play the game and the full score is as follows:

FIELD CLUB.		HILLSIDE CLUB.
Fellowes	0	West	1
Little	0	Tracy	1
Duyckinck	1	Beebe	0
Whitney	5	Wharton	0
Brinley	0	Walz	3
Sutphen	4	VanBuren	0
	10		5

After the game J. W. Reinhart brought the Plainfield Club home on his brake.

Touched the Political Question.

In the sermon preached by Rev. Dr. Barnes yesterday morning at the First M. E. church several important ideas were advanced. Among other things, the speaker said: "If you tell me what a man believes, you tell me what his life is. We are asking ourselves whether it is right to settle debts as we would like to have them settled. The question is, can a nation exist and depend solely on self? It is not only a question of doing that which is pleasant, but a question of personal integrity. It is the duty of every American citizen to do that which is right."

Cleaning Out a Polluted Stream.

Work was started this morning cleaning out the brook near Coriell's hat factory on Clinton avenue. For a long time this stream, if such it can be called, has been in a most filthy condition. Sheriff Kyte is interested in property in that vicinity and through his efforts the steam is to be cleaned. After this work is completed the Union County Board of Freeholders will place a substantial bridge across the stream at some convenient point. Freeholder Tier made an inspection of the place today with a view of erecting the bridge.

Took a Double Dose of Medicine.

What might have been an untimely death was narrowly escaped this noon, when Mrs. J. P. Laire, of East Fifth street, accidentally took a double dose of medicine. The medicine is very strong and is only intended to be taken in small quantities. Dr. Davis was summoned at once and administered an emetic, which brought relief immediately, and Mrs. Laire is now much better.

Fell in a Fit.

A young colored woman named Lewis, of Arlington avenue, was stricken down with a fit on the walk in front of her home, yesterday afternoon, and for a time her life was despaired of. She was carried into the house and medical aid summoned, but during the day and last evening she was taken at intervals with unconscious spells.

a fire. Just then Dr. Stillman walked in and seeing the position of the shell, thought he would examine it. Being a scientist, the doctor was interested, and to his surprise learned that there was still about two pounds of explosive matter in the shell. It was fortunate that the doctor came in, for the house and occupants might have been blown to atoms.

Mr. Dunham was a Baptist and generally attended the Seventh Day Baptist church. He was also commander of Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R., of this city. He was thoroughly in love with the G. A. R. and all its work and there was nothing that he wouldn't do, if possible, for the order. He was also a brother-in-law of the late George H. Babcock. The funeral services are being held this afternoon at 3 o'clock, and the Post of which he was a member is in charge.

The Harberger—Ditson Marriage.

J. Louis Harberger, son of one of Plainfield's former well known and esteemed citizens, the late John S. Harberger, Esq., was married as by announcement in today's paper to Mrs. Ditson, of Boston, where he has been in business for several years. The marriage took place on the 10th inst. as originally intended, but most quietly owing to the recent death in this city of his niece, Miss Anderson. This bereavement prevented his immediate family attending his marriage in Boston. Mr. Harberger's many friends in Plainfield, will join in wishing him and his bride a long life of wedded happiness.

Hurt by a Kicking Horse.

While Herman Overland, his mother and sister, of Manson place, were driving through Washington Valley yesterday afternoon, the horse began to kick, and very soon the wagon was wrecked and the occupants thrown out. Mrs. Overland was badly bruised and sustained injuries to her spine, while the son and daughter escaped with a few slight bruises. They were taken to their home by friends and Dr. Fritts was called and administered proper treatment. Mrs. Overland will be confined for some time. The horse was caught near this city.

DINNER-GIVING ETIQUETTE.

Points to Be Observed by Both Hostess and Guest.

The dinner is the most important of social ceremonies. It is a function, an observance, a solemnity, the most flattering form of entertainment that can be offered to a guest; and as such it should be duly respected and appreciated. The art of giving dinners that are at once dignified, delightful and distinguished, is a rare one, yet it is possible to achieve it with a mere expenditure of time and pains so well laid out that it is a marvel that such dinners are the exception and not the rule among us. As a rule, the dinner is regarded as an affair of reciprocity, and people who do not give dinners themselves are but seldom asked to dine, except in the case of stray girls or bachelors, asked chiefly to stop a gap. Dinner-giving is about the most costly form of hospitality when it is largely indulged in, and people who cannot give dinners as they should be given had much better not attempt them at all, but confine themselves to less formal entertainments of dances, luncheons, breakfasts and ordinary "At Homes." The dinner is the one social function in which the host plays as important a part as the hostess. His name appears with hers on the invitations, and he dispenses hospitality in the same active measure as herself. But though modern custom has robbed his post of much of its ancient glory in the way of carving heavy dishes and passing wine, he is still the holder of the foot of the table with all the dignity which that position entails.

The length of a dinner invitation varies with the size and importance of the dinner. For a large and ceremonious one two weeks' notice is required, and this notice is sometimes extended to double that time. For small and informal dinners, from five to ten days' notice is sufficient. Printed cards may be used, on which blanks are left for the names of the host, hostess and guests; data, address and hour. These cards are, as a rule, only used when the dinner is one of ceremony. Invitations to small dinners are generally written, and vary in friendliness with the informality of the entertainment. They are written in the third person, if it is a friendly and impromptu matter. In any case, whether the invitation be friendly or formal, it should be answered within 24 hours after it has been received. Dinner-giving is unlike any other species of entertainment in that it is all-important to have a certain number of guests to count upon and to select them with discretion. It is necessary to allow a hostess ample time to invite other guests to fill the places of any who may disappoint her. An invitation to dinner, it has been said, is issued in the joint names of host and hostess, though, of course, the hostess writes the note, if a note conveys it. The answer must be addressed to her, though the host's name is mentioned in accepting or regretting. The invitation may be sent and answered either by post or by the hand of a servant.

Some people are perpetually invited out to dine, not because they give many dinners in return, but because they are recognized as good dinner guests. They are generally provided with plenty of light small talk and the gossip of the day; are pleasant, popular and gifted with that tact which is one of the rarest, as it is one of the most valuable, of possession. There are others who must be asked as a duty, on account of the dinners they themselves give, and who vex the righteous soul of a hostess so often as she has to include their names among the list of her guests. She knows very well that their mere presence will call for a mighty effort to keep the whole dinner from being "a frost," and that they will probably outweigh all her efforts.—Philadelphia Telegram.

MAKES THE MEN VERY WEAK.

A Sample of Domestic Woe That Long-Suffering Husbands Have to Endure.

A good many hundreds, and even thousands, of long-suffering husbands can bear sorrowful testimony to the fact that this is the sort of catechism the wives of their bosoms subject them to every time they put on their hats to go out in the evening:

"Where are you going?"

"Oh, I'm just going out for a few minutes."

"Where?"

"Oh, nowhere in particular."

"What for?"

"Oh, nothing."

"Why do you go, then?"

"Well, I want to go; that's why.'

"Do you have to go?"

"I don't know that I do."

"Why do you go, then?"

"Because."

"Because what?"

"Well, simply because."

"Going to be gone long?"

"No."

"How long?"

"I don't know."

"Anybody going with you?"

"No."

"Well, it's strange that you can't be content to stay at home for a few minutes. Don't you be gone long, will you?"

"No."

"See that you don't."

This is one reason why so many marriages are a dead, flat fizzle and failure.—Chicago Chronicle.

Pineapple Preserves.

Fill with cold water a kettle containing six large, ripe pineapples, and boil them till tender. Drain off the water, and when the fruit is cool pare it, remove the leaves, and cut into slices half an inch thick. Take out the core, leaving a round hole in the center of each slice; weigh the fruit, and to each pound allow a pound of loaf sugar. Cover the bottom of a dish with the sugar, on this place a layer of the pineapple, and so on until the dish is full, finishing with the sugar. Set the dish aside in a cool place for 24 hours; then drain the slices from the sirup, put the sirup in a kettle and boil till the skum ceases to rise, skimming carefully; put in the pineapple and boil for 20 minutes longer.—Good Housekeeping.

We don't want anybody to think of this as a "cheap place." It is nothing of the kind. There isn't anything as thoroughly cheap as cheap hats. We can't afford to sell them. But there is such a thing as selling reliable hats at moderate prices. You'll find that method in operation here. You'll find that all our hats will stand the wear test. INNOCENCE PERSONIFIED

LOUISA GILES NOT GREATLY CONCERNED ABOUT HER POSITION.

She Does Not Seem to Regret Her Youthful Marriage and Giggled Over Much of the Testimony Yesterday.

The abduction, runaway or whatever it was of Louisa Giles has proved a very serious thing for both her and Erneste Luccio, the young Italian who figured so prominently in the case. He now lies in the county jail at Elizabeth, held on a serious charge.

He was brought before Justice Newcorn yesterday afternoon at the city court rooms, and was given a hearing. His lawyer, ex-Judge W. A. Coddington, was present, while Assistant-Prosecutor Frank Dunn, of Elizabeth, represented the State. The first complaint against him was dismissed at the request of the attorney for the State, and he was held on a new complaint, charging him with violating section 80 of the crime act by cohabitation under age.

The courtroom was crowded; every available seat was occupied while quite a number were standing. The prisoner was brought in under the custody of Roundsman Frederickson and wore his common grey suit and dirty red sweater. He was of the usual Italian type with a narrow, receding forehead, but rather good looking. He did not look over eighteen, although he declares that he is twenty-one. Louisa Giles, the fifteen year-old bride of the Italian, appeared in court at about the same time as her lover and was accompanied by her mother, sisters and several other women, presumably relatives. To the interested observers she appeared a girl five feet tall, rather stout, with a round and not bad-looking face. She was a brunette and appeared about seventeen years old. She was neatly dressed in a red plaid waist and black skirt. Her eyes wandered every little while to the face of her young husband, and while not on the witness stand, she sat there munching peanuts in an apparently unconcerned manner. She evidently did not realize the seriousness of the occasion, for on the witness stand she showed a disposition to giggle at some of the questions.

Ex-Judge Coddington made a few remarks at the start, counseling the mother to withdraw the charge against Luccio, as the results of the trial were likely to complete the ruin of her child's character. Assistant-Prosecutor Dunn remarked that the case had gone beyond the call of Mrs. Giles and was now being pushed forward by the State.

The hearing then began and Louisa Giles was the first one called to the witness stand. Although on first entering the courtroom she had wept, she now showed little signs of grief and was only obstinate in her refusal to answer some of the questions.

The examination brought out the fact that she was born on March 29th, 1881. She first met Luccio last Christmas at her own home. On that fateful Monday night, September 7th, she had met him on the railroad bank after returning from the Grocers' excursion to Boynton Beach. She couldn't remember the conversation that took place then, but she went home with him and spent the night there. She remained all Tuesday and Tuesday night. Wednesday, they visited another Italian home across the way to return and spend the night together at Luccio's house. Thursday they went to Westfield where they were married by Justice Harte and returned only to be met by Captain Grant, who took them both before Justice Newcorn.

That finished the questioning of the prosecution and she was handed over to ex-Judge W. A. Coddington for cross-examination, when she said that before her disappearance they had not been engaged. He told her, she said, that he wanted to marry her, but she had never answered him. At his house, he had asked her if she would get married, and she said yes. On Tuesday she had told Erneste that she wanted to go home, and he said she couldn't go. She made no effort, however, to escape, although she seemed to have had plenty of chances. When asked if she had any hard feelings against her lover she said no. Then followed the story of his acquaintance with her, and how it was forbidden, and how they met clandestinely. She also told of the three days she had spent at the Italian shanty, and how very gentle and loving he was towards her.

Dr. Henry H. Lowrie was the the next witness called, and he produced his records which proved without a doubt that that Louise Giles was born on March 29th, 1881. This would make her but 15 years old, while the defence claimed that she was older.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICES.

Last Said Rites Held Over the Remains of the Late Joseph Dunham.

Most impressive was the funeral services of the late Joseph Tucker Dunham, which were held yesterday afternoon at three o'clock from the house, 930 Park avenue. In addition to the large attendance of relatives and friends, there was also present a large delegation from Post 109 and Post 73, G. A. R. The services were conducted by Rev. J. W. Richardson, assisted by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis. Both divines spoke of the departed as a comrade and soldier and as a husband. The many excellent points in his character were mentioned, and a grand lession was illustrated in the words "Be ye Ready." The uncertainty of life was impressively laid on the hearts of all, as each one felt the sudden departure of the decedent.

The comrades of the G. A. R. acted as an escort to the funeral cortege, and the following served as bearers: Captain J. Frank Hubbard, Asa Collier, E. H. Holmes, Elmore D. Moffett, Charles H Randolph and Edward T. Dunn. At the grave, members of Post 109 took part in the service, which closed with a prayer by Rev. J. W. Richardson and the pronouncing of the benediction by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis. The floral tributes consisted of a beautiful pillow from Post 109, bearing the inscription "Our Comrade," and several bunches of choice cut flowers. Interment was in the Seventh Day Baptist cemetery, corner of Ninth street and Arlington avenue.

QUIETLY WEDDED.

Miss Deborah Newman, of Harmony Street, Becomes Mrs. Wadsworth.

The marriage of Miss Deborah Newman, of Harmony street, and Mr. Wadsworth, of Paterson, was celebrated very quietly last evening at the home of Rev. Cornelius Schenck who performed the ceremony. Miss Lizzie Rutledge, of Warren street, acted as bridemaid and Henry Seader, of Harmony street, was best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Wadsworth left for Paterson, where they will reside in the future. They were the recipients of many handsome presents as tokens of esteem.

Interesting Meeting Planned.

A very interesting meeting will be held at the Congregational church tomorrow evening. A. C. La Boyteaux has been asked to repeat his talk on the recent Northfield Conference, which he gave at the Y. M. C. A. men's meeting several weeks ago. A quartette, Miss M. G. Morse, Miss Elfieda A. They were sung for the first time at the Northfield Conference.

Additional Teacher Engaged.

At a special meeting of the North Plainfield Board of Education, held last evening, it was decided to employ an additional teacher for the first grade and primary department. There are now sixty-nine scholars in the High School.

BANKER'S PREDICAMENT

HUSBAND AND WIFE ARRESTED WITHOUT CAUSE.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Lias Put in an Embarrassing Position by the Suspicions of a Westfield Livery Stable Keeper

Think of it, peaceful citizens of Plainfield, of going out for a drive without the slightest intention of doing anything unlawful, and having your little pleasure outing brought to a close by a policeman and a visit to a little stuffy, dirty lockup. Such was the experience of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Lias, of Poughkeepsie. Mr. Lias is a prominent banker of that city, and is in easy circumstances. The policeman was not to blame, however, neither was his superior, as they were but acting according to directions.

Mr. and Mrs. Lias have been staying at Westfield, and yesterday they went to Wm. H. Barton, the well-known liveryman of that place, and hired a horse and buggy to drive to Summit and return. Mr. Lias said they would return by 6 o'clock sure.

Now when 6 o'clock came and his rig came not, Mr. Barton began to worry. His dinner did not taste as good as usual, and visions of horse thieves began to appear in the beefsteak, in the tea, and generally disturb his peace of mind. At last he could stand the excitement no longer, and hurried to the telephone to see if he could learn anything from the neighboring towns regarding his rig.

He called up Plainfield to talk with Chief Grant. The latter was not at his office, but Fred Barker, the night operator at the N. Y. and N. J. Telephone Company's exchange, summoned him with his very convenient police whistle. Chief Grant learned the circumstances and was given a description of the missing ones while Barton begged him to capture them if possible.

Later in the evening two buggies, one with a white horse attached, were seen racing along East Fifth street. The white horse went down through town where Patrolman Vanderweg promptly arrested the driver, as corresponding with the missing outfit from Westfield. Then the two occupants, Mr. and Mrs. Lais, were taken to the lockup, Mrs. Lais being in an almost hysterical state at the disgrace of being arrested and locked up.

Barton was sent for and the couple were taken before Justice Newcorn. He acknowledged that after returning from Summit he should not have gone on to Plainfield without telling Barton, but then, he said, he had followed his wife's advice.

Lais begged that it be so arranged that he could pay a fine instead of going to jail to await the action of the grand jury. Through the good offices of Captain Grant, who did all he could to aid them, and the Justice, Barton was persuaded to change the charge to one of cruelty to animals. Lias pleaded guilty to this, was fined $10 and paid it gladly. They left immediately.

Barton seemed sure that they had tried to steal the rig and the lost supper seemed to aid in that impression. A good breakfast may have changed his opinion this morning.

DR. TALMADGE HERE.

The Noted Divine Has Been a Visitor at His Sister-in-Law's Home.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmadge, who has been visiting his sister-in-law, Mrs. Laura Talmadge, of Central avenue, for a few days, was an important personage at the North avenue station this morning while waiting for a train to take him to Washington. He first made himself known when he gave Chas. Schermerhorn a message to send away. The doctor is very attractive in appearance and manner and is looking much younger than he did a few years ago. While waiting for the train he ascertained his weight on the weighing machine at the station, and the machine registered over 180 pounds. The doctor was greeted by a Daily Press reporter, and to the latter he said he would be in Plainfield again about October 7th.

THE TEMPERANCE CAUSE

REPORTS ON THE PROGRESS OF W. C. T. U. WORK IN THIS CITY.

Reports Show That the Increase in Attendance at Sunday-school Over Last Year is Large — New Superintendents.

The first business to be considered at the afternoon session of the W. C. T. U. annual meeting, held yesterday, was the report of the Executive Committee. It contained the result of the election for superintendent's of the various departments. Those elected are: Evangelistic, Mrs. Ramsey Blair; Sunday-school, Mrs. M. Winter; Parlor meetings, Mrs. M. I. Cooley; Flower mission, Mrs. Thomas Minford; German, Mrs. Jacob Voehl; Purity, Mrs. Powell; Soldier and Sailor, Mrs. M. C. Dobbins; Press Literature, Mrs. Lugar; Franchise and Christian Citizenship, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson; Loyal Temperance Legion, Miss Beekman; Mother's Meetings, Mrs. M. Winter; Scientific Temperance Instruction, Miss E. Niles.

The following vice-presidents were added to those chosen at the morning session: Mount Olive Baptist, Miss Georgia Wilson; Trinity Reformed, Mrs. Dunlap; East Third Street Mission, Miss Florence Dodge. At this time Miss Maire read extracts from letters received from her sister, Miss Rachael Maire, who is now laboring as a missionary in Africa. The letters were of intense interest to those present who know Miss Maire. The reports of the superintendents were then received. All the superintendents were not present, but those who were gave helpful reports. Mrs. Winter, for the Sunday-school department, reported that last year there was 3,316 scholars attending the Sunday-schools in the city and this year there are 4,412. Among them there are 900 scholars pledged to temperance. Mrs. DeForest, for the flower department, presented a report showing that flowers had been taken to the hospital and to the homes of sick persons, and in fact the distribution of flowers generously had caused much happiness. Mrs. From for the literature department, stated that the committee had distributed 6,639 pages of literature during the year, 220 pages of which were temperance and religious. There had also been distributed 400 copies of the Young Crusader.

Fifteen new subcribers had been secured for the Union Signal and five new subscribers for the New Jersey Gazette. The Union Signal, Young Crusader, New Jersey Gazette, Anti-Tobacco Gem has been kept on file at the Public Library, and Y. M. C. A., and the Anti-Tobacco Gem and School Physiology has been on file at the public school library. Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, for the soldier and sailor work, reported that much good had been accomplished in that department.

During the year meetings had been held for the G. A. R. and S. of V., at which time Rev. C. E. Herring, Dr. Lewis and Rev. L. E. Livermore had made excellent addresses. The committee also did much in sending useful articles to the life savers at Sea Bright. Their work was being rewarded and the committee felt encouraged to go forward with renewed zeal and energy.

During the year the Union has held three public meetings which were addressed by Arthur Krom, Miss Elizabeth N. Yates and Miss K. Loundun, and each service was helpful. At this time the delegates to the county convention were elected as follows: Mrs. Stephen Cahoone, Mrs. J. H. French; alternates, Mrs. S. Yerkes, and Mrs. Honeyman. During the afternoon an experienee and praise meeting was held and several experience dollars were received. The last number on the programme was a parliamentary drill which was conducted by the county president, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson. It proved to be remarkably helpful to those who are not so well up in parliamentary matters.

The meeting closed with the singing of a hymn and a prayer by Mrs. Tomlinson.

Democratic Election Officers.

The county board of election met yesterday in the freeholders' room at the court house and completed the appointments for the boards of registry and election. The names submitted by the Democratic committee were passed upon and the board made the appointments. The first day for registry in this city will be on Tuesday, September 29th. The following are the Plainfielders appointed: First ward—Oliver P. Vosseller, Michael DeCourcy, John Angleman, William Gloak; Second ward—Frank Stover, Frank Vosseller, James B. Guttridge, John Reed; Third ward, Joseph Sheppard, Frank McInerny; Fourth ward, Michael R. Flynn, James H. Searing, Timothy McCarthy, Edward McCue.

THE MAINE ELECTION

Republicans Carry the State by About 50,000.

MAJORITY LARGER THAN EXPECTED

Four Democrats Elected to the Legislature---Congressmen Reed, Dingley, Milliken and Boutelle Returned by Large Majorities.

Portland, Me., Sept. 15.—The campaign which ended yesterday was the most active known for years upon both sides. It was a speaking campaign almost entirely and the entire state has been well covered. There were five candidates for the office of governor, who is the only state officer chosen by the people, all others being chosen by the legislature. The name of one of these, William Henry Clifford of Portland, the nominee of the gold democrats, was not upon the official ballot and those voting for him were obliged to write his name upon their ballots. The other candidates were; Hon. Llewellyn Powers of Houlton, republican; Hon. Melville P. Frank of Portland, democrat; Ammi S. Ladd of Calais, prohibitionist, and Luther C. Bateman of Auburn, populist; congressmen, county officers, state senators and representatives to the legislature were elected. The average estimate of the republican plurality for governor was 25,000 to 28,000, as compared with about 38,917 in 1894 and 12,503 in 1892, but the vote throughout the state was larger than anticipated and the majority of Powers, the republican, is larger than predicted, the latest returns indicating that it will reach nearly 50,000. In nearly every county the county officers are republican by much larger pluralities than ever before known and in some counties no candidates were put in the field by the democrats. In all four of the congressional districts the present incumbents were re-elected, with increased pluralities. In the first district Reed's plurality will be something over 10,000 as against 8,185 two years ago, while Congressmen Dingley, Milliken and Boutelle will go back to the next congress with a much larger vote than two years ago. The legislature will contain but few democrats.

Suspicious Circumstances Surrounding the Loss of the Monte Tabor.

Highland Light, Mass., Sept. 15.—Life saving men have been patrolling the beach all morning expecting to find the bodies of some of the other victims of the wrecked Italian bark Monte Tabor. It is considered a suspicious circumstance that both the captain and chief officer of the bark should have committeed suicide. A report is current that a mutiny may have broken out on board and that the wrecking of the vessel was only a natural consequence.

Make Two Cakes

One with Cleveland's baking powder, the second with any other.

Note the difference. The Cleveland cake is fine grained, keeps its natural moisture and flavor; "the other" is coarse grained, as if the sugar were too coarse, soon dries out and becomes husky.

Cleveland's leavens best because its strength is produced by cream of tartar and soda only, not by ammonia or alum.

BUFFALO CONVENTION

No Doubt of the Endorsement of Bryan and Sewall.

CANDIDATES NOT YET DECIDED UPON

Who Will Be Temporary and Permanent Chairman Still a Matter of Conjecture---No Platform Prepared. Arrival of the Delegates.

Buffalo, Sept. 15.—The democratic state convention which will assemble in Music hall at noon to-morrow promises to be unique in the history of democratic conventions of this state. The old time party leaders, Hill, Flower, Croker, Grace, Whitney, Sheehan, Fellows and others, will be absent. Other leaders will take their places. In consequence of the changes which have been made and are making, all is conjecture as the convention programme. No man can say to-day who will be temporary or permanent chairman, who will head a single committee or who will be placed in nomination for any of the offices of governor, lieutenant-governor and judge of the court of appeals. No platform has been written and no one knows who is to write the preliminary draft. That it will unqualifiedly endorse the Chicago platform and Bryan and Sewall is made certain by the action of four-fifths of the districts instructing delegates to take such a course. James W. Ridgway of Brooklyn, who arrived yesterday, was the first candidate here. Instead of opening headquarters and pushing his boom, he had short talks with state committeeman Norman E. Mack of Buffalo and ex-senator Norton Chase of Albany.

Some of the Candidates.

Frederick Cook who has been talked of as a likely candidate for governor refuses to accept the nomination. John B. Stanchfield, of Elmira, who was a leading candidate all summer, announced himself out of the race two weeks ago. John Boyd Thacher, who has been mentioned frequently of late, is not here and has no one here working in his interest. Congressman Sulzer is spoken of for temporary chairman. For Lieutenant-Governor, there is talk of Charles F. McClelland, of Westchester, in case the head of the ticket is taken from the central or western part of the state. Efforts are being made to induce Senator Hill to come to the convention. It was rumored yesterday that Norman E. Mack, Norton Chase and one or two others had united in a telegraph or telephone message urging the senior senator to be present. Mr. Mack said this morning that no such message had yet been sent, but intimated that something may be done this afternoon in case Senator Hill does not put in an appearance. Senator Murphy is reported to be detained at Long Branch by ill health. Ex-Mayor Francis B. Molloy, of Troy, will represent Senator Murphy, who is out for Bryan and Sewall. Mr. Molloy is a candidate for Mr. Hinkley's position as chairman of the state committee.

A Well Attended Convention.

The Tammany delegation will not arrive until this afternoon. It will be quartered at the Genesee. The rooms at the Iroquois, reserved for Senator Hill, William F. Sheehan and James W. Hinkley, are not occupied. The state committee has rooms at the Iroquois. There will be a conference of leaders at the Genesee as soon as John W. Sheehan and other New Yorkers arrive, and a programme may then be arranged. Although there are few politicians here now the convention promises to be well attended. A two days' session is looked for.

SEEN IN A VISION.

A Dream Which Has Much in Common with the Reality.

Alex Gindelsberger, a farmer living near Portsmouth, O., was called from his home at night by unknown men and murdered. The night the crime was committed, says the New York World, his daughter Mary, 13 years old, stayed at the home of William Cook in Portsmouth. The next morning at breakfast she told her strange dream.

She said that it seemed that some one called her father, and that he went outside, where he was murdered. After this she thought that she heard rappings in her room, and on the head of the bed in which she was sleeping. She was so terrified that she covered her head with the bed clothing and went to sleep. She was awakened soon and imagined that a hand touched her and pointed toward where her father was lying dead.

Within an hour after she had finished telling about the dream she received a telegram saying that her father was dead. She afterward learned that he had been killed as she had seen in the vision and at about the same time.

THE GREAT BUSTARD.

It Has Been Extinct in England for More Than Fifty Years.

The great bustard formerly haunted all the level counties of England, and was particularly common on Salisbury plain. From the reign of Henry VIII. repeated measures were passed in order to protect it; and it is expressly included under the head of game in the statute of the first year of the reign of William IV., which codified and reformed the laws relating to game. The close season for bustard shooting was and is from the first of March to the first of September. But the native bustard is now extinct in England. The last was killed at Swaffham in Norfolk, in 1838. Any that have been shot since have been merely casual visitors, probably coming from the plains of Saxony. The causes of the disappearance of the bustard are, firstly, the sport they afforded, for they were hunted with greyhounds as well as shot; secondly, the increase in the amount of cultivated land. This largest of European birds, weighing as much as 30 pounds, could no longer find any sufficient support on the closely cropped plains of England.

AN ANCIENT SCHOOLBOOK.

The "Janua" of Comenius One of the Best Ever Written.

One of the most successful school books ever written is referred to in Evelyn's diary, where he says his dear son Richard, who died in January, 1658, had, before his fifth year, "made a considerable progress in Comenius' Janua." This book, "Janua Linguarum Reserata," was published by John Amos Comenius in 1631.

It was an introduction to the the study of Latin, and Baylé said of it that had Comenius written no other book he would have rendered himself immortal. It was translated into 12 European languages, and was really the gate through which our ancestors of the 17th and 18th centuries entered into Latin literature. "In every European country generations of children thumbed the Janua, and no other book, until they were sufficiently advanced to begin Terence and Plautus;" and for years after its publication the name of Comenius—the Latinized form of Komensky—was familiar in every schoolroom.

Editions of the Janua were printed in Greek and Latin at Oxford so late as 1800; and new additions were issued at Prague, in Latin, German and Czech, in 1674. The chief work of this great school reformer of the 17th century has just been published in English for the first time, under the title of "The Great Didactic of John Ahes Comenius," with biographical and historical introductions by M. W. Keatinge, of Oxford.

Comenius' own title page describes the work as "setting forth the whole art of teaching all things to all men; or, a certain inducement to found such schools in all the parishes, towns, and villages of every Christian kingdom that the entire youth of both sexes, none being excepted, shall quickly, pleasantly, and thoroughly become learned in the sciences, pure in morals, trained to piety, and in this manner instructed in all things necessary for the present and for the future life."

In the preface Comenius says: "Let the chief object of this our didactic be as follows: To seek and to find a method of instruction by which teachers may teach less, but learners may learn more; by which schools may be the scene of less noise, aversion, and useless labor, but of more leisure, enjoyment, and solid progress, and through which the Christian community may have less darkness, perplexity, and dissension, but, on the other hand, more light, orderliness, peace, and rest."

These were high ideals, and the didactic worthily set them forth. But Comenius, as a writer on teaching, was a couple of centuries before his time. In his introduction Mr. Keating says, with perfect truth, that Comenius is "the broadest-minded, the most farseeing, the most practical of all the writers who have put pen on paper on the subject of education;" that his theories have been put in practice in every school that is conducted on rational principles; and that "he embodies the materialistic tendencies of our 'modern side' instructors, while avoiding the narrowness of their reforming zeal." Yet "the Great Didatic" remained in his own day unknown and ineffective.

Comenius was a prolific writer, as is shown by a list of more than 120 separate works, all of which are now forgotten. He became involved in the millenarian movement of the false prophet Drabik, and was not wholly misrepresented by one who described him as "a fanatic, a visionary, and an enthusiast in folio." He died in 1670, a broken and disappointed man, and it is only within the last 50 years that his true merit has been recognized. He was, as his biographer says, "the father of modern education."—London News.

...SETTER PLAY

Senate Passengers Reluctantly Consented to Hand a Cards.

A man can always get what he goes after in the right way. One day, on the Union Pacific overland train, a little episode occurred which proved this plainly.

A big fellow who had, as we afterwards learned, come down from the Oregon horse country, and who was on his way home, wearied, worn, and almost delirious with the tedium of the travel through the party, bare buttes of Wyoming, rose from his seat at the far end of the Pullman, and awkwardly working his way up the car, stopped at the elbow of the first man along the aisle. This was an ecclesiastical looking personage, and the rough-looking fellow bellowed at him:

"Podner, will you play a game of sixty-six?"

The other smiled and murmured a declination, whereupon, with a disappointed look the horseman addressed the next male passenger with the request that he play sixty-six. Another refusal, and a further showing of chagrin, were followed by application to a third and fourth and a fifth man; the whole car had been canvassed. At the last negative answer the big fellow turned and looked down the aisle despairingly. Then, steadying himself by the backs of two seats, he roared:

"Gents, this here's a calamity. I s'pose p'raps I look like a pickpocket or sumthin' an' ye're all afeared o' playin' with me. I ain't. I'm a deacon in the Hokolope church an' mayor o' Hokoloe. Only trouble with me is that when I'm disap'nted I has epileptic fits an' I shoots an' cuts an' bites an' gouges dreadful to see, an' humiliatin' besides. I don't have them fits only when I ain't humored, an' a game o' sixty-six always drives away the inclination. But none o' you wants to play sixty-six, an' so they's nothin' to do but have my fit. I think the best plan will be for the ladies to git into another car, an' fer the gents to crawl under seats, fer I do provokin' things when I can't git no one to play sixty-six an' has to have a fit. Git read—"

"Hold on! Hey! Stop it!" shrieked the ecclesiastical personage. "I have been wishing to play sixty-six for three weeks and woefully misunderstood you when you asked me."

And for eight hours thereafter the rest of the men stood in line waiting to relieve one another at the card table so as to be sure that the game of sixty-six should not be interrupted long enough for the shooting and biting inclinations of the epileptic to get worked up.—Chicago Record.

WANTED A SECOND WIFE.

On the Eve of a Proposal His First Wife Interfered.

Squire Bray, of Caswell, a little town in North Carolina, was hunting another wife. His first marriage had been a happy one, dissolved by the death of his beloved helpmeet.

The 'squire had a son named Bob. Bob was a wild blade and proposed to knock his father out of a second union. In the capacious breast pocket of the 'squire's great coat reposed a pint tickler, well filled, that he proposed using on his way back from seeing the Widow Brown.

Now, just before he started Bob slipped the tickler out and put in its place a small alarm clock, carefully wound and set for 11 p. m.

The 'squire had sat the fire out and was well on with his overcoat, holding the widow's hand at the door and putting in his sweetest words at the last.

"Yes, your first husband, my dear, was one of my best friends, and we'll visit his and my lost Hannah's graves, won't we, love?"

"Ah, yes, for where was there a sweeter woman than your poor Hannah?" asked the widow.

"A good woman; she was good enough, but there's a living one just as sweet," said the 'squire, and he was drawing her to him for a kiss when whizz-wizz, wizzzr-bizzer-ting-whir-r-r-ring! bang the clock went off inside of him.

"Oh, Lawd!" screamed the widow; "he's shooting to pieces. It's Hannah's ole peanny a-playin' inside of him!"

"She said she'd haunt me! She allers told me so!" cried the squire, running in a stoop for his horse, with both hands pressed to his breast and the clock still striking, ting, ting. He rode like old Nick was after him and never knew the racket till he felt for his tickler and ripped out the little clock that Bob had bought at auction. Then he laughed till the tears ran down his cheeks, but he promised Bob never to spark another woman if he'd only keep the joke from the neighbors.

The widow believes to this day that old man Bray is a walking volcano and that his dead wife would set the battery a-going if ever he went near a woman again to make love to her.—St. Louis Republic.

Bisque of Clams.

Mince two dozen hard-shell clams very fine. Fry half a minced onion in an ounce of butter; add to it a pint of hot water, a pinch of mace, four cloves, one allspice and six whole pepper corns. Boil 15 minutes and strain into a saucepan; add the chopped clams and a pint of clam juice or hot water; simmer slowly two hours, strain and rub the pulp through a sieve into the liquid. Return it to the saucepan and keep it lukewarm. Boil three half pints of milk in a saucepan (previously wet with cold water, which prevents burning) and whisk it into the soup. Dissolve a teaspoonful of flour in cold milk; add it to the soup; taste for seasoning; heat it gently to near boiling point; pour it into a tureen previously heated with hot water, and serve with or without pieces of fried bread—called croutons in kitchen French.—N. Y. Mercury.

LYMAN ASTOUNDED.

President of the Irish Alliance Did Not Known Tynan Was in Europe.

New York, Sept. 15.—William Lyman, the president of the Irish National Alliance, in an interview informed a reporter of the United Associated Presses that the news of the arrest of Tynan at Boulogne came to him like a thunder clap out of the clear sky. "It seems not more than two weeks," he added, "since I saw and talked with Tynan in this city, but it may have been longer. I cabled to a friend in Paris to see that Tynan was properly represented and that his extradition to England was prevented, if possible. I do not believe that Tynan went to Europe on any business connected with the cause. My explanation of his visit to Europe is that he went to Europe on the business of settling up the estate of a brother who died recently in South America, and the large sum of money found on him may have been a portion of his heritage. The man Bell, who was arrested in Glasgow, I do not know, and the suggestion that he was Tynan's secretary is ridiculous. I know F. J. Kearney of New York well, but I had no idea that he was in Rotterdam, as I talked with him in this city but a few days ago. He may have gone to Europe since, but I do not think he went on business connected with the cause. I do not know the man naimed Haines, arrested with Kearney. If they really have Tynan and Kearney in custody, nothing will be spared to secure their release."

WILL PAY ALL DEBTS.

Coffin, Altemus & Co.'s Assets Will More Than Cover the Liabilities.

Philadelphia, Sept. 15.—Inability to secure loans through the ordinary channels and large holdings of unproductive real estate are the reasons given by the members of the firm of Coffin, Altemus & Co., the oldest dry-goods house in this city, which failed yesterday. The firm's acceptances are, it is said, held mostly by banks in Philadelphia, New York and Boston. It is believed that the assets will much more than cover the liabilities. All debts will be paid up in full. Should the large patrons of the firm continue with them the business will be carried on as usual.

SAVED FOURTEEN LIVES.

Crews of Two Sinking Vessels Picked Up by the Steamer Hestia.

Baltimore, Sept. 15.—The Donaldson line steamer Hestia, Capt. Scott, which has arrived here from Glasgow, saved the crews of two vessels within one hour, and brought here fourteen men who had been rescued. The first wreck discovered proved to be the brigantine Hattie Louise, dismasted and laboring in a heavy sea. Six negro sailors, from St. Andrew's island, West Indies, were taken off with difficulty. Then the wreck of the British brigantine Margaret E. Dean of Parrsboro, N. S., was sighted, and Capt. Dowling and seven of her crew were taken from her.

Rosebery and Asquith Warned.

London, Sept. 15.—The Times, in an editorial discussing the utterances of Lord Rosebery and Henry Asquith on the Armenian question, says: "Lord Rosebery and Mr. Asquith have assumed a very grave responsibility. It is easy to conjure a whirlwind of national wrath, but it would baffle the strongest will and most sagacious judgment to direct the storm when it is raised. Are the agitators prepared to face a European war? If not, let them pause while there is yet time."

American Citizens Released.

Washington, Sept. 15.—Consul Barker has telegraphed the state department from Sagua la Grande, Cuba, that W. A. and L. Glean, two brothers, American citizens, from Massachusetts, have been released from arrest. They were arrested April 12 last on the charge of giving shelter to an insurgent in their house. They were not given a regular trial, and the state department undertook to secure their release with result as shown above, after four months of continuous effort.

Passed a Burning Vessel.

New York, Sept. 15.—Capt. Clark of the steamer Nomadic, here from Liverpool, reports having passed a small wooden vessel on fire, burnt to the water's edge and abandoned. He said that the vessel was apparently of about 300 tons and loaded with case oil. At the office of the Standard Oil company in this city it is the general opinion that the vessel is the State of Maine, which left here on September 4, with 56,000 cases of oil for Shanghai.

Administration of the Congo State.

London, Sept. 15.—The Brussels correspondent of the Times says that Leopold, king of the Belgians, has sent an autograph letter to Emperor William defending the administration of the Congo State against the attacks of the German press. King Leopold expresses the determination to pursue a civilizing mission in Africa in spite of all obstacles.

Transfers of Currency.

New York, Sept. 15.—Telegraphic transfers of currency to New Orleans through the New York sub-treasury were $200,000, of which $100,000 were against deposits of gold. Transfers to other points were $100,000, making the total of transfers $300,000.

THE TURK IS DOOMED

Abdul Hamid's Lease of Power Drawing to an End.

PARTITION OF THE EMPIRE IMMINENT

Belief Among Constantinople's Foreign Population That the Supreme Crisis Is at Hand---No Doubt That Armenian Massacres Were Planned.

Constantinople, Sept. 15.—Although there is a lull at present in the political situation here, many well informed foreigners, some of them in official station, believe that it is simply the calm before the storm; that the sultan is doomed to enforced abdication, and that his lease of power has but a little time longer to run. It is believed that the czar's approaching visit to Queen Victoria at Balmoral will result in sealing the fate of Abdul Hamid. As to his successor, if successor there is to be and the empire is not dismembered at once, no one cares to make a prediction. In fact, so great is the fear of the Turk, that very few dare even to hint at their belief in his coming downfall. Nevertheless, it is noticeable that there is increased anxiety here to-day among the foreign portion of the population, owing to apparently well-grounded fears that the supreme crisis is at hand. According to the palace officials, the audience which Sir Philip Currie, the British ambassador, had with the sultan Friday resulted in convincing the latter that the feeling against him in Great Britain is much more intense than he or his advisers have realized, and it was intimated to him that Great Britain, in certain eventualities, might be compelled to take action independent of other powers in preventing further disturbances here.

Massacres Officially Planned.

The joint commission of Europeans and Turks, appointed to inquire into the recent massacres and their origin, has been turned into a mere figure-head court of inquiry by the fact that most of the Armenians who could furnish the necessary evidence to place the blame where it properly belongs have been killed, imprisoned or banished, thus leaving the members of the commission little else to work upon than the Turkish police officials, whose testimony amounts to nothing at all. But the work of the commission has been forestalled by the embassies, where all the evidence necessary to prove conclusively that the massacres were officially planned and authorized from the palace has been collected and submitted to the governments of the powers.

Armenian Refugees Guarded.

The British vessels carrying Armenian refugees are guarded by the British warship Dryad while in these waters, in order to prevent the arrest of their passengers by the Tutkish authorities, it having become known that their arrest has been ordered by the porte. Any such attempt, however, will be resisted by the Dryad, her commander having received explicit instructions on the subject from the British amadasador. The refusal of the Roumanian authorities to permit Armenian refugees to land in Roumania has created a bad impression in European circles, and may lead to serious consequences.

To Depose the Sultan.

The Cephalonia's Exciting Voyage.

Queenstown, Sept. 15.—The Cunard line steamer Cephalonia, from Boston, reports that a child died from convulsions on the passage and was buried at sea. A steerage passenger named Patrick Callaghan committed suicide by jumping overboard, and another steerage passenger became crazy.

Put His Money in a Stove.

Niles, Mich., Sept. 15.—Because Peter Warner, a farmer living near Edwardsburg, had lost confidence in banks, he placed $12,000, which he had received for some real estate, in a stove. His wife the same day built a fire, and the roll of bills was entirely consumed.

Grass seed has been sown about the Elizabeth railroad station—Contractor and Gazette.

No grass seed need be sown about the Plainfield station, as many busy feet would trample it out in short order.

Maine and Vermont are the straws that show how the Eastern States are going. The New York Journal, the leading silver paper in the East, admits that Bryan stands a poor show east of the Wabash or north of the Mason and Dixey line.

The Republican Congressional Convention for the Eighth District, comprising Elizabeth, Plainfield, Orange and Bayonne, and all the townships of Essex, except East Orange, will be held October 1st, in the Veteran Zouave Armory, on Broad street, in Elizabeth. The call for the convention was issued by the committee yesterday.

Lack of facilities for accommodating children who are anxious and need to be entered into the public schools is a condition which many cities are grappling with. In New York alone, yesterday, 30,000 children were turned away from the public schools because there was not room for them and the same story—modified in the number—is told in nearly every large city in the country. Plainfield has not been free from this condition to some extent, though her fault was more of overcrowding than turning away. But the new Lincoln School, when finished, will largely eliminate this discouraging and retrogative element in public instruction, and provide sufficient accommodation for the young seeking knowledge.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation, can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

SHAKERS AND DOCTORS TALK TOGETHER.

In his able work entitled "Longevity," published a few years ago, Dr. John Gardiner, of England, predicts that a vegetable agent will yet be found that shall so retard those changes that bring about old age as to prolong human life much beyond its present limit.

Acting, perhaps, upon the impulse produced by this thought, many eminent physicians have called from time to time upon the Shakers of Mt. Lebanon to inquire of them concerning the secrets of medicinal plants, in which these sincere, simple minded and God-fearing people are known to be wise and skillful beyond all other men.

The Shakers willingly told what they had learned, and in return received from their visitors much valuable information about disease; which they at once made practical use of. The most important point was that if a genuine and certain remedy could be found for indigestion and dyspepsia, and the ailments growing out of it, a long step would be taken in the right direction. Old age, said these physicians, begins in a failure of the digestion, and so do most diseases at any and all periods of life. The result of these consultations was the discovery by the Shakers of the desired specific, made wholly from herbs, and now known as the Shaker Digestive Cordial. Its action is magical and worthy of its origin.

Where there is distriss after eating, heartburn, sick headache, bad taste in the mouth, billiousness, weakness and weariness, cold hands and feet, aversion to food, nervousness, or any other symptom of dyspepsia, the Cordial will prove its curative virtues. Behind it is the reputation of a people who have never defrauded or deceived their fellow men.

In order to test whether this remedy is adapted to your case, at practically no cost, you may procure a trial bottle for ten cents of almost any druggist.

INNOCENCE PERSONIFIED

This was a very important point, as the age of conset is, by statute, sixteen years.

Sergeant Kiely was the only other witness called, and he had not much to tell. He told of a secret meeting of the young people, how Luccio had told the Sergeant that they were engaged, and how he had ordered the young Italian to keep away from the girl, knowing of the parents objection to him.

Ex Judge Coddington moved to dismiss the complaint, which was not granted, and then Mr. Coddington stated that the defence had no testimony to offer at present. Justice Newcorn then committed Luccio to the county jail without bail. The latter will be fixed by the county court.

THEATRICAL.

The society event of the season will be the presentation of "Rob Roy" at Music Hall next Monday evening. This opera was one of the most popular pieces ever put on in New York. It comes here with a cast of seventy-eight people. It deserves and probably will have a big house.

On Saturday evening, September 19th, Gus Hill's "Vanity Fair" will be the attraction at Music Hall. It is a veritable sysposium of beauty and talent, illumined with the most wonderful electrical effects and set off with the most magnificently painted scenery—that is "Vanity Fair." To begin with there is a burletta, the opening scene of which is a yacht club reception in New York, at which the guests are entertained by the choicest talent which can be obtained. In the succeeding olio there is a bewildering galaxy of artists, who are followed by a spectacular comedy called, "Jay New York, or Fun at Coney Island." The opening scene of which discloses the interior of the swellest barber shop in the world. In the next scene is disclosed a rare picture of Coney Island by day, with the four original tamale girls and the famous Coney Island elephant, which is as full of tricks as ever. The artists are: Richard Mullen, King of Fun Makers; Lettie LeVyne, the Australian Beauty; Deltselli and Clissando, England's Famous Musical Artists; Mlle. Valesca, the Idol of Paris, French Commedienne, the Premier of Them All; Bessie Stanton, the Acknowledged Handsomest Woman in the World, Winner of the "New York World" Prize, also the First and Original Bronze Statue; Hanley and Jarvis, Two Eccetnrique Singing and Dancing Comedians; Mullen and Dunn, the Comedy Duo; Sisters Weston, in Acrobatic Songs and Dances; Emma Carns, the Handsome Baritone Singer, known as the "Young Melba;" Fred J. Huber, Prince of Fun Makers; Lena LaCouvier, the Refined Vital Spark; Margie Tebeau, the Original Lady Mimic; and the Three Empresses of Serio Comic and Burlesque, Sadie Raymond, Lizzie Weston and Marie DeWolf.

Benjamin Newell, of Brooklyn, is a guest of John V. Beekman, of West Eighth street.

Miss Mamie Lyon, of Orchard place, arrived home on Saturday from a four-weeks visit with relatives and friends in Newark.

Mrs. Grace Farson, daughter of Gen. James S. Negley, of West Seventh street, returned to her Philadelphia home on Saturday after summering here.

Mrs. J. A. Bunting, who has been spending the summer at Avon-by-the-Sea, will close her cottage at that place and return to her home on Mercer avenue tomorrow.

Stephen Rushmore, son of Dr. and Mrs. Rushmore, of Park avenue, after an all-summer vacation at home with his parents, left yesterday to resume his studies at Amherst College.

The marriage of Miss Martin, of Raritan, and Henry Seader, of Harmony street, North Plainfield, will take place Wednesday evening at the home of Rev. Cornelius Schenck.

Miss A. A. Conkling, of Hawley, Pa., has returned to her home, as her niece, Miss Katie Cortright, of East Sixth street, has been pronounced out of danger by her physician, Dr. Davis.

Miss Frances Phillips, daughter of H. R. Phillips, of Rockview terrace, is slowly recovering from the effects of a sprained back, which is the result of a recent fall down stairs. Miss Phillips is still confined to her room, and will be unable to leave it for many weeks.

Mrs. Abel Ketcham, of Kensington avenue, the aged mother of Mrs. Evan Jones, is lying dangerously ill at her home, suffering from an aggravated attack of asthma. Dr. Probasco is the attending physician and he is doing all in his power to alleviate the patient's suffering.

John Ward Stimson, the founder of the Artist Artisan Institute in New York, who has spent the last year in the Adirondacks, has so far improved in health that during the coming winter he will deliver a course of lectures before the classes of the institute on Twenty-third street.
